MEMPHIS ONLY CITY TO GIVE ATLANTA A RACE FOR CONVENTION

Bluff City Will Make Determined Fight for 1914 Conclave of Nobles of Mystic Shrine

YAARAB TEMPLE HAS HALF OF THE VOTING STRENGTH

Atlanta Shriners Had to Stop at Vicksburg, Miss. – They "Wouldn't Let 'Em Over the River"

BY RAYMUND DANIEL,
Journal Staff Correspondent.

On Board the "Yaarab" Special.

VICKSBURG, Miss., May 10.—Every indication now points to Atlanta securing the 1914 conclave of the imperial council of the nobles of the Mystic Shrine. It developed Saturday that the Yaarab temple of Atlanta has what seems to be positive assurances of one-half of the voting strength of the imperial council. Atlanta will be chosen at Dallas next Wednesday or Thursday, when the selection of a convention city is made.

Memphis will make a hard and determined fight and there, of course, is a probability that the Tennessee city may win.

The Atlanta Shriners, however, are much encouraged and will carry their fight to the convention floor if Memphis should win the decision in the committee.

"ALL FOR YOU!"

The fact that Atlanta is fighting for the big conclave has traveled far ahead of the "Yaarab" special. At Meridian, Jackson and Vicksburg the local shriners wore placards in their hats of "Atlanta, 1914." "We are all for you!" were the cries of every town where Shrine special stopped.

Round after round of entertainment has met the "Yaarab" Special.

Vicksburg greeted the nobles with the same cordial enthusiasm that Meridian gave.

The nobles from Atlanta were guests at a luncheon at Vicksburg, which, with the Meridian breakfast, caused Atlanta Shriners to wonder if they would be able to withstand all the hospitality that is ahead.

The invitation from Jackson for a long stopover had to be declined on account of schedule connections, but a large crowd was at the station to cheer the nobles.

THEY HAD TO STOP.

The Shriners were compelled to stop at Vicksburg. A telegram was received at Vicksburg signed by the Vicksburg Shriners, in which read: "Have arranged to entertain Atlanta Shriners this afternoon. See Potentate Adair and insist that he arrange to stop at least one

YOUNG QUITS CONGRESS IN FAVOR OF A MOOSE

Republican From Michigan Says Votes Intended for Opponent Thrown Out of Count

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Representative H. Olin Young, Republican, of Ishpeming, Mich., announced in a speech in the house today his intention of resigning his seat. He discussed the contest instituted by William J. McDonald, a Progressive, saying 458 votes intended for McDonald had not been counted for his opponent, and he did not feel justified in holding his seat.

The state board of canvassers issued a certificate to Mr. Young declaring he had received an apparent majority of 231, after 458 ballots, cast by mistake for "Sheldon William J. McDonald," had been thrown out. Mr. Young declared the 458 electors intended to vote for McDonald and that he did not feel justified in holding the seat.

Mr. Young discussed at length the legal questions involved in the canvass of the vote, saying the board of canvassers, in throwing out 458 votes cast, and the state courts, in upholding the decision, had acted in strict accordance with the Michigan election laws. He said he had delayed taking action to await a full investigation of the case.

"I am now convinced," he said, "that if the 458 votes in dispute were counted for the contestant, the verdict would not be in my favor. I am convinced that those 458 electors intended to vote for William J. McDonald, and, while, under the law, he is not entitled to those votes, I do not care to hold a seat that may be questioned by honorable and disinterested men. I therefore have prepared my resignation and will forward it to the secretary of state of Michigan and will file a copy with the speaker of the house."

In a husky voice Mr. Young reviewed his associations during his ten-year services in the house and expressed his regret at leaving.

Progressive Leader Murdock and Representative Hinebaugh, of Illinois, a Progressive, replied to Mr. Young and argued in favor of giving Mr. McDonald the seat. In the discussion several members declared Mr. Young's resignation would in no way affect the right of Mr. McDonald to prosecute his contest.

MAYOR OF SOPERTON AND THREE OTHERS HELD FOR MURDER

$4,000 BOND IS MADE BY ALL FOUR PRISONERS

They Were Indicted Following Killing of Will Radney, Refugee From Justice – Claim Killing Was Accidental

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

SOPERTON, Ga., May 10.—The grand jury of Montgomery county yesterday returned true bills charging murder against Lamare Holmes, mayor of Soperton; T. D. Wade, chief of police; J. Wyatt Martin, a wealthy planter of this county, and Lee D. Keen, a traveling salesman of this city.

The indictments followed the recommendation of the coroner's jury that the four be held pending an investigation of the death of Will L. Radney, who was shot near here Tuesday night after escaping from the city jail.

The prisoners were taken to the county jail at Mount Vernon and all gave bond this afternoon in the amount of $4,000 each, assessed by Judge E. D. Graham. Although the superior court is in session there reports from Mount Vernon this afternoon stated that the cases will not be tried before the August term of court.

The shooting of Radney followed his escape from the Soperton jail Tuesday night. Radney had been bound over by a justice court for the burglary of the meat market of J. A. Chivers and in default of bond was being held in the Soperton jail, awaiting the arrival of the sheriff who was to take him to the county jail at Mount Vernon. Radney made his getaway while the chief of police was giving him supper.

Mayor Holmes, who had signed Radney's bond for $1,200 in another case, it is alleged, organized a posse consisting of himself, the chief of police, Martin and Keen.

The evidence given at the coroner's inquest was that the party of four secreted their selves on the side of the road leading to the home of Radney's brother, about five miles from here, expecting that Radney would go immediately to his brother's place.

After an all-night wait, it is said, Radney appeared in a buggy with Charles F. Glover. Chief of Police Wade, it is said, stepped from the bushes and ordered Radney to halt. Radney jumped from the buggy and made for the woods, it is said, and the chief fired into the air to frighten him. Martin the, fired, in another direction from that in which Radney was going, he claims. As Radney clambered over a rail fence he was killed instantly by a load of buckshot from the gun of L. D. Keen.

Keen made the claim that the shooting was accidental. He was lying on the ground until Radney was seen, he said, and sprang up to follow him. He stumbled against a log, he says, and his gun was accidentally discharged, killing the fleeing man.

All of the parties involved are well known in this section. Radney had operated a farm for Mayor Holmes for the past several years, and had been regarded as a substantial citizen until his recent arrest. He leaves a wife, a brother and several small children.

City Marshal Fuller Saved from Drowning In the Chattahoochee

James M. Fuller, city marshal of Atlanta, and J. L. Ward, better known as "Hap" Ward, barely escaped drowning in the Chattahoochee river yesterday afternoon when a boat in which they were fishing capsized.

W. T. Daniels and Paul S. Pause, nearby in another boat, rowed quickly to the rescue and dragged them up from the water, which is several times deeper than a man's height where they fell in.

Mr. Ward, his friends say, was wearing a brand-new $60 suit of clothes, but being one of his own make, it will stand the ordeal without a pucker, he claims. He is a member of the firm of Ward-Fuller, haberdashers and tailors.

The other gentlemen in the party were Mr. Richards, of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical company, and Heard W. Dent, former councilman from the Seventh ward.

All arrived safely back to town, though, Messrs. Fuller and Ward were chilled to the bone and somewhat uncomfortable in their wet clothing.

Incidentally, they caught no fish. Mr. Pause had bought about a quarter's worth from a negro boy, but he lost them in the scramble to save his drowning friends.

PRESBYTERIANS FROM ALL OVER AMERICA TO MEET HERE THIS WEEK

Nearly Three Million Church Members Will Be Represented in Gigantic Assemblage to Hold Sessions in Atlanta

MEETINGS OPEN THURSDAY; WILL CONTINUE TEN DAYS

Many Prominent Speakers on the Program–Commissioners From Every State–Assemblies of World-Wide Interest

The greatest Presbyterian gathering that the world has ever seen will be held in Atlanta from May 15, next Thursday, until May 25.

Fifteen hundred commissioners, representing an aggregate of nearly three million church members will meet here in an assemblage of world-wide interest, and, in addition, it is expected there will be fully 2,000 visitors.

Four of the world's greatest Presbyterian bodies—the northern, southern and United Presbyterian assemblies and that of the Associated Reformed churches—will meet at the same time, and on at least one occasion all will be united in one great assembly.

The advance guard will begin to arrive Wednesday, when several special trains from all sections of the country will reach Atlanta. The entertainment and reception committees are busy completing arrangements for the great meetings. The office of the Atlanta executive committee is located at 513 Empire building.

ORIGIN OF ATLANTA MEETING.

The idea of the four great bodies meeting in Atlanta at the same time was first suggested in the first issue of the Westminster magazine in January, 1912.

The Westminster Magazine suggested editorially that Atlanta was the logical place for such a great meeting, and that, despite the argument of skeptics, it was possible to arrange just such an assemblage. The suggestions made in the Westminster Magazine's editorial are being carried out to the letter.

Each of the four great bodies of the Presbyterian church was invited to come to Atlanta and each accepted. The result will be probably the greatest religious gathering that has ever been held in the United States.

ORGANIC UNION NOT PLANNED.

While the four great bodies will naturally be brought closer together by meeting simultaneously, it is said there will be no attempt at organic union. Presbyterians say it means just one thing—"A Pan-Presbyterian Pentecost."

Commissioners—they insist that you do not call them "delegates"—will come from probably every state in the union.

GOT LUMBERMAN'S MONEY THEN POLICE GOT HIM

James Brannon Had Bought New Clothes and Was on the Train When Cops Arrived

Pink Brooks, a lumber dealer of Neal, Ga., came to Atlanta yesterday to make some collections, and after a hard day's work found himself with about $200 in his pocket.

He met Thomas A. Sykes, twenty-eight years old, of Charlotte, N. C., and James Brannon, forty-years-old, and employed them to work at his sawmill, By way of being hospitable, he took them to a beer saloon on South Forsyth street and bought several rounds of drinks. Meanwhile, he had been to the Terminal station and bought tickets for them to Neal.

Finally it came time to bid farewell to the bar and catch the train, but as they were leaving, Brooks missed his money. He called for the police. Detectives Hamby and Vickery arrived and found Sykes on hand and Brannon missing.

Though Sykes protested innocence, they took him to police station. They took Brooks and went out to look for Brannon. They found him, and he had been making some progress with liquid refreshments.

He was seated in a West Point train, with a ticket to Waycross in his pocket. He wore a brand new suit of clothes, which he had just bought, and he was shaved and hair-trimmed and massaged. In his pocket reposed the remainder of the cash, $155.

Seeing it was all up, Brannon admitted his guilt, it is said, and Sykes was released.

HUGHES URGES STANLEY FOR DUBLIN OFFICE

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The Dublin postoffice was the subject of a conference this afternoon between Congressman Dudley M. Hughes, of the Twelfth district, and Postmaster General Burleson. Mr. Hughes has recommended the nomination of Vivian Stanley, editor of the Dublin Courier-Dispatch.

Protests against Mr. Stanley's appointment have been filed with the postmaster general, and Mr. Hughes sought an interview this afternoon to clear up the matter, if possible. He left the postoffice department in doubt as to whether his recommendation will be followed.

The opposition to Mr. Stanley grows out of his activity in the presidential primary in Georgia. He was a vigorous supporter of Congressman Oscar W. Underwood, and some of the Wilson leaders in Laurens county are reported to have filed protests against the recognition by the administration of one of the pre-convention foes.

Congressman Hughes declared tonight that in recommending Mr. Stanley he had disregarded his past political affiliations and activities, and had been guided solely by the fact that Mr. Stanley loyally supported Wilson and Marshall after the nomination, and was acceptable to the patrons of the Dublin postoffice.

"I have no second choice for the Dublin postoffice," declared Mr. Hughes. "I will accept no compromise candidate. I will win or lose with Stanley. The postmaster general told me today that his mind was still open about the matter. He did not indicate when he would make his decision."

The situation at Dublin promises to prove as interesting as was the situation at Gainesville, for which office the president has nominated Mrs. H. W. J. Ham, notwithstanding the fact that Congressman Bell recommended Albert S. Hardy for the office. Mr. Bell's statement concerning the Gainesville office is ready, but he does not intend to publish it at this time. He stated tonight that it was "bristling, red hot, a warm number," but declined to discuss its contents.

Secretary of State and President Discuss Details of Protest of Jap Ambassador, Bryan to Frame Reply

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Secretary Bryan tonight formulated a message to Governor Johnson, of California, setting forth representations of the Japanese government and views of the administration here as to what was considered discriminatory in the Webb anti-alien bill, passed by the California legislature and now awaiting action by the governor.

Mr. Bryan conferred with President Wilson an hour discussing in detail the formal protest filed by Ambassador Chinda. It was decided the secretary should frame a communication to Governor Johnson but the nature of it was not disclosed. Mr. Bryan said the message would not be sent tonight. It probably will confer with the president tomorrow before dispatching it.

Mr. Bryan communicated with the Japanese ambassador immediately after

WILSON IS MASTER OF DEMOCRATIC POLITICS

President Holds Controlling Hand in Party Organization and Demonstrates It

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 10. — That President Wilson is the complete master of the situation in the Democratic party, in fact and action as well as name, has been demonstrated through his successful effort to defer the organization of the new Democratic congressional campaign committee.

The remnants of the Champ Clark pre-convention machine sought to organize the new committee last night, but the president succeeded in delaying action.

The president's only purpose in playing for delay is to allow more time for working out his plan of bringing the congressional and the national committees into closer working relations and also to make the congressional committee more representative on the senate side, inasmuch as there is now a popular election of senators.

It can be stated authoritatively that the president is not opposed to the election of Representative Johnson, of Kentucky, as chairman, although he is not committed to him. The Clark people tried to make it appear that the president wanted the organization delayed because he did not want Johnson and they tried to force his hand by getting out the petition for last night's meeting.

How well the Clark people succeeded in forcing the president's hand may be inferred from the fact that the instrument that the president used in obtaining the delay last night was Representative Johnson himself. Mr. Johnson made the motion to defer the election. He was prompted to make the motion by Representative Murray, of Massachusetts.

DETECTIVE S. P. WEBB SHOT THROUGH CHEEK

Officers Raid Crap Game in Rear of 56 Alexander and Shots Are Exchanged

While assisting in a raid upon a negro crap game, which was in progress in a barn in the rear of 56 Alexander street, about 1 o'clock Sunday morning, City Detective S. P. Webb was shot through the left jaw and painfully injured.

He was hurried to the Grady hospital, where his wound was dressed, and although suffering a loss of considerable blood and much pain, he was able to be taken home after the physicians had given him attention.

Detective Webb, with Detectives George Harper, Charles M. Hamby and Lester Vickery and Patrolman G. N. Gorman, surrounded the barn in which the crap game was being played. When the officers demanded admittance one of the negroes on the inside fired through a window. Detective Webb was directly in line of the bullet which lodged in his jaw.

After being wounded Detective Webb exchanged several shots through the window with the negro on the inside of the house, and it is believed one of them took effect, Detective Harper assisted Detective Webb to the Peachtree Inn and called for a Grady ambulance.

SIX ARE ARRESTED.

The remaining officers rushed the barn, breaking down the door. They placed six negroes under arrest and sent them to police headquarters where they gave their names as follows: Charlie Logan, Henry Kennedy, Ralph Green, Henry Taylor, Enlies Jones and Arthur Slack.

One negro, Andy Lester, made his escape, running across Alexander street into a vacant lot and thence into Peachtree street. He was last seen speeding through a yard and around a house. Lester lived in the barn and it was in his room that the game was being played. He is believed by the officers to be the negro who shot Detective Webb, as no pistol was found either in the house or on any of the negroes arrested.

The arrested negroes reported to the officers that one of Detective Webb's bullets wounded Lester. They thought he was shot in the neck but were not positive.

CITY DETECTIVES' THEORY OF PHAGAN MURDER OUTLINED

The Journal Presents First Complete Statement of Case Solicitor and His Investigators Seek to Build

HOW DETECTIVES THINK CRIME WAS COMMITTED

They Maintain That Mary Phagan Was Left Unconscious in Factory Near Midday and Killed Later in Afternoon

For the first time since the lifeless body of pretty fourteen-year-old Mary Phagan was found in the basement of the National Pencil factory, this morning two weeks ago, The Journal is enabled to make public the theory of the city detectives and others investigating the murder mystery as to how the crime was committed.

HERE IS THE THEORY.

The theory in detail is:

That Mary Phagan arrived at the pencil factory between 12 and 12:10 o'clock on Saturday, April 26; that within a short time after she arrived there she was lured to the metal room on the second floor, where she worked; that the big doors of this room were closed, making it almost impossible for the two men working on the fourth floor to hear any outcries; that she was overpowered and assaulted.

That the assailant, realizing that he had committed a crime which would cost him his life if it became known, argued with her and entreated her to keep silent; that when she reiterated her intention to tell he struck her a terrific blow in the left eye, causing her to fall against the handle of the lathe; that the back of her head struck the lathe handle, rendering her unconscious and producing a wound from which the blood flowed freely; that the assailant then secured a cord and looped around her neck, after which he dragged her into one of the small dressing rooms nearby, placing papers or some old garment beneath her head to catch the flow of blood; that the door to the dressing room was closed, and the assailant went away believing that the girl was dead or dying.

RETURNED LATER IN AFTERNOON.

That later in the afternoon when there was no one else in the factory he returned and either carried or dragged the body to the elevator which he ran to the basement; that the peculiar motion of the elevator or the slackening of the loop-knot in the cord about the girl's neck resulted in her partially regaining consciousness; that when the assailant observed this he tightened the cord around her neck and dragged her by it over into the rear end of the semi-darkened basement; that he then tore the white underskirt from the child's underskirt and knotted it about her neck to make doubly sure that she would be effectively strangled; that he then pulled the staple from the fastening in the rear door, either with the intention of later removing the body from the premises to the alley in the rear of the factory, or for the purpose of making it appear that the murderer entered and left the building by this door.

The detectives have evidence to the effect that Mary Phagan went to the factory a few minutes after 12 o'clock; they hold to the opinion that she could have been attacked and left unconscious within a period of twenty minutes.

CORD FOUND IN ROOM.

Cord of the kind found around the girl's neck, in the same lengths and tied with the same loop knots, is found, it is said, in large quantities in the metal room where they insist the crime was committed. Blood was found on the floor of this room and human hair was found on the lather handle. Blood was also found on the elevator floor.

By actual test they have demonstrated, it is claimed, that it would have been almost impossible for the girl to screams to have been heard by the two men working on the fourth floor. This demonstration was made, it declared, when the factory was silent and a forty-pound sack was shaken at the top of his voice. He could barely be heard on the fourth floor, it is said, although persons there were listening intently for his cries.

It is the theory of the detectives that with papers or old clothing wrap-

CORRUPT PRACTICES BILL PASSES FLORIDA HOUSE

Would Limit Expenditures of Candidates and Shield Them From Attacks

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 10.—Representative Tomlin's corrupt practices act passed the house today with only four votes in opposition. This act follows closely upon the passing of the Bryan primary bill and is correlated in that the Bryan bill hasn't a corrupt practice feature and the Tomlin fill supplements those features which are lacking.

There is no antagonism to the bill as Senator Bryan in his campaign before the legislature insisted that his bill be a straight primary bill and that a separate act be passed to cover the corrupt practice features.

The main features of the Tomlin bill are that campaign expenses of candidates are limited as follows: Governor, $4,000; United States senator, $4,000; congressman, $3,000; state house officers, $3,000.

The bill make sit a penalty for a candidate to offer to hire a worker. This feature of the measure is a blow to the political grafter in cities.

There has ose nsome criticism of this bill by the newspapers, claiming that it struck at the liberty of the press. Tomlin is himself a newspaper man and disclaims this.

He says "there is nothing in the bill that seeks to interfere with the liberty of the press or to confiscate its columns as has been charged. It simply provides that in case a newspaper publishes an editorial attack on a candidate after such candidate has expended all that the law permits him to expend, such newspaper must publish, without cost to the candidate, a refutation."

Representatives Bussey and O'Neil engaged in bitter controversy over a no-fense bill of Bussey's, which affected his county only. Bussey said he could not express his contempt for members who we fighting his measure, and O'Neil replied in kind, both being reprimanded by the speaker.

hour and a half at Vicksburg. They have got to stop, or we won't let them over the river."

So the Atlanta Shriners stopped at Vicksburg for two hours, remaining from 2 to 4 o'clock. The special was scheduled to arrive at Shreveport at 10:20 Saturday night. Dallas will be reached at 7 o'clock Sunday morning, and the Atlanta patrol and drug corps will go into camp.

NOTED SHRINERS ON "YAARAB."

Among the Shriners on the "Yaarab" special are Robert S. Colding, grand master of the grand lodge of Georgia Masons, and Joseph C. Greenfield, thirty-third degree, Scottish Rite, of Savannah and Atlanta, respectively.

The Atlanta Shriners' drum corps will be unable to take part in the big parade in Dallas on account of objections raised by the Union Musicians of Dallas. But there will be some individuals parading by the drum corps and patrol. In fact, it is believed that the parade of the corps and patrol from "Yaarab," in its own pageant, will do more to help boost Atlanta than a place in the regular line of march.

JONES'S FEATURE.

A distinctive feature has been arranged by Captain W. R. Joyner, a member of Yaarab temple and the originator of drum corps in Atlanta.

"Captain" has three grandchildren in Dallas, a little girl, Clio, and two boys, W. R., the third, and Richard.

These three children will be dressed in the uniform of the patrol with fez, and will lead the parade with the drum corps and the Yaarab patrol, and there is no doubt but that Dallas will stop all else when this royal parade begins its line of march through the principal streets.

"Yaarab" Special Is Given Big Ovation at Shreveport

BY RAYMUND DANIEL,
Journal Staff Correspondent.

SHREVEPORT, La., May 10.—The "Yaarab" special arrived here at ... o'clock tonight. The Atlanta nobles were met by a large delegation of Shreveport Shriners who are pulling for Atlanta 1914. The patrol paraded the depot and was given a big reception.

Shriners Raise Milk Fund For Poor of New Orleans

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, May 10.—Many dollars were added today to the fund being to provide milk for poor children in the coming summer by the assistance of Shriners en route to Dallas, Tex., for the annual conclave. While the Shriners paraded the principal streets women of the Shrine and those interested in the "milk fund" collected money from those on the sidewalks.

The Shriners carried through the streets a huge milk can into which were thrown small and large coins. Imogene, a fine Jersey cow, and three calves figured in the parade. She rode through the streets on an automobile truck.

Much interest was shown in the day's program. When a woman pitched a coin from a balcony to the street it started a scramble among street urchins. After the hassle was over the boy who captured the money threw the coin to Imogene's attendants. "Buy a little milk for the poor kids," he said. It was a $5 gold piece.

Practically all of the Shriners left New Orleans tonight.

Nobles by Carloads Passing Through Texas

(By Associated Press.)

DALLAS, Tex., May 10.—Not since the second army division mobilized at Galveston has there been such a passage of special trains and cars through Texas as began today with the converging in the state of thousands of Shriners and their friends, gathering for the annual meeting of the imperial Council Ancient Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, which begins here Monday.

The nobles are incidentally seeing the southwest and numerous sections of the old south and this accounts for the heavy early train movement. Ten temples were due in Houston today, including one from Maine and another from Washington state. One hundred and twenty-five special cars are booked through Texarkana to Galveston, where some thousands are going for a swim in the surf before coming to Dallas.

ped about the girl's head no blood would have been found on the floor of the dressing room. The girl's left eye was badly bruised, indicating, the detectives think, that she had been struck a fist blow and there were one or two bruises on her chest which could have been produced in the same manner.

CRIES HEARD AT 4:30.

Only ten or fifteen minutes would have been required, say the detectives, for the murderer to have taken the girl down the elevator to the basement. They have, it is said, a witness, a woman, who swears she was passing the pencil factory about 4:30 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, April 26, and that she heard a woman's piteous cries.

According to this witness, these cries seemed to come from the basement and were cut short, as if they were muffled in some way. The witness says, it is claimed, she did not report the matter at the time because she thought it must have been a negro man in a fuss with his wife and she didn't care to become involved as a witness in such a case.

It is the testimony of this woman which leads the detectives to the theory that the girl was not taken to the basement until in the afternoon and that she regained consciousness while she was being taken from the elevator.

They explain their theory that the form of the girl's murderer was tied about her neck after she was taken to the basement by calling attention to the fact that there was no cord or other strings down there and that the murderer, fearing that the cord about her neck would not be sufficient to strangle her, sought for a second noose and finding nothing handy tore the hem from her underskirt. This theory is also strengthened, the detectives think, by the testimony of Dr. J. W. Hurt, the county physician who performed the autopsy on the girl's body. He declares that she came to her death from strangulation; that the blow on the head was sufficient to render her unconscious, but not to kill her.

MESH BAG MISSING.

The detectives hold firm to the theory that Mary Phagan never left the pencil factory after she went there for her money—$1.20—but they are puzzled to know what became of this money and also the silver mesh bag which she carried with her and which contained sixty cents when she left home to go direct to the factory. As far as is known all the other effects of the girl, including her parasol, were found in the basement. The silver mesh bag is missing, and the detectives have never been able to find the envelope in which the girl is said to have received her money.

The parasol was found at the foot of the elevator shaft, which leads them to the theory that when the girl was carried down to the basement the parasol was left on the second floor where she was attacked, and that the murderer, finding the parasol there when he returned, threw it into the elevator shaft.

The above is a complete statement of the theory upon which the detectives, the solicitor general and other investigators for the state are working.

Grand Jury to Consider Phagan Case This Week

Interest in the investigation of the mysterious murder two weeks ago of little Mary Phagan centered Saturday in the grand jury.

Two men, Leo M. Frank, superintendent of the pencil factotry, where the tragedy occurred, and Newt Lee, negro night watchman, have been ordered held by a coroner's jury, but no indictment has been given as to the time when bills against the two men will be presented to that body.

The jury is not due to hold a session until next Friday, but the solicitor general or the foreman can call the body together on the girls' account.

While the solicitor will make no definite statement, it is apparent that he will not present the case to the grand jury until the latter part of this week, Thursday or Friday. However, the grand jury has been especially charged to probe the murder and it is the power of its members to order the witnesses in the case before it at any time.

EARLIEST TRIAL, JUNE 19.

Owing to the unusual public interest in the cases it is possible that if the grand jury secures a true bill the trial might be set for the week of May 19, when the criminal division of the superior court, Judge L. S. Roan, presiding, next convenes.

Thomas B. Felder, the well known attorney, who has been retained by citizens in the Bellwood district, where the slain girl lived, returned Saturday morning from a week's trip to New York and Washington. Mr. Felder made the trip to attend to professional business said to be in connection with the Phagan case.

Mr. Felder denied that he had employed William J. Burns, the famous detective, to come to Atlanta in person in an effort to solve the mystery.

Mr. Burns, who has before worked on cases for Mr. Felder, is now in Europe, according to the latter.

It has been rumored that Mr. Felder is determined to utilize the fee which will be paid him by the Bellwood citizens for assisting in the prosecution of the case, to employ a private detective, and that Mr. Felder will lend his time and energy to the case without compensation.

Mr. Felder declined to discuss this rumor, and would not say whether or not he had employed any eastern detectives to help the Atlanta officers ferret out the mystery.

SOLICITOR SEES WITNESSES.

The activity in the Phagan investigation was transferred Saturday from police headquarters to the office of Solicitor General Dorsey, who was in conference with witnesses and detectives working on the case during the greater part of the day. Among his visitors was Dr. H. F. Harris, of the state board of health, who twice exhumed the body of Mary Phagan.

Later the solicitor is said to have conferred with Dr. J. W. Hurt, the county physician, whose evidence has never been made public.

All of the witnesses seen by The Journal Saturday declare that they are under instructions not to discuss the case, and the utmost secrecy shrouds the work of the solicitor's force and the city detectives.

COLONEL PEEL PROTESTS A TARIFF NOT EXISTING

No Tariff on Ammonia Sulphate, and Georgia Fertilizer Men Need Not Worry

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The farmers and fertilizer manufacturers of Georgia are unnecessarily wrought up over certain provisions of the chemical schedule of the tariff bill, as was indicated today by the telegram which Senator Hoke Smith received from Colonel W. L. Peel, of Atlanta.

It seems that the farmers and fertilizer men are under the impression that the bill places a duty on ammonia sulphate which is used in the manufacture of fertilizer. Such is not the case. Ammonia sulphate and ammonia nitrate are on the free list and will so remain.

Colonel Peel's telegram to Senator Smith follows:

"Have just learned that tariff bill passed by the house contains a tax of 10 per cent on sulphate of ammonia. This article has been on the free list. Is not this contrary to the promise of the Democratic party to revise the tariff downward? Sulphate of ammonia is a necessity not only to the fertilizer manufacturer, but to the farmer. The imposition of this tax is a direct discrimination against the farmer, who will ultimately have to pay the increased cost, which will amount to about $6 per ton. I urge in the name of the farmers and the manufacturers that you have this article put back on the free list."

There Must Be No War With Japs, Says Hiram S. Maxim

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 10.—"No matter from what standpoint we examine the Japanese question, it assumes a rather serious aspect—not only for Japan, but also for the United States," said Hiram S. Maxim tonight.

"When Japan declared war with China, many of the Egyptian papers characterized it as 'suicide' on the part of Japan. Still, Japan very soon annihilated the Chinese fleet, and inside of a few weeks brought the greatest nation on earth to her knees, and despoiled her of much territory. Then little Japan pitched into the second greatest nation of the world, and the Russian fleet was destroyed. The Japanese outfought the Russians at every point, and when the Russians quit they lost Manchuria.

"Japan has a population nearly half that of the United States, and has a rather powerful fleet of the best ships in the world, manned by the active little Japanese sailors, who are certainly equal to the best to be found elsewhere. Moreover, the Japanese are a proud and warlike people, and their unparalleled success gives them confidence; having handsomely whipped the two most populous nations of the earth, they would not hesitate to go to war with the third most populous, the United States.

"The Americans as a whole certainly do not wish to see brave little Japan humiliated; we do not wish to see their splendid fleet of battleships destroyed; still, if war occurs, it will be absolutely necessary, no matter what the cost may be, that Japan be conquered to save the face of the Americans, and this would mean the destruction of Japan's navy, which would be a great misfortune to the Far East.

"Once that the fighting power of the Japanese is destroyed, European nations would certainly come in, take possession of China, and divide it up, after which time there would be no open door for America. Therefore there must be no war with Japan. It would be nothing less than terrible calamity."

WILSON AND BRYAN AWAITING ACTION BY CALIFORNIA GOVERNOR

the conference with the president but it is believed he merely advised him of the intended course of action. Formal reply to the request probably will not be made by the state department until some answer is received from Governor Johnson as to his action on the bill.

The impression that spread in official circles tonight was that Secretary Bryan would urge the California governor to refer the bill back to the legislature for modifications that would meet the Japanese objections. There is a well founded belief that if Governor Johnson refused either to veto the bill or recommend modifications, California friends of the federal administration would attempt to involve the referendum with the idea of nullifying the law until an election could be held, the interval being used to obtain a complete understanding diplomatically between Japan and the United States or perhaps to frame a new treaty covering disputed points.

MEMBER OF COTTON FIRM EXPELLED FROM EXCHANGE

Following Disappearance of Lee Lesser, Junior Member of His Firm Is "Canned"

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 10.—J. A. Ely, junior member of the Lesser-Ely cotton firm, which recently failed after the disappearance of the president, Lee Lesser, today was expelled from the Memphis Cotton exchange. Lesser was expelled about a week ago.

The board of directors of the exchange has also ordered the suspension of Will Phillips, junior member of the Martin-Phillips cotton firm, which failed several weeks ago after the mysterious disappearance of its president, Joseph W. Martin, in London.

License to store cotton for members of the Memphis exchange also was withdrawn from D. W. McLemore, warehouse man, the board deciding that while there has been no participation between McLemore and the Lesser-Ely company in connection with the warehouse receipts, gross carelessness had been shown.

No word has been received by relatives or business associates here of the whereabouts of either Lesser or Martin.

"SIX YEARS' REVENGE!" SAYS BRIDWELL, STABBING

O. W. Gilbert Cut in Side in Pool Room on Peachtree, Injuries Serious

O. W. Gilbert, aged twenty- and manager of Scherrer's Dairy lunch at 42 Peachtree street, was stabbed in the left side by Arthur Bridwell Saturday afternoon about 4 o'clock just inside of the Georgia Pool Parlors at 40 Peachtree street.

The wounded young man was taken to the Grady hospital, where his injuries are said to be dangerous, as the knife penetrated through the tissues. His assailant escaped, after walking calmly down to the Elkin Drug company's store at the corner of Marietta street.

HID IN THEATER.

He was later found hiding in the billroom of the Atlanta theater and taken in custody by Officers Green and McKibben. The officers followed a messenger whom Bridwell had sent to his room for his clothes, preparatory to leaving the city, it is supposed.

Gilbert was standing talking to J. F. Grogan, it is claimed, when Bridwell started to pass to go to the pool tables. Gilbert, it is said, hailed him, saying, "I want to see you a minute."

Then, it is alleged, Bridwell whipped out his knife and slashed the young man in the side and the latter fell in a heap to the floor. Grogan then, it is claimed, jumped on his friend's assailant and the two went to the floor, but Bridwell succeeded in getting loose, and with his knife still open strollen down the street and disappeared.

As Bridwell freed himself from Grogan, it is said, he remarked: "That's for six years' revenge!" referring to the man he had stabbed.

Bridwell, it is said, was formerly employed at a local "movie" theater.

WILL NOT TALK.

Bridwell declined to make any statement after his arrest, further than to say that if he had not taken some foolish advice he would be 100 miles away from Atlanta instead of locked up at police headquarters. It is understood, however, that the stabbing grew out of bitter feeling which Bridwell had toward Gilbert on account of some alleged mistreat ment of Bridwell's mother who is now a waitress at a cafe on West Mitchell street. Bridwell stated that he had gone by and informed his mother of the stabbing after it had occurred.

At a late hour last night Gilbert was in a precarious condition at the Grady hospital. The physicians were doubtful of his recovery. He was too ill to make any statement.

DAYTON OPTIMISTS BUSY, THEY CALL FLOOD BOON

Stores Reopen With Bargain Sales—500 Teams Moving the Debris

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DAYTON, O., May 10.—Again is Dayton able to take care of herself. Imbued with that fine American spirit that turns bad fortune into good, the city is rising splendidly from the ruins into which it fell but recently. The hum of reconstruction and the rattle of the automatic riveter are heard everywhere. Let those who are in need of a lesson in optimism come to Dayton and see how a city all but swept away a few weeks ago can pull itself together, forget completely the past disaster and think only of the hopeful future.

Six weeks ago the entire business section of Dayton was a sea. Water covered all the downtown streets and every residence street save those on the hills at the outskirts of the city to a depth of from ten to twenty-five feet. Not a business house escaped and second floors of many of the houses were inundated. Stocks of goods were either floated entirely away or were so damaged as to be utterly worthless. Homes inundated and furniture ruined meant the loss to many men of the savings of a lifetime. Men well-to-do in the morning of the tragedy, in the evening found themselves practically penniless.

It was a situation well calculated to try the soul and test the courage of the strongest. But the men and women of Dayton proved themselves equal to the emergency. With a grim determination born of the necessity of the time and with an optimism and faith in the stability and future of the city that have been the wonder of all who have witnessed their heroism, they set to work.

BUILDING ON NEW FOUNDATION.

Today, due to their hard labor, ably supplemented by the assistance rendered by the federal government, the state troops, and the rehabilitation service of the American Red Cross society, Dayton has had a new birth. The future City of the future is being builded on a new foundation of faith, fraternity and a broader conception of the boundless charity that links all men as brothers. It is rising a city of substantial and sanitary homes.

Immediately after the waters receded, with state troops patrolling every street, the work of cleaning up the city began. From curb to curb the thoroughfares were piled with carcasses of horses, drowned after they had been cut loose to do the best they could for themselves, and with the wrecks of business houses and their stocks and furnishings. For four weeks 6,000 men and 500 teams and wagons were at work, while a portion of the time seven shovels were used in loading the debris to be hauled away.

All railroads entering the city assisted in the task of restoring the streets by loans of flat cars and the use of freight engines that were backed down the luxurious streets on the trolley car tracks. Long strings of flat cars loaded in the daytime were pulled at night along the rights-of-way miles out of the city and dumped, being returned for reloading the following morning.

It was the first time in the memory of the oldest inhabitant that a freight engine had been seen on the business streets of Dayton, and it will in all probability be the last.

WILSON MAY VETO SAME BILL VETOED BY TAFT

Reported That President Frowns on Rider in Sundry Civil Appropriation

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 10.—The rider to the sundry civil appropriation bill, exempting labor organizations and farmers' associations from the operations of the Sherman anti-trust law, may result in its veto by President Wilson.

The measure was vetoed by President Taft because of this provision, and that is why the bill had to be re-enacted at this special session of congress.

Notwithstanding reports that he is prepared to sign the measure, which has brought an almighty howl from manufacturers and capital generally, the president has not made up his mind.

He has shown an indication, it is said, to sign the bill, not because he favored the exemption clause, but because it is his desire to ward off a fight in congress at this time.

In the last few days, there has been tremendous pressure brought to beat upon the president to induce him to veto the bill on the ground that it countenances vicious discrimination.

Some of the president's friends and advisers have told him that to allow the bill to become a law would be a blight upon his administration and their presentation of the case has undoubtedly made an impression on the president's mind. As a matter of party expediency and politic efforts are now being made to have the rider scratched by the conference committee of the house and senate which has jurisdiction of the measure. This would be done with a view to ending an embarrassing situation without creating a trouble making precedent.

PORTER APPEAL FINE FOR DELIVERING LIQUOR

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ANNISTON, Ala., May 10.—Neil P. Sterne, attorney for Rufus Reed, a porter for the Southern Express company, who was fined $100 and costs in police court Friday morning for delivery of liquor, has appealed from the recorder's ruling, which was made under a construction of the Webb bill.

Should the decision of Judge Green who is a well known lawyer, stand in the higher courts, it is considered that the Webb bill will operate to so amend the state laws as to prohibit all shipments of liquor being delivered in the city whether he an intent to violate a city ordinance or not.

The city officers some time ago raided the freight depot of the Southern and Louisville and Nashville railroads and it is considered that this decision will be regarded as affecting them also.

Afford Opportunity for Investment

Conservative people recognize the advantages of diamond investment and the readiness with which diamond collateral is accepted the world over.

Savings put into diamonds are really saved, and as investment they are proven among the choicest, as shown by the average increase in value of over ten per cent annually for years.

Continued advance in value is certain through the same causes that have made their world wide increase.

The average yield of the mines has in the past few years decreased from 1.290 carats per car load of blue ground to 0.290 carats. The great depths have made machinery of recent years obsolete and the natives have recognized their value as wage earners.

The great Trio controlling 96% of the world's output would scarcely find it in the nature of things to depreciate their product any more than would the gold miners of the world; and the fixedness of values is shown through complete failure of any financial panic to affect diamonds in their steady increase in value.

Exclusive diamond merchants, we are in constant touch with the markets of the world, and our contract to accept diamonds in exchange at full value or buy back from our customers at 90 cents on the dollar at any time within one year of purchase assures our customers against loss or dissatisfaction.

Where desired we sell upon deferred payments, one-fifth down and balance in monthly notes, and quality, weight and price marked in plain figures assure correct values.

Our Diamond Book No. 5 explains—please write for it.

CHICKENPOX SHOULD BE TREATED AS IF SERIOUS

State Health Board Urges Parents to Guard Complications, Scars, Contagion

Although chickenpox is regarded as one of the natural ailments incident to childhood, there are several important reasons, says the Georgia state board of health, why parents should exercise all the cares that would be taken with a more dangerous epidemic disease.

In the first place, while chickenpox when properly treated leaves no permanent disfigurement of the skin, if neglected or permitted to become severe it may leave scars or pock marks similar to the pits that come from smallpox. All that is usually necessary to prevent the scars is proper medical attention and the exercise of care to prevent the patient from scratching the eruptions. If small children persist in scratching, it is a good idea to put mittens on their hands. Itching may be alleviated by carbolized and warm baths, and the application of oil may be used to hasten the separation of the crusts.

Another reason why chickenpox cases should be given careful attention is that while severe illness or death seldom if ever occurs in an uncomplicated case, there is always a possibility of complications that might lead to serious results. Complications are rare, but when they do occur they consist usually of pneumonia, erysipelas and inflammation of the kidneys (nepiritis). Not infrequently chickenpox is complicated by some other infectious disease, but this, however, is more of a coincidence than a true complication.

Another reason for exercising special care in chickenpox cases (and it is the most important reason of all from the standpoint of community welfare), is the fact that the disease is highly contagious, and when the children of a family, or a school or a neighborhood has been exposed to it, scarcely any individual who has not had the disease escapes contagion. The disease is usually communicated in the ordinary intercourse of children in the family, the school or the playgrounds. While grown people are not entirely immune, it is usually confined to children. The poison is eliminated not only from the surface of the body and the crusts broken in the eruptions, but also from the air which the person breathes. It is believed by physicians that it can enter the body by way of the respiratory passages. Direct contact, therefore, is not necessary, the infection being communicated to some little distance by the air, it can also be carried more remotely by persons who do not contract the disease themselves but who transmit it to persons who are more susceptible.

The importance of isolation and sanitary precautions, in the light of the disease's highly contagious nature, becomes immediately manifest. Isolation should be practiced, and the quarantine should be prolonged until the last crusts are thrown off. Disinfection of the person, clothing and apartment is desirable to minimize the danger of spreading the disease. These measures, and the treatment of the disease, should be carried out under the direction of a physician.

Chicken-pox is ordinarily an easy disease to diagnose. It develops from ten to sixteen days after exposure. The first indication is usually the appearance of small, bright red spots, which rapidly develop into water blisters called vesicles. These vary in size, the largest being about the diameter of a split pea. These vesicles are on the surface of the skin and do not go deep. Usually there is no suppuration or pus. The disease is often accompanied by slight fever, surrounding each vesicle is a narrow bright red ring called an areola. They came out in crops on the body, sometimes on the face and scalp, and occasionally even in the mucous membrane of the mouth. The blisters seldom are on to pustulation, but rapidly dry up after the third day, when they become opaque. In addition to slight feverishness there may be loss of appetite, aching feeling and catarrhal inflammation. The duration of the attack is variable. Three or four weeks is usually the extreme limit before the separation of the last crusts. Relapses do not occur. Immunity from future attacks is practically permanent.

But it must be understood that chicken-pox has no relation whatever to smallpox, and the fact that a patient has had one of them before never protects from the other.

The medical name of chicken-pox is varicella. It was once regarded as a generally modified and mild form of smallpox, but it is now known as an entirely distinct disease. One of these diseases never gives rise to the other. The attack of one confers no immunity against the other. Vaccination affords no protection against chicken-pox, and children who have recently suffered from chicken-pox react to vaccination in the ordinary manner.

ORGAN CONCERT PROGRAM FOR TODAY IS DELIGHTFUL

Begins at 3:30 o'Clock, at the Auditorium, Under Festival Association Auspices

The regular free Sunday afternoon concert will take place at the auditorium-armory this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, under the auspices of the Atlanta Music Festival association. Everybody is invited to come. The program will be one of the most delightful that Atlantians have heard this spring. Several of the numbers are being repeated by request. All persons who attend are urged to be there promptly by 3:30 o'clock.

Flotow. Overture to "Martha."
Friedrich Freiherr von Flotow was the son of a landed nobleman of the archduchy of Mecklenburg, and was educated with a view to the diplomatic service. He wrote the opera of "Martha" (the only one of his works that survive) in 1847, the composition being remodelled from a ballet written in 1844. The great success of this work must be mainly attributed to the melody which pervades it. His early French experience taught him the virtue of lively and well accentuated rhythm, and gave him the dexterity in the construction of extended pieces, to which he wrote pleasing harmony and piquant orchestration. On the other hand, his music has rarely anything below the surface, his rhythm frequently degenerating into that of mere dance tunes, and he is prone to sentimentality.

In the scientific part of composition he too often betrays the amateur. On the whole, the conclusion is forced upon us that in spite of his popularity, Flotow will not live in the history of dramatic music.

Chaminade. "Scarf Dance."

Puccini. Intermezzo. "The Journey to Havre." ("Manon Lescaut.")

Wagner. Overture to "Die Meistersinger."

Atlanta's Motordom Preparing for Annual Classic Test of Finest Cars

Next Saturday is the day of the big annual hill climb on Stewart avenue. # SCHOOL HYGIENE MEET IN BUFFALO IN AUGUST

City of Buffalo, N. Y., Has Appropriated $40,000 for Entertainment

All the leading nations, every state in the union, every college and university of note in this country, and various other leading educational, scientific, medical and hygienic institutions and organizations, as well as various women's organizations, will be represented at the Fourth International Congress on School Hygiene in Buffalo, August 25-30, according to a preliminary statement just issued by Dr. Thomas A. Storey, of the College of the City of New York, secretary-general of the congress.

President Wilson has accepted the honorary office of patron of the congress. The president of the congress is Mr. Charles W. Eliot, one time president of Harvard university. The vice presidents are Dr. William H. Welch, the great pathologist of Johns Hopkins university, formerly president of the American Medical association, and Dr. Henry P. Walcott, president of the recent International Congress on Hygiene and Demography, and chairman of the Massachusetts state board of health.

It is the aim of the organizing committee in charge to bring together at Buffalo a record number of men and women interested in improving the health and efficiency of school children, and to make this congress—the first of its kind ever held in America—one of direct benefit to each individual community. A program of papers and discussions is being arranged now covering the entire field of school hygiene. There will be scientific exhibits representing the best that is being done in school hygiene, and also commercial exhibits of educational value.

Nor will the entertainment of delegates in any way be neglected. Buffalo has just subscribed $40,000 toward covering the expense of the congress. The Buffalo citizens committee has planned for a series of social events, including receptions and a grand ball, a pageant in the park, and excursion trips to the great industrial plants, and to the scenic wonders of Niagara Falls.

The congress is open to all persons interested in school hygiene, who may join as regular active members upon the payment of a $5 fee. Application for membership should be sent to Dr. Thomas A. Storey, College of the City of New York, New York City.

SEVENTH WARD CLUB PROTESTS MAUSOLEUM

West End Citizens Adopt Resolutions and Will Go Before County Board

The Seventh Ward Improvement club at a meeting Friday night adopted resolutions protesting against the mausoleum which a stock company proposes to build on or near the Cascade road, about a mile beyond the terminus of the Gordon street car line.

A copy of the resolution will be filed with the board of county commissioners for their consideration when the application for the mausoleum permit is taken up on May 15.

Under a recent state law, burial grounds, cemeteries, mausoleums and other public resting places for the dead, must be permitted by boards of county commissioners, or by the ordinaries in counties having no commissioners.

Formal application for the Cascade road mausoleum was filed with the Fulton county commissioners some time ago, and was taken up by them at the last meeting.

The granting of the permit was opposed by 110 interested property owners whose written petition was before the board, and after considerable discussion the whole matter was postponed until May 15, on which date the board will hold a special meeting for this and other purposes.

The Seventh Ward Improvement club resolution will be supplemented to the objections already before the board.

AMERICANS APPEAL TO BRYAN FOR PROTECTION

Big Ranch Owners In Mexico Ask State Department to Guard Property

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Protests against lack of protection to American property were made to Secretary Bryan today by Representative Hamilton, of Michigan, in behalf of large ranch interests.

A protest by the ranch owners, dated May 6, said:

"We have been without protection the last two years; our men have been held for ransom; our horses have been stolen, our cattle stolen and driven off in large numbers; there is no law and no respect for American life and property.

"The Polomas Land and Cattle company, our neighbor on the north, paid $5,000 to get its foreman released last fall and had to pay a heavy ransom again last Saturday to get its bookkeeper released. If the United States government is not going to protect American citizens in a foreign country, their lives and their property, they should at least publish this fact broadcast to protect a great many small investors from going into a foreign country.

"We have been held up continually by the Mexicans for every piece of work we have wanted to do on our ranches and had to pay them thousands of dollars in gold to be allowed the privilege even of branding our calves. Apparently this government has forsaken its citizens in Mexico. We are not asking for intervention, but for protection."

Salazar, a rebel chief, is said by the ranch owners to have $800,000 in American banks, extorted by ransom and pillage.

At the federal rear were trains ready to assist in the retreat.

Official state advices relate that during the fighting insurgents under Major Carlos Felix executed a flank rear movement striking the federal lines at Maytorena, between Ortez and Guaymas. A train bearing sixty soldiers and three officers was captured and in the fighting sixty federals were killed and seven privates and four officers captured.

The rebels under Colonel Benjamine Hill also struck the federal rear, moving in from points south of Guaymas.

Fifty federal prisoners were sent to Hermosillo. Chief Bule and Major Gutierretz are reported killed.

Celebration of constitutionalists sympathizers at Nogales during last night led to riots when government sympathizers interferred. The police dispersed the mob after making many arrests.

Fierce Battle Reported Raging Near Matamoras

(By Associated Press.)

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., May 10.—A fierce battle is reported in progress at Reynosa, sixty miles west of Matamoras, Mexico. Six hundred constitutionalists are said to have attacked a large force of federals.

Mining Section of State Of Chihuahua to Rebels

(By Associated Press.)

EL PASO, Tex., May 10.—Parral, rich mining center of southern Chihuahua state is in the hands of constitutionalists, the federal garrison of 1,500 surrendering unconditionally, according to the report of an American mining man reaching here on a motorcycle today.

State Troops Take Guaymas; Federal Forces in Retreat

(By Associated Press.)

NOGALES, Ariz., May 10.—Mexican federal troops, after desperate fighting, withdrew to Guaymas, leaving state forces in control of all points north of the gulf port, according to telegraphic advices today, which say the government troops were utterly routed.

An unconfirmed report said state troops had occupied Guaymas with the federals in retreat southward.

Eight hundred insurgents under Juan Cabral took the aggressive in the center of the state's advance last night. Deployed along the right flank were the Yaqui Indians, who pressed against the federal position with a wicked rifle fire. Five hundred cavalry moved down from the right wing under Majors Trujillo and Gutierres, with General Obregon, commander of the state forces, directing the advance from the center rear.

So persistent was the insurgent advance, forming a semicircle of fire that soon the federals began to retreat despite their artillery defense.

The federal formation, seen through field glasses, had ten cannon in the center and cavalry to the right, a total of 1,200 men, the main body of which was 12 miles apart. Both divisions fell back toward Guaymas.

Will Arrest Mexicans Who Smuggled War Aeroplanes

LOS ANGELES, May 10.—In advices received today, the United States district attorney was informed by District Attorney Joseph Morrison, of Phoenix, that the Mexicans involved in the alleged conspiracy to smuggle war aeroplanes to the Sonora rebels would be arrested as soon as Washington had ruled on the status of the flying machine seized Wednesday at Tucson.

Masson and Dean, the airmen detained when the aeroplane was taken by government agents at Tucson, are safely across the border, but Morrison said his men knew the whereabouts of General Cambreras and the Alcalde brothers—Manuel and Maximo.

The federal grand jury, which started an investigation into the alleged aeroplane smuggling, will meet again Tuesday.

3,602 MINERS KILLED IN U. S. DURING 1911

Death Rate in Quarries and Coal Mines Was 1.69 Per 1,000

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Accidents in quarries, coal mines and metal mines of the United States during 1911 resulted in loss of life to 2,602 men out of the 1,065,281 men employed. The bureau of mines, which since its establishment has endeavored to promote safety and efficiency in the mines and quarries of the country, has just issued its first summary of quarry accidents.

It shows 188 men were killed during 1911, out of 110,954 then employed, making the death rate 1.69 per 1,000. In coal mines 728,348 men were employed, of whom 2,719 were killed, making the death rate 3.73; in metal mines of 165,975 men employed 695 were killed, a death rate of 4.18.

Approximately one-half of the deaths in and about quarries were due to three causes in the order named, explosives, falls or slides of quarry material and falls or slides of overburden.

Accidents resulted in the serious injury of 863 men or 7.77 per 1,000; slight injuries 4,527 or 40.81 per 1,000. Approximately 33 per cent. of both the serious and slight injuries occurred in the handling and transport of material.

Fatalities in granite quarries were twenty-nine sandstone and bluestone fourteen; limestone ninety and cement rock twenty-nine. Of these thirty-three men were killed in Pennsylvania quarries, twenty-two in California and twelve in Illinois. The statistics were collected from 3,920 quarries whose 110,954 employes worked an aggregate of 25,325,004 days, developing $149,541,722 in products. The men killed left ninety-eight widows and 129 orphans.

The Up-to-Date Girl

(Gulf State Presbyterian.)

Just to show you which way the wind is blowing, it was after Christmas and the little maid of eight was sitting disconsolately by the nursery window.

"Aren't you going to play with your new doll?" asked her mother, with a side glance at the discarded present.

"No," said the little girl.

"I thought you liked her so. Don't you?"

"No."

"Oh, but you wanted a nice dolly. One that talked, didn't you?"

No response.

"And this one says, 'Ma-ma' 'Pa-pa.'"

The little maid's eyes flashed and sparkled as she replied: "I want a doll that says 'Votes for women.'"

The Atlanta Ad Men's club were guests yesterday at a barbecue given at noon at the Burns club by the Jacobs' Pharmacy company.

Dr. Joe Jacobs, president of the company, and Charles A. Smith, manager, received the guests.

All Ad Men, as every one knows, are born with silver spoons in their mouths, but never has any member of the Atlanta club been guest upon a more pleasing occasion than the barbecue given yesterday by the Jacobs' Pharmacy company.

The meats were delicious, the cordiality of the hosts was a fine sauce for the barebuced dainties, and all in all, the occasion was a jolly good time both for guests and for hosts.

Barbecues are usually pleasant, but the one given to the Ad Men by the Jacobs' Pharmacy company was unusually so. It was not only one of the first, but also one of the jolliest "cues" of the season.

Here were the guests of the occasion, all members of the Ad Men's club: E. H. Goodhart, jr., president; J. H. Lewis, vice president; W. Joseph Hubbard, second vice president; W. S. Lounsbury, treasurer; Howard Geldert, secretary, and Louis D. Hicks, Edwin F. Johnson, W. Mac Jones, Ben Lee Crew, John Gilmore, E. H. Cone, T. H. Brannen, Wylie West, Ivan E. Allen, Dr. F. M. # FLORIDA COMMISSIONER WARS ON STATE CHEMIST

Chemist in State of Insubordination, Is Charge Made by Agricultural Commissioner

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 10.—War is on between the state chemist and the commissioner of agriculture, arising over the pure food bill now pending.

Commissioner Hickox has issued a statement in which he says, "Recently articles inspired by R. E. Rose, state chemist, have appeared in numerous papers in which is contained a so-called summary of what he denominates as a substitute for senate bill No. 39."

The gist of the statement given out by the commissioner is to emphasize the allegation that the state chemits is in a status of insubordination to the commissioner under whom he is by law directed to work.

He says, further, referring to the pure food law, "If the law of 1911 was destructive and oppressive in its operation it was due to the state chemist's precipitate action in having the bill introduced without the knowledge or consent of the late Commissioner B. E. McLin and put foh whose determined stand against its rigid enforcement would have produced stagnation and ruin of the business of all classes and dealers and merchants. I, as succeeding commissioner, had to assume the same position at a later period. Therefore, the several extensions granted the several classes of dealers and merchants were necessary to prevent loss to all."

Broward county, created from the north of Dade, passed the house today.

Dalton Horses Smash Auto and Are Not Hurt

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DALTON, Ga., May 10.—Without loss of skin from the horses, paint from the buggy and without breaking the harness in a single place, two horses hitched to a buggy dashed into the automobile owned by F. F. Farrar Friday afternoon and wrecked the car. The pole of the buggy was rammed through the rear of the car, splintering it, and the top was wrecked.

As the car was being taken to a nearby garage, a close examination failed to show where the team, buggy or harness had been injured in the least.

Becoming a Nation of Fans

Frank R. Elser in the Outlook.

Where will it end? "Fans" are being born faster than P. T. Barnum's proverbial suckers, and each succeeding season finds them more familiar with the game and demanding more and better news of it. Any old account of an ordinary news event, such as the Balkan war or the assassination of a Mexican president, will do, but baseball, goodness me! we want that written by an expert. We would also like a page of cartoons, depicting the home team in some gentle posture, say, walking on the face of the nearest rival for the pennant, or perchance seated triumphantly in a soaring aeroplane, waving a fond farewell to a small, grunting bear or tiger wearily trundling on the dusty road below a rickety wheelbarrow filled with lemons.

Trusses Like These Are A Crime

Such Makeshifts Have Forced Thousands Into Risking Dangerous Operations

Wearing elastic and spring trusses year after year is almost sure to shorten your life.

You can't make them hold, even when drawn so tight you can scarcely stand to keep them on.

They usually let you get worse all the time—that's why every year they are forcing thousands of people into undergoing operations.

They are simply a crime—squeeze the rupture, often causing strangulation—dig into the pelvic bone in front—press against the spinal column at the back—make life miserable for nearly everybody who wears them.

The Plain Truth Is This

You can't possibly get well—can't even keep from getting worse—unless your rupture is constantly held in place. Just as a broken bone can't knit unless held securely together.

And just as a bandage or splint is the only way a broken bone can be held, so the right kind of truss is the only thing in the world that can keep a rupture from coming out and growing worse.

You'll feel like a new person from the day you put on that kind of truss.

But you know as well as we that you'll never find such a sure-to-hold truss at any drug store.

Yet it's easy enough to get. And you can test it first—by sixty days' trial—without having to risk a single cent.

It's the famous Cluthe Truss or Cluthe Automatic Massager—absolutely guaranteed to hold, and won't cost you a cent if it doesn't.

It's so utterly different from everything else for rupture that it has received eighteen separate patents.

Made on an entirely new principle. Instantly and automatically protects you against every strain so your rupture can't possibly be forced out. Self-regulating, self-adjusting. Far more than just a truss.

In addition to constant holding it provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture.

Just how it does that—entirely automatically—and how it has thus completely cured hundreds and hundreds of people whose cases seemed almost hopeless—is all explained in the free book which the coupon below will bring you.

No Belt—No Leg-Straps—No Springs

The Cluthe Truss does away with the curse of belts, leg-straps and springs. Thousands say it is as comfortable as their clothing. It is water-proof—will hold in the bath. Also perspiration-proof and easily kept clean.

Make This 60-Day Test—You Won't Have To Risk a Penny

We don't ask you to trust to a mere try-on the way you have to do at a druggist.

We'll make a Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss specially for your case—make it to your measure—and let you try it sixty days.

We'll practically lend it to you that long just for a test.

If it doesn't keep your rupture from coming out or bothering you in any way, no matter how hard you work or strain—if it doesn't prove every claim we make—then you can send it back and it won't cost you a penny.

Free Book Full of Facts Never Before Put in Print.

Don't keep on letting yourself get worse—don't keep on spending cent after cent for rupture until you get our free book of advice.

This remarkable book—clothbound, 96 pages—comes up all we have learned about rupture during forty years of experience. You'll find it full of facts never ever before put in print.

It shows just why elastic and spring trusses cause so much misery and such a shameful waste of money—and the lasting relief their use.

It explains why operation is nearly always a needless gamble with death—and why, if you do manage to live through it, you may have to keep on wearing a truss.

It exposes the humbug "appliances," "methods," "plasters," etc.

It shows why sixty days' trial is the only safe way to buy anything for rupture—and how the Cluthe Truss is the only thing of any kind that you can get on such a long trial because the only thing good enough to stand such a thorough day-after-day test.

And it tells all about this famous Automatic Massaging Truss—how simple it is—how it entails constant expense—how it has saved thousands from operation—how you can get it on trial, and how little it costs if you keep it.

Also gives voluntary endorsements from over 5,000 benefited and cured people.

Write for this book today—don't put it off—the minute it takes to send for it may free you from trouble for the rest of your life.

The Tariff and the Senate.

The battle over the Underwood tariff bill, which has truly been called Democracy's answer to its platform pledge, now shifts to the Senate. For the past month, since President Wilson summoned an extra session of Congress to settle and to settle right this issue that so vitally concerns public interests, the bill has been before the House. There it encountered all the stubborn and cunning opposition which Standpat Republicans and wishy-washy Republicans, known otherwise as "Bull Moosers," could devise. It faced a compact and resourceful alliance of the disciples of special privilege. But the overwhelming majority by which it was adopted at the close of the debate last Thursday shows the stanchness and unity with which the Democrats of the House are standing by their party faith. The final vote was two hundred and eighty-one to one hundred and thirty-nine in favor of the bill. Only five Democrats voted in the negative and they did so for obviously local reasons.

It is not to be expected that the progress of tariff revision will be as smooth and as expeditious in the Senate as it has been in the House. The upper chamber is naturally more deliberate, it is more susceptible to appeals from special interests, it is further from the mass of the people and nearer the seats of protection.

It must also be remembered that the Democratic majority in the Senate is very small. Its balance of power is six votes at the most and of these two will doubtless be lost by the defection of the senators from Louisiana, who oppose the reduction and the ultimate removal of duties on sugar.

But if the remaining Democrats stand true to the House, and there is every reason to believe that they will, the tariff measure, though delayed and hotly contested, will pass and will become a law within the next few months.

The Republican line of opposition is already indicated in their demand that oral, public hearings on the various schedules to be revised be reopened. Democratic leaders on the Senate finance committee oppose this plan on the ground that ample opportunity was given every one interested to present his claims to the House committee on ways and means. The point is well taken and thoroughly logical; for, the House committee was engaged for many weeks before the extra session of Congress was called in hearing all manufacturers who wished to appear before it. That was the proper time and the proper place for presenting individual views. If particular interests were permitted to talk as long and as often as they desired, no progress whatsoever could be made in any constructive legislation. There is, to be sure, no valid objection against the submission of new tariff evidence to the Senate committee, but the idea of retracing the ground that has been thoroughly covered by the House committee is insupportable; and, in truth, it is simply a scheme for unnecessary and unfair delay.

The bill's passage through the Senate will be fought at every step by the Republicans and their clients. The most urgent and insidious appeals will be made to hesitant Democrats. But the opposition now virtually admits ultimate defeat. It knows that under the leadership of President Wilson the party is pressing forward almost as a unit to carry into effect its pre-election promise. Indications are that the pending bill will be enacted substantially in its present form and that before the summer is over, the rank and file of the people will be guaranteed relief from the extortionate duties which a tariff devised and maintained for the patronage of special interests has imposed.

The Senate is nearer the people today than ever before, partly because of its Democratic majority, partly because of the constitutional amendment which makes future election to its membership dependent upon the people themselves and chiefly because the voters of the nation have but recently rendered a sweeping verdict against reactionary politics and in favor of liberal policies. The Senate has heard and still hears the voice of the American public, demanding freedom from the burdens and the injustice of an excessive tariff. The Democrats of the Senate cannot escape the obligations of their party's pledge. As a matter of duty to themselves and to the country, they must stand squarely behind the tariff bill which the House has passed and which awaits only their due support to become effective.

It's a waste of time to tell your troubles.

A More Beautiful and A More Useful Atlanta.

One of the most timely and fertile enterprises ever projected for Atlanta's good is the movement to establish a city building plan whereby the community's future development may be orderly and well proportioned and in keeping with the needs and comfort of its people. So rapid is Atlanta's commercial advancement that our public facilities are being outgrown.

Our streets are, in many instances, inadequate to the traffic burdens that are forced upon them.

Our sewerage system is taxed to the utmost.

The problem of a future water supply that will be at once wholesome and abundant demands attention.

The rearrangement of terminal facilities with a view to business convenience and economy must be considered.

To assure the contentment and welfare of a continually swelling population, more parks and playgrounds must be provided; and, in order that we may realize the ideals of a true metropolis, more heed must be given to civic beauty.

Through the initiative of the Chamber of Commerce and the co-operation of the city authorities Atlanta has begun an organized effort to this end. Some months ago, at the instance of the Chamber, Council indorsed a movement to secure a city building plan. The Mayor was authorized to appoint a committee of one hundred and twenty-five to be known as the City Improvement Commission. This commission, composed of representative men from all parts of the community, is now earnestly at work on its important task and, if it receives the continued and adequate suport of the municipal government, it will accomplish definite and far-reaching results.

The first step to be taken in the development and execution of a city building plan is to make a topographical survey of Atlanta and its contiguous territory. Until this is done it will be impossible to determine what changes should be made or what the lines of future development should be. In order that we may understand the needs of today and those of decades to come, we must first have this broad outline within which to make detailed plans and estimates.

Such a survey would be invaluable to the city even though it should never be used for an ulterior purpose. It would furnish exact data on the location and the grad. of all streets and would thereby enable the municipal authorities to work more precisely and more economically in the regrading of any and all thoroughfares. As conditions now are our streets are, for the most part, regraded independently one of the other; and the result is that much work which should be permanent must be undone to meet new and unforeseen conditions. A complete topographical survey would obviate all these problems and would save the city a vast deal of money as well as time and labor.

Besides this immediate service, such a survey, as we have said, would furnish the starting point for a far-sighted city building plan, a plan which could be gradually filled in by architects and engineers and in accordance with which the city could shape and direct its growth for fifty years to come. The fund required for this survey is but a trifle compared with the great public and civic progress benefits it would make possible. It is earnestly to be hoped that Council, at its earliest opportunity, will grant the necessary appropriation.

Atlanta's efforts to secure a permanent building plan have aroused the interest and won the praise of the entire country. Newspapers and magazines comment upon this movement as new evidence of the city's alert and forward-looking spirit. The Manufacturers' Record devotes much space in a recent issue to an interview with Mr. Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who discourses the purpose and the far-flung possibilities of Atlanta's latest enterprise. In answering the question, "What is a city plan, what does it mean?" Mr. Moore interestingly says:

"To begin with, it is not merely a 'city beautiful,' nor is it the idea of those who, in working out a plan for a city's future growth, confine their efforts to the artistic and aesthetic. While this is a part of the work the city practical, the city efficient are the major purposes in a city 'built to a blue-print.'"

It will be well for every one to bear this explanation in mind. The city-plan enterprise is not a pursuit of mere prettiness; it is concerned primarily with the people's practical interests. At the same time it takes due account of the importance of making the city comely as well as comfortable; it recognizes the truth that civic beauty itself is a very practical asset. In this connection, Mr. Moore cites the example of Dusseldorf, Germany, a city which has been changed from a drab manufacturing town into one of the most beautiful and inviting spots of all Europe. Dusseldorf has been well described as "a city built for the comfort and convenience of its people, designed as a master architect might design a world's fair to which all mankind was invited for education, recreation and art. Business is made to harmonize with beauty." And we are reminded that "what as done with Dusseldorf can be done with any city, with our city, if the people will but have the dreams and dare to carry them into execution."

The fact is Atlanta is singularly blessed in natural resources and immediate advantages which can be turned to highly artistic effect. Few cities have such rich material for the development of a great park system, and no city has a finer or a more responsive public spirit. Let the same energy and enthusiasm that have pressed other great enterprises to success be marshaled behind the city-building plan and Atlanta will show the world that she is not only a center of industry and commerce, but also of those graces which win the eye and nourish the souls of men.

Penny Lunches For Atlanta Schools.

The tentative effort to supply Atlanta school children with penny lunches has won such hearty approval from teachers and parents and has had so wholesome an effect upon the pupils themselves that Council should have no hesitancy in appropriating the modest fund required to continue and extend this gracious enterprise.

Last autumn the Woman's Board of Visitors, which is auxiliary to the Board of Education, began an experiment with the penny-lunch plan at Inman Park school. Tasteful and nutritious lunches, suited to the season, were prepared and dispensed to the children at the mid-day recess for a penny each. During the winter the lunches were hot, consisting of beans and bread or other well chosen and well cooked articles of diet; with the coming of spring, they have been changed to a lighter and fresher menu. In every instance they are prepared with a view to the Shakespearean counsel:

"Now good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both."

Whoever is interested in reducing the cost of living would find it profitable to study these penny lunches. There is to be sure nothing elaborate about them, and there should not be. But they are wholesome and satisfying. The teachers testify that their effect upon the mental alertness and the behavior of the children is marked. Little boys and girls who are in school from eight in the morning until one or two in the afternoon need something good to eat. The penny lunch solves this really serious problem.

Especially interesting is the fact that the lunches can be sold at a penny each without entailing a deficit, provided of course that the system is carefully managed and that cooking appliances and utensils are furnished. The Woman's Board of Visitors, generously assisted by the Inman Park Girls' club, has thus far conducted this work on its own responsibility and out of its individual resources. An effort is now being made to secure the city's help in order that the plan may be gradually extended to all the public schools. A comparatively small appropriation will suffice and the good that will thereby be accomplished, not only for the individual pupil but also for the efficiency of the public school system is beyond reckoning. It is to be hoped that Council will see fit to hearten and uphold this truly progressive an constructive undertaking.

Just to think: awhile back we had more rain than we knew what to do with.

Uniting Town and Rural Interests.

A few years ago the business men of Trenton, Mo., a town of some seven thousand inhabitants, organized a chamber of commerce for the purpose of upbuilding their community. They were liberal in their subscriptions and faithful in attendance, but for one reason or another the results they had expected were not forthcoming. Finally, when interest in the movement was nearing its lowest ebb, some citizens suggested that the scope of the club be extended to the adjacent country and that farmers and rural residents be invited to its membership. A vigorous campaign to this end was begun with the result that in a short time the enrollment of the organization leaped from one hundred and fifty to five hundred and that both the town and its county are now progressing marvelously.

"The Trenton idea," as this piece of enterprise has come to be called, is now astir in many parts of the Union. "It is simply an effort," comments the Louisville Courier-Journal, "to do away with the imaginary line known as the corporate limits of a town and to remove the artificial barriers between the city and the country." So long as rural and urban interests are considered in any wise antagonistic or even independent, neither of them can develop as they should. The truth is the town and the rural district about it are vitally interdependent and each of them will progress to the extent that they realize and work together for their common welfare.

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce has shown the proper spirit by devoting a large measure of energy to the encouragement of rural interests. It has done a vast deal for the promotion of the boys' corn club movement, for the campaign against the boll weevil and other crop pests and for the general enrichment of rural life not only in Fulton and adjoining counties, but also throughout the State.

It will be well for the boards of trade or chambers of commerce to remember that one of the surest means toward developing their own community is to aid in the development of the surrounding country and to enlist the co-operation of farmers as well as business men.

Weather indications point to a scarcity of rain checks.

Secretary Bryan's idea of diplomacy is an eternity between drinks.

Likewise the baseball pitcher has hardly had time to develop a glass arm.

The umpire by this time is pretty well acclimated to the heat of the bleachers.

Continuing the optimistic trend still further, we believe we'll have a big and a high-priced cotton crop.

The price of living has descended to that extent where a man with a $5,000 a year income can have fried chicken once a week.

The Genealogist

EDWARDS.

SIR BARON CHENEY.

The great family of Cheny or Cheney, of Slaeland, in the Isle of Slappey, founded by Ralph de Carnetoope, of the companions-at-arms of the Conqueror. Robert Cheney, Esq., of Meynee, Langy Co., Derby; descends from Sir Baron Cheney, King's Guard—created Baron Cheney by Henry VII for his services at Bosworth; his brother was Edward Cheney; his son was Robert Cheney, whose oldest son, Robert, entered Grenadier Guards in 1789, served several campaigns with great distinction; was wounded at Dellinger, died at the age of fifty-four years; was buried at Yorkshire. The present Cheney lived in Maryland county, Derby. (Berk's Landed Gentry.)

The first Cheney we find in the United States is one Richard Cheney, one of the founders of Anne Arundel, Md., he received a patent for a land grant, South River Hundred, Md., 1660. "Cheney's Neck." We find his son, Richard Chene; (possibly his grandson), at Georgetown, Md., March 15, 1780. (Founders of Anne Arundel, Md.)

It is very evident that Levi Cheney is of the same family; he was born in Maryland, and married Mehitable Morse. His war record in the American Revolution shows that he enlisted and re-enlisted three or four times and was honorably discharged in 1781. At one time was paid 7 pounds, 10 shillings, for three months' service. He served in Colonel Harrison's, Colonel Hawe's and Colonel Joseph Webb's regiment. He is described as "Levi Cheney, of Walpole, fifty years old, five feet, eleven inches tall, of light complexion, grey eyes." He had a young son "a stripling at the age of eighteen" and when he re-enlisted at age of eighteen, "and did good service," he is described as being "five feet, five inches high, of light complection; and passed muster under Brigadier General Patterson's inspection."

From the above brave men descends Mr. I. C. McCrory and his daughter, Miss Frankie McCrory, of College Park; Mr. Malcom McCrory, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. E. T. Booth, of Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. L. J. Battle, of Athens, Ga., and Mr. John Cheney, of Montgomery, Ala., and many other good citizens in the southern states.

Very respectfully,
College Park, Ga. MRS. MINNIE E. HOGAN.

A DAWN SONG

Dreaming of song, of sunny skies and June,
Within her leafy bower of April night,
The Trush was wakened by a spear of light
That stole within the stillness all too soon.
But at its touch the mem'ry of a tune,
Sung yester-eve, awakened fresh delight
And urged her soul to new and higher flight;
For in the East was that Elysian sight
Of Dawn's pale tints against a fading moon.

Then in a note, that echoed far and wide,
Through all the April glory of the wood,
The bird sent forth the joy she could not hide.
Of every tree there was one brotherhood,
Knit closer by the song's uplifting tide;
So when the tree-tops kiss'd the rising sun
Song-praise and Love were mingled into one.

Captain Barnacle's Log.

BY JOHN H. WISHAR

"Sponges," said Captain Barnacle, "are useful things, maybe, but I have never had any use for them since they caused the wreck of the big full-rigged clipper Northern Light just off the coast of Japan. On this voyage we were bound from Singapore to Victoria, British Columbia, and the entire cargo was sponges. They were packed in heavy casks and were squeezed in tight. It was a very light cargo, too light in fact for the safety of the ship, as I had to carry a lot of ballast to steady her.

"It was just after we passed Mitsuto Head, to the northward of Yokohama, that the ship sprang a leak. It was a trifling leak and I didn't think much of it when the carpenter reported the matter. Of course the men were put at the pumps, and they soon had the ship dry. I went down to look at the hull and was surprised to find the water pouring in at a great rate, but to my surprise it seemed to vanish as fast as it came in.

"I did the best I could to check the leak and went back on deck. Next morning the first mate came in and woke me up.

"'Captain,' says he, 'there's something wrong. The ship seems to have changed her shape over night. Better take a look.'

"I hurried on deck, and, to my surprise, the trim lines of my vessel had vanished. The night before she was a slender clipper ship; now she was a stumpy nosed, broad sided old tub. I was horror-struck.

"'What is it?' I cried.

"'Sponges,' said the mate, and, sure enough, that is what the trouble really was. Those sponges had absorbed the water that had leaked in, and they had swelled. They had burst the barrels in which they were packed, and then they had forced the sides of the ship out until she was like a wicker basket. They continued swelling until there was no semblance of a clipper left to my poor old vessel, and there was grave danger that we would go to pieces way out there at sea. But I managed to work the vessel to the city of Yamahito, and ran her ashore in the harbor. This town was in the north of Japan, and the inhabitants had never seen sponges.

"The first thing I did was to hire a lot of natives to haul out the sponges. These were taken to the beach and speezed out. When the natives saw those big sponges squeezed into almost nothing they thought there was some kind of witchery in it, and had a Buddhist priest to swing incense around before they would do more work.

"After three days I had the ship unloaded, and we beached her on a sandbar, and at low tide she was high and dry. Then I had her caiked with those dry sponges, and when the water touched them they swelled, and the ship was as tight and trim as ever.

"After that I sold the sponges to the Japanese for all kinds of silk goods and rice, and I believe I made about three times as much out of that voyage as I would have if the sponges hadn't wrecked my vessel. But from that day to this I have always refused to carry a complete load of those things."

A Batch of Smiles

"Well, my little man, what can I do for you?" asked the grocer as he rubbed his hands genially together.

"Please, sir, mother says these matches she bought this morning ain't no good."

"No good!" exclaimed the grocer, now looking almost as much worried as the boy. "What's the matter with them? This is the first complaint I've had."

"Can't help that," said the small boy. "Mother says they ain't no good."

"Nonsense!" replied the grocer. Then, taking a match from one of the boxes, he gave it a smart rub, which ignited it immediately, and turned to the boy again. "Well," he inquired, "what have you got to say now?"

The small complainant returned the disdainful look, undaunted.

"That's orl right, guv'nor," he remarked. "but d'you fink my muvver's coming 'ere to strike matches on your boot every time she wants a light?"

THE INCOME TAX

IV.—GRADUATING THE TAX.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Until recent legislation in some of the more progressive states there has been little effort in the United States to graduate income taxes, increasing the rate with expanding incomes. On the other hand, in Europe and Australasia the general tendency has been in that direction for years. There it has been assumed that the right principle of uniformity in taxation is uniformity of burden rather than uniformity of rate. As the widow's mite was more than the richest gifts that were placed in the contribution box, because it was 100 per cent of what she had, while the other gifts represented perhaps only the fraction of 1 per cent of what their donors had, so a tax of $20 may hit the small taxpayer infinitely harder than a tax of $500 hits the large taxpayer. The European idea is that each person shall bear a tax burden delicately adjusted to his ability to bear it, and that the larger the income the higher the tax rate it can bear without putting an undue burden upon the taxpayer.

There are really two forms of graduation, and in the parlance of the tax official they are known as "graduation" and "differentiation." Graduation, under this division, has to do directly with a sliding scale of tax rates, applied to various sized fortunes. Differentiation has to do with a levying of different rates upon incomes secured from different sources. They both aim to produce results that will produce equal burdens upon all classes of taxpayers. With reference to differentiation, Gladstone once used a remarkable expression to differentiate between the sources of incomes. One class of incomes he called "industrious" incomes, because they spring "from the sweat of the brow." The other class he designated as "lazy" incomes, because the only labor involved in getting them is the clipping of coupons or the cashing of dividend checks. Differentiation, then, aims to assess a lower tax against the money a man has to work for than against that which comes to him from investments. Still another form of graduation is that of exempting incomes which fall below a certain fixed amount, the theory being that a man or woman who has no larger income has need for every dollar of it in maintaining the proper standard of living.

England adopted the plan of differentiation, as will be explained later, in 1907, after the most extensive investigation of the workings of the principle in other countries. There were those who asserted that it would result in great loss of revenue. Others believed that it would upset the whole tax system. But after it was tried out there was no loss of revenue, and the chancellor declared that it had worked a moral as well as a fiscal reform. After three years *trial it had proved itself such a satisfactory innova*tion that the government decided to go a step further and fix a system of graduated taxes. Differentiation made incomes that were the result of "the sweat of the brow" bear a tax of 9 pence on the pound and investment incomes a tax of 12 pence, when the income did not go over 2,000 pounds. When the government decided to graduate the tax the differentiation was increased, so that while earned incomes were still taxed 18 cents, or 9 pence, investment incomes were taxed 29 cents instead of 24 cents. When graduation was taken up, the same gloomy prophecies that were made that differentiation would not succeed, came to be made that graduation would fail. But they were mistaken, and England now regards its income tax system the best that civilization has produced.

*Different countries approach the question of grad*uation in different ways. Some of them first make an exemption of a living income, and assess the tax against nothing but the excess of income above that point, levying a different rate of taxation upon each $1,000 of income. If, for instance, the exemption were $1,000 and the total income were $6,000, and the rate 1 per cent on the first $1,000 above that, 2 per cent on the second $1,000, etc., the tax would be calculated as follows: $1,000 at 1 per cent, $10; $1,000 at 2 per cent, $200; $1,000 at 3 per cent, $30; $1,000 at 4 per cent, $4, and $1,000 at 5 per cent, $50; total tax, $150.

On the other hand, some laws provide that an income in excess of the exemption, shall be taxed according to its size, the ascending rate applying to all of the income, instead of to each $1,000 of it on a separate basis. For instance, suppose the exemption is $1,000, and that the rate is made 1 per cent if it does not exceed $1,000 above the exemption, 2 per cent if it does not exceed $2,000, etc. Under this plan the man with a $5,000 income over and above the exemption would pay 5 per cent on the entire $5,000 or $250 on the income.

It has been found upon a careful investigation of the income tax laws of the various countries that $6 per cent of the aggregate population of all the countries having such laws are residents of countries where graduation is a recognized principle. Of the fifty-odd countries which tax incomes, forty-six use some form of graduation. In a large group of countries the average tax rates on incomes of varying sizes were calculated, and it is shown that taxable incomes of $500 paid 1.50 per cent, incomes of $1,000 paid 1.94 per cenih, incomes of $2,000 paid 2.37 per cent, incomes of $5,000 paid 2.92 per cent. The average of all these countries on incomes of $100,000 was 3.89 per cent. These figures are on incomes arising from personal exertion; those derived from invested capital are somewhat higher.

A tabulation of the tax rates in twenty different countries where the principle of differentiation is recognized has also been made by the same authority, K. K. Kennan, of Milwaukee, and the composite distinction between earned and unearned incomes ascertained therefrom. The tabulation shows that where earned income pays a tax of $3, uncarned income would pay $5 on the same amount.

Even with a graduated income tax, and with exemptions amounting to $1,100 as the average for English-speaking countries, not a great many people are vitally concerned in the tax when compared to the whole population. Taking as a group England and fourteen of its colonies, and Hawaii, it is found that the average exemption is $1,100, and that less than one person in twenty has to pay an income tax. In England itself, where only those who have an income of more than $800 have to pay a tax, only one person in thirty has an income that puts him in the income tax paying class. It, therefore, follows that under a system of graduation such as England has, perhaps less than one person in several hundred has to pay any more than a nominal sum.

No other country in the world so thoroughly recognizes the principle of graduation as England and its colonies. While in the United States, where graduation might be taken as an effort fostered by demagogues to shift an undue burden to men of large incomes, it can be said that in England the leading tax authorities, men in no wise influenced by such political considerations, claim that the graduated income tax is the only just one, and that the whole tendency of the times is in that direction.

OFFICIAL NEWS SOON OF BETTER CAR SERVICE

Announcement Will Be Made When President Arkwright's Report Is Received

Official announcement of improved street car service in Atlanta may be expected within the next week or ten days.

As published exclusively in The Journal yesterday afternoon, the state railroad commission has suggested certain improvements and the street car company will make them voluntarily, without the commission having to order them made.

Though C. Murphy Candler, chairman of the commission, was unwilling last night to discuss The Journal's story in detail, he virtually confirmed the essential facts of the story by saying it is true that the commission and officials of the company recently held a conference, that the commission suggested additional service on numerous routes, and that the officials now have the matter under advisement and will report back to the commission in a few days.

In justice to Mr. Candler it should be said that he did not furnish the information published in The Journal yesterday. It came from a reliable source outside of the commission. Mr. Candler and the other members of the commission make it a rule not to discuss matters pending before them officially, as they are in the position of judges.

Mr. Arkwright, when called last night, said he did not care to make any statement either one way or the other.

Nevertheless, it is known that the company realizes the necessity for additional service on numerous lines and is willing to provide the same on its own motion.

Also, the company agrees with the conclusions of the railroad commission as to the routes where these improvements should be made, which is natural, in view of the fact that the commission arrived at their conclusions from analyzing conductors' report sheets on all lines in the city for a period of one week.

These sheets, along with a great deal of other detailed information as to the volume of traffic, were recently filed with the commission in pursuance to an order, and the conferences mentioned by Mr. Candler was the result of a long and thorough examination of the sheets by Mr. Candler and the commission's statistician.

28 PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS IN STATE; EXAMS SOON

Joel Hunter, chairman of the Georgia state board of examiners of public accountants, has called the regular half yearly examination to be held in Atlanta on May 21 and 22. This examination is held in accordance with the certified public accountants law, providing for a board of examiners of public accountants, which was passed in 1908. It is acknowledged that the most proficient auditors carry the degree of C. P. A., and these letters can be written after one's name legally only after this examination has been passed successful.

There are now about twenty-eight certified public accountants registered in Georgia, but it is expected this number will be increased after the examination mentioned. The subjects in which the candidates are to be examined are theoretical and practical accounting, auditing and commercial law as effecting accountancy.

The candidates to stand this examination will be drawn from every section of the state.

MISS WILLIMAN'S PARLORS ARE POPULAR IN ATLANTA

The advent of Miss Williman in Atlanta fills a long felt want and offers the people of this community opportunities for treatment by the various bath processes, a thing hitherto unknown locally.

In fitting up her establishment, every appliance represents the newest and most up-to-date, and from a hygienic standpoint, measures up to the highest standard, and carries the indorsement of prominent physicians and specialists.

Miss Williman's ultimate intention is to own and equip a building for this purpose and is already progressing in this direction.

In order to stimulate this feature of her enterprise, she has decided on the co-operative plan, whereby every purchaser of one share of stock, par value Fifteen Dollars, will be given a fifteen-dollar treatment ticket, and upon completion of the building, each shareholder will participate in all net earnings.

Plain baths, Electric baths, Vapor baths, Electric sun baths, Needle baths, Shower baths, Sulphur baths, Hot Air apparatus for body and limbs, Electric Vibrating chairs, Sitz baths, including attendant, alcohol rub and massages. (Advt.)

CALHOUN STREET SCHOOL, A MODEL FOR CO-OPERATION OF MOTHER AND TEACHER

Mrs. John W. Rowlett Tells of Parent-Teacher Neighborhood Club and the Good Being Accomplished by its Organization

BY MRS. JOHN W. ROWLETT.

The forming of a life plan is of inestimable value to the child. This is the goal toward which every mother is aiming and to make this life plan beautiful and noble, to make intelligent and clear thinking men and women, is the aim of our public schools. The home creates the ideal—the school influences it. The mother according to her enlightenment, produces moral sentiment, but it is the school which cultivates and enriches this sentiment. The very suggestion of the great possibilities of life tend to awaken a desire to realize them and every effort made to benefit the child either by home or school tends to raise the standard in the school. Hence we are forced to see the greater things that may be accomplished by the co-operation of both.

Calhoun street school was built in 1882, being at present the second oldest school building in Atlanta. The first principal was Miss Anna Fuller and during the two years of her incumbency it was a primary school, only four grades being taught. Mrs. Echols succeeded Miss Fuller and under her wise management and inexhaustible energy this school soon became an eight grade school and was known as one of the best if not the very best in the school system.

The present principal Miss Lily Wurm, took charge in September, 1897, and her aim to keep this school in the foremost ranks has been successful. Until the year 1901 the enrollment of this school averaged 420, at which time thedem and for seats became so great that an annex was built to accommodate two more classes, the enrollment reaching an average of 475. In 1911, when the new Forrest avenue school was opened, this school resumed its normal enrollment, the annex being closed.

A THIRTY-ONE-YEAR AVERAGE.

Think for a minute, an average of 450 for 31 years, five hours each day for five days in the week and ten months in the year. Can we estimate the wonderful influence of the teacher who works so conscientiously for the good of our children? The mothers should eagerly grasp the opportunity to co-operate and keep up the high standard that Calhoun has placed. This is a very old building, out of date, no modern improvements, no conveniences whatever and under these adverse conditions it holds its own. The very best library among all the schools is here, many fine reference books having ben added in the past few years by Miss Wurm. A fine piano and a graphophone, also a few choice pictures, copies from the best artists, are among their prized possessions. The receipts from an entertainment given during the past few weeks are to be expended in other pictures.

The good work which has been accomplished here can not be estimated for among those who have taught and ben pupils in this school are the present principals of the Girls' High school, Hill Street, Forrest Avenue, Davis Street, East Atlanta, Luckie Street, Formwalt and the head of the normal department of the Girls' High school. Besides these, the names of many of our high officials and scores of our best citizens were once enrolled on the register of Calhoun school.

A "SOCIAL CENTER."

Making this school a "social center," where mother and teacher may meet on a common ground is no longer an experiment, for with the organization of the Parent-Teacher-Neighborhood club here it has been successfully demonstrated that great good can be accomplished by the mother being brought face to face with the conditions and problems that the teacher has to contend with every day.

This club was organized by Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, following an instructive lecture by Dr. Claude Smith on sanitation, in April of last year. The membership consisted of fifteen with the writer president. They have availed themselves of some of the lectures provided by the congress of mothers, have had the children entertained by the very best story-tellers in the city, had heart-to-heart talks when the various problems of school life was discussed and in every way tried to prove that cooperation meant just that, and nothing more nor less. There were fifty-one names on the roll at the closing meeting.

But the main effort has been to better the material conditions surrounding this school. The grounds were unsafe and unsanitary. So they banded together for the common purpose of bettering conditions. The club circulated petitions, went before the city council asking for an appropriation commensurate with the needs and hope by the opening of the school in the fall to have things in a better condition.

TO SERVE A GREAT END.

These Parent-Teacher-Neighborhood clubs are organized to serve a great end, the betterment of the child, and in our zeal we must not forget to spice this with love and thoughtful care of the teacher who so willingly enters into our plans without a thought, of perhaps, the added burden to herself. Hence it behooves us to make our plans co-operative ones, making the school real "social centers," benefiting all who avail themselves of these privileges.

MODERN WOODMEN ARE TO SPEND DAY AT TALLULAH

The Modern Woodmen of America and their friends will spend May 21 (Wednesday) at Tallulah Falls, according to an announcement circulated Saturday. ## FEDERAL COMPANY GETS U. S. RADIO CONTRACT

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 10—The Federal Telegraph company of San Francisco submitted the lowest estimate for the construction of the high power radio station at the United States naval reservation at San Pablo site Calmite, canal zone, when the bids were opened today at the navy department. ## CONGRATULATES ATLANTA ON CORDIAL HOSPITALITY

J. K. Orr Says Citizens Responded Remarkably to Call for Presbyterians

"Atlanta is to be congratulated upon the readiness with which she has responded to our call for hospitality in her homes," said J. K. Orr, general chairman of the committee on arrangements for the Presbyterian assemblies, yesterday afternoon. The assemblies meet here Wednesday, and homes have been secured for the 1,500 commissioners who are coming from all parts of the country.

"When it is a matter of entertainment in the home, there's none of us can make promises offhand," said Mr. Orr. "There are more than ourselves to be considered, so I think it is remarkable that in four days the citizens should have met fully our request for enough homes to house the remainder of the commissioners, for whom the Presbyterians themselves had no room."

Mr. Orr added that, though the committee feels safe with the homes it has listed now, an emergency might arise under which others would be needed. Therefore, the lists will be kept open, said he, until the last of the commissioners have arrived and been made at home.

Every stratum of worldly possessions is represented by those who have placed their homes so generously at the disposal of this committee in order that the good name of Atlanta for hospitality may be upheld. By no means all of them, nor even the majority of them, are wealthy people. Residents who have much less to give have been just as cordial and just as generous in tendering their full share of the entertainment.

VALDOSTA STORE ROBBED; SUSPECT IS ARRESTED

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Judge Newt A. Morris, of Marietta, and David Comfort, of Tifton, were at the postoffice department with reference to a patent tying device in which they are interested. They saw Postmaster General Burleson, First Assistant Roper and Second Assistant Stewart, all of whom were favorably impressed with the device which, if adopted, will result in great economy in the postoffice department.

Does Your Town Want to Grow?

IF it's a town with the push and the pride to want to get ahead, the first thing to do is make it a good place to live in.

¶ Is it the kind of place the young fellows will stick to and be proud of and want to rear their families in?

¶ Is it the kind of place visitors will really enjoy visiting? Is it the sort of town you men and women think really worth while.

¶ If it is lacking in CORRECT SANITARY CONDITIONS, it will never get over into the growing column.

¶ Sanitary living is the right of the people. It is the just inheritance of the little child. It is the safeguard of the population.

¶ If there's a lurking-place for disease in your home, your family is in danger.

¶ If your town has a breeding place for sickness, you and your neighbors will have to pay the price.

¶ If your town lacks the proper Sewerage facilities, it's in danger.

¶ If the water supply is contaminated, or exposed to contamination, the health of your people is menaced.

¶ If your lighting is inadequate, out-of-date and cheerless, your boys and girls will be the losers. Darkness isn't good for the morals any more than for the eyesight.

¶ Let us talk with you about what your town needs. It's our business to better and boost the town that is ailing. We've cured and cheered more than 300. We'd like to tell you who they are and what we did for them.

MILLTOWN FISHERS NOT LAWLESS, SAYS KNIGHT

Berrien Citizens Can Enforce Game Laws Without Interference, He Writes

Editor Atlanta Journal, Atlanta, Ga.:

Dear Sir—The writer asks space in your columns to answer the article which appeared under the headlines, "State Warden Going to Lawless Section," in the first column of the third page in your issue of May 8, and that you give this article equal prominence as given that article, which is apparently quotations from an interview with Mr. Mercer, state game warden.

Now, then, to begin with, I beg to say that I have no part in this scramble, no interest in it whatever except that I do not purpose to see this county and section unduly criticised and held up to public ridicule and scorn without just cause. My immediate family have lived in what is now Berrien county for more than a century, and in the section around Milltown, Ga. The people in and around the town of Milltown are among the best in blood and character of which the state is justly entitled to boast. It is known throughout this section that Berrien county's officers are fearless in the discharge of their duties, and that the juries in Berrien county, when there is evidence to authorize, will promptly convict, and that the judges who have heretofore presided and now have the honor to preside unhesitatingly pass sentence inflicting prompt, speedy and adequate punishment to those who are convicted. No law broken goes without vindication, and no criminal unwhipped of justice and punishment. There is no difference in the swiftness and certainty of punishment from murder to vagrancy, both inclusive; each and every phase of crime is committed by the offender in this county with the certain knowledge that he will be brought to the bar of justice and his reward meted out to him. A violation of the state game and fishing law is no exception to the rule. Persons have been arrested who have fished in the waters of Berrien county, which waters cover the land of land holders where no consent was had by the violator to fish or hunt upon the owner's land. Each violation of this law hereafter committed, when known and reported will be treated likewise, the offender arrested, prosecuted and by a jury of good, honest yeomanary promptly convicted when the evidence authorized, without the aid, assistance or interference of the deputy game warden or chief state warden, or anybody else. In short, there is no lawlessness at Milltown, Ga., with reference to violation of the fish laws of the state, unless it be that in some instances some shiftless, indolent person slips around without the knowledge or consent of the various land owners whose lands lie in what is known as the Banks millpond, and thereby violates section 7 of the fish and game law of the state.

This man Bolschai, whoever he is, seems to have come to Milltown with the idea that seems to prevail with the state game warden and the Atlanta newspapers that he was down in a section where the people had no regard for law or order, and where the people were barely civilized, and his actions and conduct prove that together with reports he seems to have circulated about the people in this section. This is proven by reason of the fact that he had men arrested who owned hundreds of acres of land lying underneath the waters of this pond in question, i. e., E. M. Giddens, J. H. Bostick and William Pafford, and others, without any effort to find out the truth of what he was doing. Does the game warden, or anybody else, entertain the idea that people who are born and raised around this pond and which for more than three-fourths of a century have held, lived and their parents and kindred beneath this pond, would sit idly by and only exercising their personal rights and liberties given and guaranteed to them by every law, God's law, federal law and state law, would be arrested for such exercising of their right, and such ruthlessness and wanton arrest go uncriticised?

The principal part of lands covered by the Banks millpond are not now, nor have they ever belonged to the Banks estate, but by other parties. It is true that the owners of the mill have the right to the water privilege, and rather the right to back and keep water on the lands of the individuals above referred to, but these land owners have always returned their lands for taxes and paid the same, and the Banks estate nor the holders of the mill property have ever done so, and the owners of these lands have the privilege and perfect right to fish as much as they please provided they do it as prescribed by law, and also to permit their friends or any one else that they would wish, to fish on their lands, and the Banks estate, nor any one else, have any right to forbid it, and certainly no crime is committed by them in so doing.

I notice from the above referred to article, that Mr. Mercer states "it is a serious matter to contemplate such a state of lawlessness in any community in Georgia." Now, then, I desire to say to Mr. Mercer that no such condition exists there. There is a state of lawlessness there. There is this, however, a set of pure-blooded, freeborn, Anglo-Saxon, American citizens with rights there that they have always enjoyed, having them handed down to them by good stock of old stock, and whenever their rights are encroached upon by any one, not excepting a deputy game warden, they will find those same citizens able and ready to take care of their rights and that without flinching. They will proceed quietly and in an orderly way to do that very thing.

No, Mr. Mercer, the citizens of Berrien county do not need your assistance, nor the assistance of the governor, nor the state militia to enforce the law in this county for violations of the fish and game laws, nor for a violation of any other law. Our officers, our citizenship and our juries are equal to any emergency and any task that might confront them now, or hereafter, as has been demonstrated by the record in the past. Your deputy warden came to Milltown, and like a good many other would-be officers, proceeded to violate the law himself, and was caught with the goods, and now he squeals, and it seems you would, unwittingly no doubt, give criticism and publicity which would cause unfavorable comment on this, one of the cleanest sections in the state of Georgia. Before this deputy warden came here there had been arrests, convictions and punishments, arrests and prosecutions pending in the city court against violators of the fishing laws with reference to this same pond, which violations will be punished, provided the evidence warrants it, without any assistance or interference from the state warden, assistants or lawyers that he might bring with him down here, it might not be amiss to say right here that it has not been a great while since the local deputy warden at Milltown was arrested, tried promptly convicted and punished for fishing in the pond without license. Our courts and juries make no exception whenever the offender is brought to the bar and the evidence produced, which is usually forthcoming where crime is committed, he gets conviction and punishment regardless of whether he is charged with violating the fish law or some other law.

The above referred to article also quotes Mr. Mercer as saying, "I am going to Nashville and Milltown next week, and shall attend the trials and arrange for the enforcement of the law as it applies to the Banks pond." Now to this, the writer begs to say that we were enforcing the laws, including the game and fish law, in Georgia without assistance from the game warden or deputy game warden and imported lawyers, and we will continue to do so without them, and will be doing the same thing possibly when the present game law and those who make so much noise about enforcing it have long passed into forgottenness.

No, brother Mercer, step aside here and sit with me on this log, take out one of those long cigars you carry in your pocket, light it, and while the smoke curls away reflect a little bit and see if you do not get back to a normal condition and remember what kind of stock the people of Berrien county come from, and then go back to your office and tell the Atlanta newspapers that you are mistaken about a condition which they refer to almost in the same terms as they would to the Reelfoot Lake tragedy of some years ago. When you wish an investigation made with reference to this pond and the enforcement of the game law we would be pleased to have you come, nowhere in the state of Georgia would you be treated with more respect or feel more at ease, but you will not have to bring with you attorneys and deputies who tote concealed pistols and inflame and incite to discord in our midst. Get ready and come along next week, and get in an automobile with us, and we will go down with you to Milltown and the Banks pond and introduce to you the people that have been classed as "lawless," and let you see for yourself after you have made a careful investigation as to the manner of men they are. Then you can go back to Atlanta and report to the papers that it was all a mistake, and that the deputy warden you sent down here came violating the law instead of seeing it enforced and vindicated.

Mr. Mercer, the state warden, is a personal and warm friend of the writer, and has been for a number of years. He is misinformed and misled, but if he will come down here and go to this "lawless" section he will soon find it out and make reparation for the wrong done, and I know the Atlanta papers will enough to know that they, too, will stand ready to make correction.

GEORGIA MILITARY ACADEMY CADETS IN CAMP AT LAKEWOOD

The boys of the Georgia Military academy, located at College Park, broke camp yesterday at Lakewood, where they had spent the past week. There the boys, under the command of Colonel Woodward, were taught all the rudiments on camp life of real soldiers.

The boys made their beds and helped cook meals. They also were permitted to enjoy a swim daily, and in every way were benefited by a week's life outdoors. It was with much regret that they pulled up the stobs and folded their tents to wait until another spring shall roll around, when they shall again be permitted to enjoy the novelty of sleeping in tents instead of quarters in the dormitory at the college.

HAVE YOUR GAS METER TESTED IF YOU THINK IT'S TOO FAST

City's Smoke and Gas Inspector, C. P. Poole, Has Meter-Testing Apparatus in City Hall, and to Get a Test Made You Only Have to Ask Him

People who think their gas meters are registering more gas than they are using may have the question settled by the city smoke and gas inspector, C. P. Poole, by simply applying to him for a test.

There is now installed in his office a meter testing apparatus for the benefit of the general public.

To get your meter tested, you simply call Inspector Poole and give him your name and street address. He notifies the gas company and they send out and get your meter and take it to the inspector's office. If the test shows the meter to be correct, it costs you $1. If the test shows the meter to be incorrect, it costs you nothing, and the gas company gives you a new meter.

Inspector Poole is an expert and his meter tester is the finest built. The gas company questions neither his ability nor the accuracy of his apparatus. The inspector and the apparatus are provided by the city government for the public. So if you think your gas meter is running too fast, don't quarrel about it. Have a test made.

CANDLE POWER TEST.

Nor is this all Inspector Poole is doing in the matter of gas.

He has in his office an apparatus to test the candle power of gas, and is using it three times a day. He keeps a record of the candle power as shown by these tests, and furnishes the gas company with the figures at regular intervals.

Gas loses some of its candle power by the pipes absorbing the illuminants in the gas, and by decrease in temperature after the gas leaves the tanks.

Gas men know this and try to make up for it by increasing the candle power at the tanks so that when the gas reaches the customer its candle power will come up to the required standard.

Since Inspector Poole commenced furnishing reports to the gas company the candle power has increased considerably. He believes the company saw from his tests that the surplus at the tanks to offset the diminution as above explained was not sufficient, and accordingly ran the candle power still higher. Previous to the installation of Inspector Poole's apparatus the gas company's was the only one in Atlanta, and it is at the gas tanks. So that while the company can test for candle power at the tanks with its photometer, as the apparatus is called, it could not, until the inspector's tests began, determine the candle power it was actually delivering to the public.

ZIMMER GIVES BARBECUE IN MISS FISHER'S HONOR

Many Friends of "Farmer Bill" Enjoy Feast and Dancing at Kimballville

Genial Will V. Zimmer was host on Saturday afternoon to one of his great barbecues at his country home, Kimballville. The affair was given in honor of Miss Marie Fisher, of Charleston, S. C., who has been visiting relatives in the city for several weeks.

The barbecue was served in a pavilion which Mr. Zimmer has for that special purpose, and his 100 guests were treated with one of the best barbecues that the genial "farmer" has ever produced, and that is saying much when it is remembered that he has been the host to many barbecues ere this.

After the spread the party enjoyed dancing for the rest of the afternoon.

MANY FINE IMPROVEMENTS IN PEACHTREE HEIGHTS

New Residence Suburb of E. Rivers Company Is Progressing Rapidly

Progress of improvements in Peachtree Heights park, the new residence suburb put on the market by the E. Rivers Realty company, is surprising to people who have visited it recently.

Cement sidewalks are being laid in front of every residence lot on Muscogee and North Muscogee avenues and on Rivers road. Sewer and water connections have been laid at the edge of the lots, so that the pavement will not have to be torn up in the future.

Huberdahm road through the park is now being taken by almost as many automobiles as travel Peachtree. It is a fine drive through one of the prettiest sections around Atlanta.

In all there are nearly five miles of paved road through the park and more pavement is being laid as rapidly as the owners consider consistent with good results.

FRAUD IN PURCHASES CHARGED BY BATHRICK

Ohio Congressman Asks Investigation of Forty Bureaus in Regard to Purchases

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Charges that the present methods of making purchases of supplies for the federal government opens the way to graft "for parasites of large and small degree," were made in a letter which Representative Bathrick, of Ohio, filed today with a plea for his measure, recently introduced, to provide authority for a special committee on buying and selling.

Mr. Bathrick named forty bureaus and bureau chiefs that he says should be investigated at once by a committee on buying and selling, with a view to reforms. Mr. Bathrick stated there should be one central point and authority for the purchasing of the million dollars or more of government supplies. "I believe we are wasting millions of dollars," said he.

HOUSE ASKS PRESIDENT TO NAME INDORSERS

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Carrying an endorsement of the policy of having the president make public endorsements of candidates appointed to federal judgeships, the house today passed a bill creating a new district judgeship in the eastern district of Pennsylvania. The purpose of the bill is to take care of one of the present judges, incapacitated by ill health.

Republican Leader Mann sought to embarrass the Democrats by offering an amendment that the president shall make public the indorsements of the persons appointed to the new judgship. During the Taft administration the Democrats voted for bills carrying similar clauses. On today's vote the Democrats divided, and the amendment was adopted on a roll call vote 189 to 81.

MUSIC FESTIVAL CHORUS THANKS ASSN. AND OTHERS

Resolution Expresses Appreciation of Big Assn., Generosity, Director and Organist

The members of the Music Festival chorus have drawn up resolutions of thanks and appreciation directed to the officers of the Atlanta Music Festival association and to Dr. Percy J. Starnes, director and Charles B. Sheldon, organist. These resolutions set forth the many benefits and privileges which have been accorded to members of the chorus, and express gratitude for the same. The resolutions are as follows:

"Whereas, the Atlanta Music Festival association has, through its directing officers, made possible the organization and maintenance of a festival chorus, and

"Whereas, the said Atlanta Music Festival association has from time to time manifested an interest in, and care for, the said chorus by providing, free of charge to its members, a place of meeting, an ample and well selected musical library and a director second to none in the country, and,

"Whereas, the said directors of the said Atlanta Music Festival association have further manifested their interest in said chorus by the entirely unprecedented and altogether unparalleled offer of a free ticket to the season of grand opera just closed in this city, to each member of said chorus whose record as an active member showed a stated percentage of attendance at the regular rehearsals, which offer was faithfully carried out by said Atlanta Music Festival association.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved that the festival chorus, through its appointed committee, hereby extend to the Atlanta Music Festival association, its profound appreciation of the season of grand opera it has just enjoyed, and that said festival chorus pledges itself individually and collectively to continue loyalty to the Atlanta Music Festival association.

"Be it further resolved, that the chorus extend its appreciation to Dr. Percy J. Starnes, our director, for his efforts in giving to Atlanta such a chorus as we now have.

"Resolved further, that we extend to our pianist and organist, Mr. Charles B. Sheldon, our appreciation for earnest and splendid work he has rendered the Music Festival chorus.

"Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the directing officers of said Atlanta Music Festival association, and that a copy also be published in the daily papers of the city of Atlanta, and a copy be retained by the librarian.

THEY WED ON THE DAY THEIR ENGAGEMENT WAS ANNOUNCED

Howell B. Schumpert Got a Marriage License and He and Miss Lillian Slater Said "What's the Use of Waiting?"

In the society columns of April 27 the engagement of Miss Lillian Dua Juan Slater to Mr. Howell B. Schumpert was announced, the wedding to take place on the first Sunday in June.

For weeks at the Slater home, 136 Rawson street, the pretty young daughter of the house has been discussing such matters as trousseau, wedding marches and honeymoons, but during the past week the subject was not one of such unfailing interest to her as it had been before the announcement.

After father faced Lillian with her indifference.

"Well, you see, father," she replied, "how can I be interested in a wedding in June when I was married the Sunday night on which my engagement was announced?"

When the news finally leaked out the friends of the young people were just about as flabbergasted as was Mr. Slater. To think that they had been counting on attending that wedding for days and days, and here the two principals had been wed barely ten hours after all their friends knew it! They were surprised, but surprise soon gave way to laughter, and laughter to the heartiest of congratulations.

It was the night of the twenty-seventh itself that the knot was tied. The engaged couple, together with Miss Ines Roark and Mr. Marion Beddingfield, had gone to the English Lutheran church that evening.

It might have been during the sermon or just after the second hymn that Howell Schumpert pulled something from his pocket and showed it to his fiancee. It was a marriage license.

Nothing was easier then than to slip quietly back to Dr. W. C. Schaeffer's parsonage right after the service and there be pronounced man and wife. They kept the secret and so it was that not until three weeks later the news became public hat the June bride was an April one instead.

MRS. HOWELL B. SCHUMPERT.

ATLANTA IS STINGY IN THIS T. B. FUND GIVING

Of $5,000 Asked for Year's Fight on White Plague, $675 Given

Canvass for funds for the support and maintenance of the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis association during the current year has resulted so far in the raising of only a comparatively small portion of the amount needed.

The people of Atlanta have been asked to give $5,000 for the support of this institution in 1913. The total amount required is nearly $10,000. It is expected to raise the difference thruout subscriptions from the county, the city, stated contributions and other sources.

Fulton county, through the commissioners, has already given $600, but this applies on that portion of the fund which it is expected to raise from other sources than the public.

The people of Atlanta themselves, and a very few of them at that, have given so far a total of $675 of the $5,000 which they have been asked to contribute. The entire amount is absolutely needed, or it would not have been asked for.

The canvass for further funds will be renewed during the coming week and will be continued until the entire amount is raised.

Those who have so far subscribed to the fund and the amounts given are as follows:

David Woodward, $100; Hugh M. Willet, $50; Kelley Bros., $50; C. J. Haden, $50; W. S. Witham, $50; Shepard Bryan, $25; C. E. Harmon, $25; George W. McCarty, $25; G. R. Solomon $25; H. S. ## CONGRESS IS LIKELY TO PASS MILITIA PAY BILL

General Wm. G. Obear Is Advised That Bill Has Fine Prospects

In the opinion of Quartermaster General William G. Obear the prospects for the passage of a militia pay bill at the coming regular session of congress are very bright.

General Obear is very much interested in this bill and while adjutant general of Georgia gave his influence and support to the movement. He is a member of the executive committee of the National Guard Association of the United States, which is actively behind the pay bill.

It is reported that for the first time since the agitation for pay for members of the militia was began there is a secretary of war in the cabinet who is earnestly committed to a study of the question.

A bill is in course of preparation for consideration by the executive committee of the National Guard association, the judge advocate general of the army, the secretary of war and the chairmen of the senate and house committees on military affairs.

If finally agreed upon by these officials it will be submitted to the adjutant generals of the various states and then introduced in both houses of congress.

METHODIST WOMEN HOLD ANNUAL MISSION MEET

Atlanta District's Affairs Are Shown to Be Progressing Well at St. Mark's Session

The annual district meeting of the Woman's Missionary society of the Methodist church for Atlanta district convened at St. Mark's church May 7 and 8. The conference and newly elected district officers spoke of their work.

Mrs. Lott Warren, president of St. Mark's auxiliary, greeted the members.

Mrs. D. G. Henderson reported 123 new organizations in north Georgia in eight months.

Mrs. H. H. Tucker made a plea for better protection of the working girls by providing homes that she may be able to avoid the cheap and unsafe boarding places.

Mrs. K. S. Chipley, agent, reported 3,000 families should have "The Voice" in their homes, whereas only about 500 subscribe to the publication. The greatest growth this year has been among the young people. Plans are afoot to have the social service department organized into a club with the right to join the federation.

Two young girls who have offered themselves for missionaries were in attendance, Misses Winnie Smith and Willie May Bridwell.

A call comes to Atlanta district from the Woman's council to raise this year $12,767 an increase of $3,968 over last year.

The needs in all fields are reported urgent; buildings and equipments are said to be inadequate.

A request was made that the annual report of the district secretary be published in the Wesleyan Advocate.

At roll call 103 representatives of the various churches responded.

Drs. T. R. Kendall, J. S. Jenkins, W. P. Lovejoy, L. L. Rivers and A. M. Huchlett were introduced.

Two solos were rendered by Mrs. Paul Key and Mrs. Annie Mays Dow.

Mrs. T. R. Kendall gave instructive Bible lessons on both days. The members were served with lupaicons by the St. Mark's ladies.

Echoes from the Woman's council recently held in Birmingham, were brought by Mrs. Allbright, Mrs. McEachern, Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Kendall, Mrs. Nichols and others.

North Georgia stands first in increase of auxiliaries and women but third in funds.

An increase of 605 auxiliaries throughout the church, south, is report for the past year. The council now maintains thirty-seven city mission boards, twenty-one Wesley Houses, and eighty-three home workers in the home field.

A proposition made by Sam Tate, of Tate, Ga., to the council through Rev. Nath Thompson, to give 5,000 acres of land and $50,000 to establish a vocational school, provided the council raise $150,000, had to be declined because there are already calls from established fields for $60,000 more than the council has to appropriate.

Much regret was expressed that Miss Mabel Head must lay down the work for a season because of illness. Miss Daisy Dacies is managing Miss Head's department as well as her own.

A motion was carried that a telegram as greeting be sent to the mission board of the Methodist church, south, now in session in Dallas, Tex., and Mrs. Albright, Mrs. McEachern and Mrs. Mauck were appointed on the committee. Mrs. Luke Johnson is in attendance at Dallas.

A committee composed of Mrs. H. T. Moore, Mrs. W. M. Nichols and Mrs. Ingle submitted resolutions thanking the St. Mark's ladies and others for courtesies extended. Mrs. C. A. Mauck read a clipping from a daily paper stating that the young men of the State university had decided to allow no wine at their banquet this year, and suggested that, as mothers and sisters, the members of the conference, should express appreciation of the stand taken. Mrs. Clarence Johnson, Mrs. Jennie Armstrong Spain and Mrs. H. O. Reese were appointed a committee to write to the "Georgia boys."

The Woman's Missionary society has raised $2,790,272.40 since its organization.

Miss Mary Daniel, deaconess and head resident of the Wesley house, and Miss Cloud, deaconess nurse, told of their work.

Mrs. Spain gave an admirable talk on "Social Service." She defined social service as "such ministrations to humanity as tend to correct its wrong and unhappy conditions."

Mrs. H. L. Crumley spoke in the interest of the column in the Wesleyan Advocate edited by herself. She said she is like the woman who said "the Bible says." The man that bloweth not his own horn, his horn it shall not be blowed."

The next annual meeting will be held, by invitation, at the Druid Hills church.

GA. TECH BOYS PUT ONE OVER ON J. CAESAR AND HIS VICTORIOUS HOSTS

When It Comes to Real Triumphant Celebrations They Can Back the Old Roman Off the Boards—In Approved Fashion Saturday Night They Let It Be Known They Had Bested Georgia at Baseball

When one Julius Caesar returned triumphant from the three parts of Gaul with thousands of scalps dangling from the belts of his battered army every able bodied individual tossed a hat into the air and celebrated the great victories, and this was thought to be "some" celebration.

But—

Compared to the entrance into Atlanta Saturday night of the student body from Georgia Tech following the defeat of the University of Georgia at baseball this old line of applause was only a trifle. It was a case of Johnny Heisman yelling back to Julius Caesar, "Come on old boy and see how a real celebration is pulled off."

At the time Caesar returned from Gaul it was a tired bunch of braves that followed him through the streets of his native town but in the case of Tech and Atlanta it was different. The hundreds of Tech students had exerted their vocal organs but in body they possessed all the strength of youth and if there was a nook or cranny around the busy portion of Atlanta they did not traverse none of the police were able to find it. They went here and then there, and everywhere you could hear the Yellow Jacket yell and rightfully so for Georgia had been deefated. Not one defeat but two.

There was a brass band at the head of the procession and in this the celebration excelled those of centuries back. Some people can sing without music and some with music but when a band is at work every can carry a tune or at least make an effort. The music from the trombone, cornet, flute and drum inspires music into the soul of every one. Pent up feelings of perhaps years are turned loose and it is easy to join in the refrain.

ORATORY A FEATURE.

While the music and singing was a big part of Saturday night's celebration speech-making broke in for its share of attention. Every student at the school just knew he was a good orator and every member of the team that won over Georgia had a friend who wished to make a speech. In this way everybody spoke and spoke about everybody. Coach Johnny Heisman first came in for applause and later the "bunch" was yelling for "Black Jim," the negro janitor at the school, who happened to carry water to Pitchers Eubanks and Pitts as they were fanning the Georgia batters.

But to tell just how the celebration began and ended:

Saturday morning the Tech student body, 300 strong, went to Athens, Ga., to witness the annual Tech-Georgia baseball game. The trip was made in a special train of seven coaches. The lunch was in Athens just four hours but in that time saw Tech defeat Georgia and then the return trip was begun.

At 8:50 o'clock Saturday night the special train arrived and with it came 300 glad hearts. Everybody was keyed to the guns with love for their school and at once a parade through the streets was begun. With a band at the head of the procession the students took Peachtree street and after a bit of speechmaking in front of the Piedmont hotel, the outfit marched to The Journal office and there let out a few more songs, yells and speeches.

Tin pans, horns, bells and every other article that would serve to torture a sleeping individual was used in the downtown celebration. First, there would be enough noise to make the midway ballyhoo artists turn their heads in shame, and then there would be a funeral march, the six "cheer leaders" marching slowly through the streets with a flag in a coffin. This was supposedly Georgia's goat, and all the funeral rites attended the final burial at Tech Flats late Saturday night.

Next week Tech and Georgia play a couple of games in Atlanta, and there is another celebration booked. It may be by Tech students or it may be by the supporters of the Red and Black, but at any rate, there is to be another mammoth procession, the like of which has never been shown Atlantians.

Her Idea

A gentleman who had been in Chicago only three days, but who had been paying attention to a prominent Chicago belle, wanted to propose, but was afraid he would be thought too hasty. He delicately broached the subject as follows:

"If I were to speak to you of marriage after having only made your acquaintance three days ago, what would you say to it?"

"Well, I should say never put off till tomorrow that which you should have done the day before yesterday."

DR. BROUGHTON'S FIRST ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED

Former Atlanta Pastor Receives High Praise for His Work in England

The first anniversary of Dr. Len G. Broughton's assumption of the pastorate of Christ church, London, is commented upon at some length in the South London Press of April 25, in an article which gives high praise to Dr. Broughton and prophesies a successful future for him and for his work.

"In the brief space of twelve months much has been accomplished," the article reads in part. "The church has been thoroughly cleansed, a process of which it stood in great need, and the adjacent hall has been remodelled and practically rebuilt. Christ church can now lay claim to one of the finest buildings in the kingdom for school and institutional labors. The church membership has been increased, and, to sum matters up, Christ church has become the home of what might be called 'aggressive Christianity.'"

In connection with the anniversary of Dr. Broughton's arrival, impressive celebrations were held at the church and plans made to do within the next year many things for the church, its members and humanity at large.

PHEASANT FOR WARDEN.

One of the best examples of the taxidermist's art ever seen at the state capitol is shown in a pheasant received Saturday morning by State Game Commissioner Jesse E. Mercer from Gilbert R. Rossignol, of Savannah, a former deputy game warden for Chatham county. The bird is of a beautiful color, with tail feathers three feet long, and is so perfectly stuffed and mounted that it appears life-like.

GEORGIAN OF YE OLDEN DAYS WAS ORIGINAL HUSKY CITIZEN; WALKED 1,235 MILES IN ONE DAY

At Least Records in Secretary of State's Office Say He Did—Just in His Daily "Run," Too

Records just unearthed by Secretary of State Philip Cook from some of the old musty books in his office at the capitol prove beyond all peradventure that Georgia can boast the greatest marathon walker of the past century, not excepting Weston, the champion long-distance peedstrian of the present age.

An dwhat is strange about Secretary Cook's discovery is that the fame of Georgia's celebrity has never figured in song or story although the records show that between breakfast and supper, on August 6, 1794, he walked a distance of 1,235 miles, and took an hour and a half off for dinner.

This wonderful individual was named Thomas Cooper, and he is described in the records as a deputy surveyor. Secretary Cook ran across his remarkable achievement while delving into the old Shorter land fraud grants. The secretary of state has bee nsummoned to appear in the federal court at St. Charles, La., on May 24 to give testi*mony regarding the old land frauds* which have resulted in hundreds of persons being swindled out of large amounts.

The federal authorities will place on trial at St. Charles a man who is charged with using the mails to defraud, it being alleged that he carried on a correspondence with a number of persons who he had interested in worthless titles to Georgia p roperty, these titles being based on the old fraudulent land grants, which a hundred years ago were declared void an dillegal by the Georgia legislature.

Secretary Cook finds that on August 4, 1794, James Shorter obtained warrants to 1,181,000 acres of land in Montgomery and adjoining counties and that two days later, on August 6, 1794, Shomas Cooper certified that on that date he had surveyed and properly marked 247 land lots of 1,000 acres each. Every one of these land lots was five miles around, and according to the rough plats furnished by Cooper, he surveyed them all in one day, which would have required him to have traveled 1,235 miles. In each instance the land lots are marked at all corners and all sides by "pine trees."

The records show that on the same day, August 6, 1794, James Shorter put in a busy day for Cooper, surveying and platting land lots aggregating 500,000 acres.

The man arrested in Louisiana was arraigned for trial early 1st December, but his little boy died the dy before the trial and the case against him was continued. During the first week or two folowing his arrest the authorities intercepted letters addressed to him which contained drafts, money orders and checks approximating $80,000, all of which was sent him for Georgia land.

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY GETS A BEQUEST OF $5,000

NEW YORK, May 10.—According to copy of the will and appraisal filed in this city today of the estate of Alice Marian Curtis, the Milton, Mass., millionairess, the Atlanta university receives a legacy of $5,000 cash, as does Booker Washington's Tuskegee and the Hampton institutes. There were many gifts to public institutions. The gifts of the three above named were as a memorial of the work done by her deceased mother, Marion Curtis, during the struggle against slavery before the Civil war.

MANCHESTER

Its High Standard of Citizenship

One progressive, public spirited citizen can be worth more to a town than a hundred of the other sort.

Manchester's superior natural and special advantages have attracted a large number of the best type of citizens from other sections. It is an exemplification of the pioneer spirit.

There are but few wealthy people in Manchester, but a plenty of "live wires" of moderate means now, who are steadily forging ahead in their respective pursuits. Everybody is busy. Nobody seems to have time for playing checkers or ring marbles, or conducting debating societies during business hours.

There is a snappy, bustling, quick-step pace to things that pleases and attracts the thrifty, the energetic.

Manchester's superb citizenship has within five years transformed its hills and valleys into a beautiful, thriving city, where law and order are pre-eminent, where nearly everybody owns his home, where graft is unknown; and there abounds a civic spirit of the kind that has built great cities like DesMoines, Rochester, Atlanta, and others.

Local Encouragement Must Be Given

The American Railway Supply Co., incorporated and capitalized at $250,000, desires to make general office headquarters in this city, provided some financial assistance is given by local people. The concern will handle railway appliances of merit, and besides engaging in the manufacture of appliances of their own they will be distributors for other factories. It is hoped to secure subscriptions locally to its 8 per cent preferred and common stock, which is reasonably expected to pay 25 per cent dividends. Representation on the board of directors will be given and a fair salary is some good local man who can handle the office under the president. Interested parties should address F. S. ## Futility

O'HARA DEFENDS SELF AGAINST IMMORAL CHARGE

Lieutenant Governor of Ohio Tells of Incidents on Night in Question

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, May 10.—Maud Robinson, accuser, and Lieutenant Governor Barratt O'Hara, respondent, in accusations of immorality presented in the Illinois senate against the latter today, offered before the senate investigation committee testimony which differed in one detail but not agreed in essential matters.

Both denied improper intimacy, and differed in the single statement made by Miss Robinson that on the night of January 17, O'Hara visited the suites at the hotel Sherman occupied by Miss Robinson and another woman. According to Miss Robinson, O'Hara called at the apartment after the Thomas Vredenburgh, Harry Gibbons, a Chicago court bailiff, Miss Robinson and another woman had visited the cafe of the hotel Sherman and the Lambs cafe, across the street.

O'Hara stated, and in this testimony he was supported by Frank J. Jacobson, an advertising man, that after leaving the Lambs cafe, the second one visited that evening, he met Jacobson at the Press club about midnight, and with the latter, at a short order restaurant and then went home, accompanied by Jacobson. In this connection he offered to produce as witnesses his mother and his father.

He accounted in similar detail for his public appearance on the next day, January 18, at a luncheon, a banquet, and at the theater. He named numerous witnesses who could confirm his testimony on these points. On the remainder of the eighteenth, he played poker with members of the Press club, naming a number of them, until 6 o'clock Sunday morning. In support of this story, he offered to produce checks against him at the Press club. This was the morning of the 19th. The most of the day he spent at his office and the home of his parents. He attended the Olympic theater late in the performance and sat in a box alone. His appearance at the theater was explained by him as follows:

The manager of the theater, a friend, had given him a box to attend the first performance of a play on the night in question. Not desiring to sit through a performance he offered the box to Vredenburgh, a friend of his. It was Vredenburgh who showed great courtesy in securing a home for him at Springfield, and who introduced him to Miss Robinson on a train coming from Springfield to Chicago on January 17. O'Hara dropped in at the play late because the manager asked the theater desired to obtain his opinion of the production. Leaving the theater, O'Hara met Vredenburgh and the two women and being "hungry as a sandwich" with them at a cafe. He then returned to his home.

In his testimony O'Hara said he could not remember the name of the woman who was with Miss Robinson. He stated, however, that Vredenburgh had told him that he had registered the women as Laving husbands, at the request of the women, who had a parlor in common. Vredenburgh explained that this was because the women desired to receive their friends, including several men, without having their guests annoyed by possible questioning on the part of the hotel management. The lieutenant governor also stated that at no time during the period under investigation did he take a drink of anything intoxicating.

In interviews at Madison, Wis., with Mrs. Mabel Dubois Inbusch, daughter of former Governor James O. Davidson, of Wisconsin, whose name had been brought into the case by the confession of Miss Robinson, Mrs. Inbusch denied that she had ever met a Miss Robinson in Chicago.

H. L. CLOTFELTER.

H. L. CLOTFELTER MAKES GOOD IN DRUG BUSINESS

Has Managed Jacobs' Branch Store Number 2 Since March, 1909

That a strong personality, courteous treatment, devotion to business will win has been thoroughly demonstrated by H. L. Clotfelter, the popular manager of Branch No. 2, 266 Peters street, of the chain of Jacobs' drug stores.

Mr. Clotfelter joined the army of Jacobs' men in 1909. In March of the same year this big drug concern opened their second branch store at the present location, and placed Mr. Clotfelter in charge as manager.

From the opening day his efforts have been marked with success and he still holds the position as manager. While to make a comparison of the store and business of the day it opened and at present one would say that the growth of business has been phenomenal. But it has not. The business has been established on conservative business principles and has steadily grown since the day the store was established.

The prescription department of this store is one of the largest of the outlying drug stores. It is also accorded a liberal patronage of farmers who trade in Atlanta.

Prior to his coming to Atlanta Mr. Clotfelter was connected with W. H. Lee & Son, of Conyers, one of the largest small town drug stores in the state. Mr. Clotfelter is still glad to claim Conyers as his home.—(Advt.)

SIMMONS FAVORS PLAN ON TARIFF VALUATIONS

Guide of Tariff in Senate Sees Merit in Making McAdoo Appraiser of Importations

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Chairman Simmons of the finance committee, sees merit in the amendment to the tariff bill suggested today by Assistant Attorney General Denison and Assistant Secretary of Treasury Curtis to authorize the secretary of the treasury to proclaim valuations on imports. It is claimed that would prevent undervaluations and avoid confusion resulting from fluctuating foreign market values and ad valorem rates.

After the department officials had explained their proposed amendment to the senator today he declared it a worthy proposal and that it would receive the most thorough consideration by the committee. The plan seemed to him to be of chief value as an absolute preventive of fraud on the part of importers in wilful undervaluations to reduce duties they would be required to pay.

"The bill as it is," said Chairman Simmons, "has many safeguards against undervaluations, but the proposal to empower the secretary of the treasury to fix import valuations in the American market would be an additional check. It would answer the principal objection advanced toward an ad valorem tariff system. The suggestion will be given the most serious consideration." The plan will be taken up by the committee next week. Chairman Underwood, of the ways and means committee, also was consulted by Mr. Denison and Mr. Curtis.

Chief interest in the tariff now lies in the contest over the question of public hearings precipitated by Senator Penrose. There is a possibility the Republicans may rally enough Democratic support to their plan to defeat the majority party in its tariff program at this juncture. Such a development undoubtedly would result in slowing up consideration of the measure in the senate. That is the Democratic chief objection to public hearings.

They feel that hearings would not result in material alterations of the bill and that the country is entitled to the new law as soon as it possibly can be made ready for the statute books.

Senators Ransdell and Thornton, of Louisiana, are openly in favor of the hearings. Senator Martine and others have expressed themselves favorably to them, but the Democratic leaders assert they will have enough votes to defeat the Penrose amendment when it comes up Tuesday. The bill then will be formally referred to the finance committee.

Secretary Redfield suggested today to Chairman Simmons that the committee consider the advisability of changing the date that some of the schedules become effective. The textile industry is particularly desirous of gaining a little time to adjust itself to the new conditions and to get rid of valuable material upon which high duties have been paid.

Another suggestion made by Secretary Redfield referred to the advisability of having the income tax computed from July 1, 1913, instead of January 1, 1913.

Let Your Poor, Tired, Chafed, Tender Feet "Spread Out" Gloriously in a Bath of TIZ!

Send at Once for Free Trial Package.

"O, O, glory what a feelin'! Wonderful what TIZ will do for your feet!" Just take your shoes off, and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, achy, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a TIZ bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy. They'll look up at you and almost talk, and then they'll take another dive in that TIZ bath! Yes, TIZ is life to feet!

The man or woman who says there's anything like, or as good as, TIZ never had a foot in a TIZ Bath. You'll be able to wear smaller shoes, too, when you use TIZ; your feet will keep cozy.

Miss M. Pearl Lloyd, Glendora, Wis., got one box of TIZ for her mother "She has had sore, tender feet for a long time," writes Miss Lloyd, "but after using TIZ her feet are not troubling her."

TIZ operates under a new principle, drawing out all the poisonous exudations that make feet sore, corny and tired. There's nothing else like TIZ, so refuse any imitation. If anyone offers you a substitute, just remember your poor, suffering feet, and tell him to give you what you asked for.

TIZ, 25 cents a box, sold everywhere, or sent direct on receipt of price. Money back if TIZ doesn't do all we say. For a free trial package write today to Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill. Recommended by all Drug Stores, department and general stores.—(Advt.)

BIG TALLULAH CASE IS LOOMING CLOSE AT HAND

Depositions of Three Witnesses Taken for Trial in Clayton Soon

Depositions of three witnesses in the suit of the state to oust the Georgia Railway and Power company from property adjacent to Tallulah Falls were taken Friday morning in the office of Attorney General Thomas S. Felder by attorneys representing the power company.

Those who were examined were Prof. C. M. Strahan and Prof. J. C. Koch, of the state university at Athens, who made surveys of the property last year, and John D. Moss, who originally owned a considerable portion of the land in dispute.

These witnesses live outside of Rabun county, where the trial of the suit is to occur, and for this reason it was necessary that their depositions be taken. Representing the power company in the interrogations were Attorneys Alex King, Charles T. Hopkins and Luther Z. Rosser, all of Atlanta.

The state was represented by Attorney General Felder and Attorneys Edgar Watkins, of Atlanta, and R. C. Ellis, of Tifton.

The big case comes to trial at Clayton, Rabun county, on May 26, a special session of the superior court having been called for it.

FARMERS FLEECED BY INSANE MAN'S TRICK

Ernest Nelson, an Atlanta man, who escaped the early part of the week from the state insane asylum at Milledgeville, Ga., was arrested Saturday morning near the Terminal station on the charge of having fleeced George Manus and H. W. Pair, two farmers, who live near Macon, of $10 apiece.

Nelson's mother, who lives at 23 1-2 Whitehall street, received word the other day that her son had fled from the asylum, where he was sent several months ago. She notified the local police, with the result that he was taken into custody but a few hours later.

According to Manus, Nelson boarded the train for Atlanta at Macon and there went through the coaches, asking the passengers to allow him to look through whatever checks they possessed. He told them that he was searching for a certain bill on which was a large premium.

Manus was one who let Nelson examine his money. When the roll was handed back to him, says Manus, it was $10 shy. Nelson vigorously denied taking the money, and Manus decided that he must have been mistaken.

When the train reached Atlanta, however, Manus thought better of it, and decided to wait at the Terminal for the next train from Macon. Nelson, it seemed, having alighted before the train reached Atlanta.

When the second train rolled in Manus was met by Pair, who was also looking for Nelson, having dropped $10 to him by the same route. They finally located their man near the station and called an officer. He was arrested and is now at police headquarters.

HEAVY SHIPMENTS FROM WEST OF COTTON HULLS

State Entomologist E. L. Worsham is on the lookout for shipments into Georgia of cotton seed hulls from Texas and other western states, known to be infected with the boll weevil, and is enforcing rigidly the quarantine law which prohibits such shipments from these states unless accompanied by a clean bill of health from their own entomologists.

The high price of cotton seed hulls in the seaboard states has given renewed activity to the hull market and those western states blessed with a big cotton crop last year are shipping east thousands of tons.

According to the members of the Cotton Seed Crushers' association of Georgia, composed of the oil mill men of the state, the increased consumption of cotton seed meal and hulls for feeding purposes and the short crop of cotton in Georgia last year have caused the supply of cotton seed hulls to be almost exhausted in this state and hence the shipments from the west.

It is expected by the state department of entomology that the boll weevil will make its advent in the western counties of Georgia this fall or in 1914 and in order to cope with its advent the department is already at work upon a resistant variety of seed which it is believed will fruit sufficiently early to escape the attacks of the weevil.

NEW OFFICERS CHOSEN BY SEVENTH WARD CLUB

George Evans was elected president, and M. M. Anderson, vice president, of the Seventh Ward Improvement club, at its meeting last week.

Mr. Landers was appointed chairman of the sanitary committee of the club. C. C. Mason made a fight on the "mausoleum" and every one agreed with him, and as many as can will be in the county commissioners' office on May 15 to make sure that it is run from this section.

A motion by Dr. T. D. Longino was adopted to ask that the street car company put "Fort McPherson" on the cars instead of "U. S. Barracks," as the latter could mean a prison. The club indorsed, and will make every effort to secure the Mosley property for a west side, or West End, park.

The secretary was instructed to send notices to the members to have as many as possible at the meeting of the county board on the first Wednesday in June, to see why it has taken so long to do the work on the west end of Georgia avenue.

SLIDING SCALE PROVIDED FOR WHITE FRENCH CHINA

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 10.—To meet the objections of Jules Jusserand, the French ambassador, Secretary McAdoo today modified the American plan of appraising china from Limoges, France, to provide a sliding scale of values for white china based upon the character and value of the decorations.

The new plan has the approval of the China Importers' association of New York, and is understood to be satisfactory to the Limoges chamber of commerce and French exporters.

SCHEMER USES MAILS TO GET ATLANTIANS' WAGERS

"Get-rich-quick" operators of the race track world are flooding Atlanta with circulars seeking to interest them in betting on "sure things." These letters are coming from Jacksonville, Fla., where an "owner" says he is racing. This, despite the fact that there has been no racing in Florida this season.

The letter writing "owner" says he has a bunch of horses which will win any time he sends them to the post, and that no mistakes will be made when the money is bet. He says that he has to do a lot of "scheming" with his horses, and his betting, and declares that his horses should always be at 20 to 1, or thereabouts. All kinds of intimations are made with reference to racing, with the idea of having the uninformed think he is getting the "best of it" when he deals with this "owner." All the latter asks is that those who receive his letters put down a bet for him.

Racing experts and followers of racing declare the letters now being received here are an insult to the intelligence of any one who knows racing conditions, and that they misrepresent racing materially. Some of these letters have been sent to the postoffice department in Washington by Atlantians, with the idea of having the statements of "the owner" investigated and the mails barred for his use in case the schemes are not worthy.

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

SQUAB RAISING

DURING the past two years, since the game laws of this state have been more carefully looked after and enforced one can see what a difference in the demand not only for poultry but for pigeons. During the past winter and at the present time hundreds of squabs have been served in the best hotels, restaurants and cafes and more attention is being aid to these birds now than ever was known before. Quail on toast always has been a favorite dish in this country but they have been scarce for the past few years and squabs have largely taken the place of these birds, as well as hundreds of broilers. The day will come when both squabs and broilers will be more largely used even than at present. When people once get in the habit of serving these dishes the people who consume them will naturally call for same and one reason heretofore that both squabs and broilers will be more largely used even than at present. When people once get in the habit of serving these dishes the people who consume them will naturally call for squabs and one reason heretofore that both squabs and broilers have not been more largely used is because people have not offered them on the bill of fare. Gradually a greater demand is springing up year by year for these products and when they are produced and offered more freely naturally a market is created for their use. Today many squabs are selling at 50 cents per pair when years ago it was almost impossible to get 25 cents per pair for nice fat squabs. The demand is increasing continually and there are several parties now around Atlanta and many other cities who have a nice income from their birds. Of course no immense amount of business is being done in this respect but for the amount invested and the time paid to these birds I know of several parties who have a neat little income each month from the sale of squabs alone, and two parties especially in Atlanta who are making a neat salary out of their birds. It shows what can be done if one will take care of their birds and create a trade for their products.

It is well that the state of Georgia saw fit to enforce the game law which will eventually restock this country with birds, something that is much needed and if these laws are properly enforced year by year in ten years thousands of pounds of game will be produced naturally and food that is now going to waste will be converted into a fine article of flesh through the birds that are multiplying so fast now in this state. As there is most always a substitute for nearly every kind of food produced this law has been a good one and has brought about a great demand for both squabs and broilers which are helping now to supply and bring revenue to hundreds of people from the sale of their birds.

There is one thing about pigeons little different from poultry. They raise and care for their own young and thousands of them can be kept in a small space. The greatest drawback that any one has in breeding squabs is that it is almost impossible for a person to control themselves and only keep what birds that will do well for them and keep the lofts culled of the drones. Most people attempt to overdo the thing and often make a failure, but those who have been satisfied and contented to keep just what they can handle well and feed profitably have succeeded. The keeping of pigeons is very similar to the keeping of poultry. The people as a rule who make the largest per cent. of profit out of this line of work are the ones who can keep only a limited number as a side issue and convert time and space that would be otherwise thrown away into a few extra dollars per the year. The people as a rule who have made money from these industries are this people as a rule who have made money from these industries are this people as a rule who have made money from these industries are this class of people. The large breeders are not the ones that supply the demand, continually keeping at it and a few being produced in hundreds of people. No great expense or no great amount of time is usually required in keeping a nice flock of pigeons and what a pigeon gets out of it is simply picked up. While there are a number of large breeding establishments in different parts of the United States that have made money from pigeon raising there are many small breeders who have made a much larger per cent. of profit in a small business, and at the present time the pigeon industry on a small scale presents a bright future and promises to eventually interest many people as our markets in this country are first class for these products at profitable prices it is worth investigating and trying out on a small scale at least.

Yours very truly,

QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED.

QUESTION.

My chickens have roup. Will you please give me a remedy for it and something to prevent it? Also give me a cure for sorehead. They had it last fall and I am afraid they will have it again this year. Is there anything to prevent them from having sorehead? If so, please give me a preventive and also a remedy if they should take it.

R. L. C.
East Point, Ga.

ANSWER.

At least a dozen times I have given remedies for sorehead and roup through The Journal. You should cut out and save these articles.

Roup is a dreadful disease, and should be taken in time. The free use of antiseptics in the drinking water will usually keep it from spreading through the flock, if taken in time. An abundance of good clean food is as what oats and scratch feed for fowls to your chickens will give them strength enough to throw off an ordinary case of cold and worst of all their quarters are comfortable and free from draughts and they are not crowded you are not likely to have roup. When you once get it it is best to separate the well chickens from the sick ones, remove them to a clean fresh place and begin building up their system at once by using either of the roup remedies that are advertised by the seed dealers through the columns of The Journal. They will help largely to cure the sick birds.

Sorehead is easily prevented if you will start in June and feed to each dozen or fifteen of the nice chickens once a week one tablespoonful of Epsom salts mixed with soft feed, and once a week one tablespoonful of sulphur mixed with soft feed. Continue this until after frost or cold weather has come, and you are not likely to be bothered with sorehead. It will not do to neglect feeding this regularly except during damp weather, then the Epsom salts should be omitted. Of course, a person should use judgment in feeding these preparations. Sometimes they will act too freely on a chicken. You can weaken their system and get them in such a shape that they will be easily taken sick disease. Therefore, you must use judgment in this respect.

Roup always follows sorehead and by treating your chickens properly you can prevent both.

OPPORTUNITY

It's a mistake to say it comes but once.

Opportunity knocks constantly at every man's door.

To see Opportunity is the thing.

To those who can see, and have the nerve to grasp fortune Comes.

Land is America's great Opportunity.

Most of our fortunes have come from the land. And generally around big cities. Big population bidding for location sends values up, whether Central or suburban.

You can fit the opportunity to your pocket by buying to suit your ability.

If your funds are modest, buy good lots on easy terms. But DON'T TRY TO GET TOO LOW IN PRICE. Buy something good, something that's coming in before you die.

We have in mind some splendid lots a client of ours has asked us to sell. Lots that we can strongly recommend to any one.

These lots are on Bedford Place between Eighth and Seventh. Elevated, overlooking Ponce de Leon avenue one way. Near Peachtree another, with Piedmont Park right at hand. Other lands, that can be bought will cost you much more money, and there is absolutely no difference in quality. All are splendid lots, and are certain to be in demand before long for building.

We believe it a real chance to make a modest speculation safely. The lots will cost you $2,750 on terms of 10 per cent cash and 10 per cent per year for 4 years, with balance due in 5 years. That means that only $275 cash will earn the deal. These lots held two years should bring $1,500 profit. Any one will tell you this is SAFE stuff to buy.

Think this over. $2,750 for a lot 51x160 in the heart of Atlanta's best residence section.

Only $275 cash.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

John W. Grant Buys Houston and Ivy Streets Corner for $98,000, and Sells No. 25 South Pryor Street for $52,000. Ponce de Leon Avenue Corner Brings $10,500—Juniper Street, Piedmont Avenue, West End and Other Sales

Two sales aggregating $150,000, one on the north and the other on the south side, were announced yesterday. In addition there were several sales with considerations around $10,000.

HOUSTON-IVY SALE.

A. S. Hook, of the Foster & Robson agency, has sold for the Houston-Ivy Realty company to John W. Grant the northeast corner of Houston and Ivy streets. The approximate consideration was $98,000.

Figured by the Ivy street frontage, this is $1,100 a front foot—a high-water mark. Figured by the Houston street frontage, the property brought $745 a front foot.

The property has a frontage of ninety feet on Ivy street and 132.5 on Houston street. On it there are three brick dwellings.

This is known as the old Evins property. The Houston-Ivy Realty company bought it less than three years ago for $100,000. It then had a frontage of 132 feet on Houston street and 202 feet on Ivy.

Shortly afterwards the realty company sold 100 feet on Ivy street to a syndicate of south Georgia capitalists for $40,000, and quite recently this syndicate resold the 100 feet to another syndicate, headed by E. C. Callaway, for $66,000.

PRYOR STREET SALE.

At the same time, Mr. Hook sold for Mr. Grant, to the Houston-Ivy Realty company, No. 25 South Pryor street for, an aggregate of $52,000, or at the rate of $2,000 a front foot, including the value of the improvements.

The lot is 26x120, with side and rear alleys, with a three-story and basement brick building on it. Mr. Grant's father bought the property several years ago for about $1,100 a front foot. Old residents of Atlanta will remember it as the old police barracks.

It is across the alley from the rear of the Temple Court building.

The two above transactions are interesting as showing the enhancement of two close in properties in different sections of the city, as well as a comparison of front foot values.

PONCE DE LEON SALE.

Mr. Redding, of the Waldo & Redding agency, has sold for Dr. J. B. Daniel to L. J. Daniel the northwest corner of Ponce de Leon avenue and Frederick street for an aggregate of $10,500, or a little over $100 a front foot.

This lot has a frontage of 100 feet on Ponce de Leon avenue and a depth of 180 feet on Fredericka street. Mr. Daniel will build on it.

JUNIPER STREET SALE.

J. H. Whitten, of M. L. Thrower's agency, has sold for a client to J. R. Morris No. 132 Juniper street, a nine-room, two-story residence, for $9,500.

The lot is 50x110, and is between Fourth and Fifth streets.

PIEDMONT AVENUE SALE.

Mr. Redding, of the Waldo & Redding agency, has old for a Mrs. Heard to a client No. 180 Piedmont avenue, a double apartment on a lot 48x175, for $8,250 cash.

WEST END SALE.

The Morris Realty company has sold for Ike Minsk and Ike Morris to L. P. Weathers three five-room houses at Nos. 59, 61 and 69 Lee street, 150 feet from the corner of West End avenue, for $7,500.

OTHER REAL ESTATE SALES.

R. W. Evans, of Cheatham Brothers' agency, has sold for a client to W. D. Lagomarsino No. 5 Mills street, a cottage on a lot 50x100, between Spring and Williams streets, for $2,600.

Waldo & Redding have sold for L. P. Chase to a client a double six-room house on Culvert street for $1,500 cash.

For Ike Minsk and Ike Morris to A. H. Irvine, a seven-room house and store, 290 Woodward avenue, southeast corner of Woodward avenue and Terry street, for $4,000.

For the same to J. C. Clark, a vacant lot sixty-four feet from the southeast corner of Woodward avenue and Terry street, fifty feet front, for $1,300.

ATLANTA AGENCY CO. HAS ATTAINED MUCH SUCCESS

Remarkable Progress Scored by Company of Atlanta Origin and Energy

The remarkable success attained by the Atlanta Agency company during its four years of life is a source of no little pride to the officers and directors of the company. This is also true of Atlanta's most substantial citizens, who do not fail to appreciate the fact that one of the most popular and successful financial institutions in the southern states is of Atlanta origin, whose dominant success is directly attributable to the "Atlanta Spirit."

The indomitable will, the inflexible purpose of looking to the future good and constant protection of policyholders has ever been the keynote of the Atlanta Agency company. It has begotten confidence and necessarily commanded success. A vacillating policy would forever relieve the company from existing trouble nor provide against its recurrence.

The Atlanta Agency company was organized in January, 1908. It is capitalized at One Hundred Thousand ($100,000.00) Dollars; Fifty-six Thousand Dollars of capital and a Surplus of Fifty-five Thousand ($55,000.00) Dollars. In January, 1909, the company paid to its stockholders a dividend of Eight (8) per cent; in 1910 and 1911 Ten (10) per cent; in 1912 a Six (6) per cent semi-annual dividend. It credited during each of the four years a proportionately large amount to surplus.

In addition to the several dividends to stock holdings as per years mentioned, a substantial increase in the value of the stock inured to the benefit of the stockholders.

The shareholders participate in the premium renewals of business now on the books of the company. Its strong financial condition and exceptionally favorable underwriting order it peculiarly well equipped for effecting record-breaking results in writing life insurance.

The company's connection with the Amicable Life Insurance company, of Waco, Texas, as agency directors for all of north and east Georgia, has been of inestimable value to the agency. It has given unlimited success to the endeavors of the agency force which has comprised the backbone of the agency during its existence.

The Amicable Life Insurance company's wonderful record during its years of existence has never before been equalled by any company in the same length of time. The company owns the twenty-two-story, steel, fireproof building in which its general offices are located, and is now planning the erection of a ten-story annex. On December 31, 1912, the admitted assets of the Amicable Life was $1,769,449.71 with nearly $15,000,000 of insurance in force.

The splendid advantage offered the Atlanta Agency company by so strong and prominent insurance company can not be overestimated, and will contribute largely to the company's future success which, in the completion of its first policy and carrying on of its present policy, will place it upon the most prosperous and substantial basis ever attained by an insurance agency.

Marcellus M. Anderson, one of the most successful and experienced real estate dealers in the city of Atlanta, is president of the Atlanta Agency company and manager of the real estate department. Mr. J. L. Jessup, of Macon, Ga., president of the J. L. Jessup Trust company, and recognized as one of the leading financial experts of the south, is vice president of the company. Mr. A. J. Shropshire, Jr., a leading insurance man of Atlanta for the past several years, is secretary and treasurer of the Atlanta Agency company and manager of the insurance department.

The directors of the company are Marcellus M. Anderson, Prof. G. R. Glenn, Dahlonega, Ga.; J. L. Jessup, Macon, Ga.; Aldine Chambers, Harvey S. Poole, J. w. Maddox, John M. Nichols, A. J. Shropshire, Jr.

R. E. Burks, Malvern Hill, Jr., J. Porter Stokes and Wallace T. Daley are special agents of the company, and all are well known insurance men of proven ability, whose assistance to the field men will aid materially in the further development of the insurance department.

The Atlanta Agency company from its history and from the experience gained during its four successful years of life, combined with the acknowledged ability of the men composing its personnel, bids fair to attain the highest standard of efficiency demanded by the leading financial institutions of the south, as see for it by its officers and directors.

RENEW OAKLEY PROBE WITHIN TWO WEEKS

State's Attorney Declares Investigation Will Be Resumed Then

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 10.—Resumption of the investigation of the affairs of the state convict department under the administration of James G. Oakley will take place in two weeks, according to Major R. E. Steiner, who has represented the state as an attorney in the probe ordered by the governor.

Governor O'Neal and the seven examiners of public accounts will be the only witnesses examined when the session resumes. By reading into the record the connection of these officials with the examination, it will be possible for the stenographer to complete his report of the proceedings.

Although the governor and the examiners are the only witnesses scheduled to appear, those conducting the investigation have declared that they will welcome the testimony of any other person or persons who know anything in connection with the irregularities that formerly existed in the convict department.

Governor O'Neal will make an additional statement concerning the convict department, but it will be a short one. The examiners will tell of their part of the work in discovering the shortages discovered in the accounts of the department. Those who were active in this work were Charles E. McCall, chief examiner; H. Y. Brooks, Frank V. Evans, W. F. Wilkinson, J. T. Gorman and Captain G. F. Sedberry.

VISITING NURSE IN FIGHT ON PHTHISIS MUST STAND READY TO SOLVE PROBLEMS

BY ROSE LOWE,
Secretary Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis Association.

In combating tuberculosis, whether in the hospital, in the sanatorium for early cases, in outdoor life and suitable occupation for incipients, in open-air schools and preventoria for delicate pre-disposed children, the need of closs personal individual care and supervision has been demonstrated.

In nursing and management, in manual service and teaching based on the latest word of science, personal care becomes obviously the indispensable organ of executive control, and at the very starting point of every possible avenue for the breaking down of the human strength or the danger of infection there is always the home, the family, its surroundings, its work and its heredity—to be studied and watched.

The visiting nurse has been trained for this service. In her work for the individual, the family and community, she has gained a great deal of knowledge and experience on all subjects related to the question of tuberculosis control.

She must first consider that her patient is an individual involving the treatment prescribed, which in turn includes medical, proper diet, suitable occupation, outdoor sleeping arrangements, eleemosynary aid, building up a confidence in the right treatment, questions of quackery, the establishment of a daily routine that is practicable and many other subjects of like nature.

Second, she must consider the patient as a member of the family, which both modifies and enlarges the consideration of the individual.

And third, she must consider the patient as a member of the community, which is the broadest point of view, and the one about which social workers, medical and lay, are more concerned, since in such social consideration lies the hope of the diminution and perhaps the elimination of the tragedy of this disease.

THE WORK OF A DAY.

I would have you accompany the visiting nurse during the morning on her rounds among the patients in their homes. On this morning she has received a call from a woman whose husband has combated the disease of tuberculosis for four or five years and has been under the direct supervision of the association during that time.

This woman has two children, besides a young baby a few months old. She and her husband have been very careful to prevent the home from becoming a center of infection for their little ones. These children are examined at regular intervals and their general condition kept normal; but her husband has about finished his battle and the complication which he has developed is the end of his life. This his wife understands. His trouble seems to be a general poisoning from the tuberculosis working as well as kidney complications. He is suffering excruciating pain and the nurse upon reaching the home finds that the baby is very much affected. Indeed, the symptoms of meningitis are so decided that she advises removal of the patient to the hospital. She has worked with this couple for several days trying to provide some one in the home to watch constantly by his bedside or to have him placed in a hospital where he can receive the proper care. On this particular morning she brings word to his wife that she has arranged for his entrance into the hospital and that he will soon be removed. She gives instructions to his wife for his care and preparation for his going, and especially for the fumigation of the house on his removal. She now leaves with the promise of returning to give further instructions about re-examination of the family.

INTO THE HOME OF ORPHANS.

Her next visit is into the home where five motherless children are undertaking to hold the family together, although the father is worthless and negligent. She finds that one of the little girls is working in a near by mill and from her earnings alone the family is maintained. Her brother is confined to the bed from an injury received some weeks previously. A younger sister, about ten years of age, has undertaken the care of this brother with the home keeping and cooking. The two little children, too young to be of any service in the conduct of the house, are playing around. The nurse is very much horrified to find that the children have had little or no nourishing food since their mother died from tuberculosis and they themselves have had diagnosis for the same disease, as this condition would aggravate such symptoms. The ten year old girl is unable to keep the house at all sanitary and the flies are swarming from the sick bed to the scanty food on the table. The boy, of course, being helpless is very much neglected and in need of attention that a grown person alone could render him. The nurse assisted in doing some cleaning and instructed the children as best she could under the circumstances, but she realized that this was not a case where the patient alone should be treated but the whole family, as well as the neighborhood, was to be taken into consideration. The removal of this patient to the hospital was the first step; also the removal of the young girl who is also a tuberculosis patient from employment in the mill.

The father in this family had been put on notice by the juvenile court to give better care to his children by sending them to school and by obtaining regular employment himself; he having failed to carry out these instructions, the case promises to pursue was to break up the family.

THE FAMILY BROKEN UP.

It became necessary for the nurse to visit the owner of the mill nearby, where the little girl was employed, to get his co-operation in disposing of *the case, and then to report this mat*ter to the juvenile court for the further handling of the case. The machinery had to be started in operation that would involve hospital treatment for two of the children and the finding of homes for the rest. The nurse found it necessary to get in touch with the different organizations of the city whose business it is to handle the different questions involved in such a case.

Another visit was made to the home of a widow, the mother of five children. Three of these children are working to sustain the family. The oldest boy, fifteen years of age, has tuberculosis and has been a patient in the sanitarium. He has returned and is helping the mother with the work of the family. She also found that since returning home and sleeping indoors he was again troubled with this disease, therefore, it was necessary to arrange a sleeping porch for his treatment. The porch must be measured, a bed secured with springs and mattress in order that he might be comfortable. This treatment was not only for the patient himself but for the care of the family in order that they might not be exposed to infection by him. The mother in this family makes a home for her children and with the help of the three who are at work and additional assistance from the Associated Charities she is able to keep them together.

THE MAN WHO IS AFRAID.

We now come to a family where there is only a man, his wife and child. This man, while a resident of Georgia, is not a resident of Atlanta, but is seeking to be benefited by the hospital accommodations of the city.

He presents papers stating that he is a good, upright person and would make a good patient in a sanitarium.

He claims to have been in a Tuberculosis sanitarium previously, and is very anxious to be again a patient of such a place.

Upon questioning him the nurse determines that the man is not suffering from suberculosis and decides to send him to a specialist for examination of his mental condition.

He also desires that his child be examined and reports that he has recently removed it with the family from an orphanage because of the belief that it is suffering from tubercular bowel trouble. From all the symptoms involved the nurse realizes that the child has symptoms of pellagra, and, therefore, sends it to a specialist for this trouble, the diagnosis is pellagra and not tuberculosis.

Arrangements must be made now for the care of the child in the hospital.

The wife of the man is also examined and she is put under observation as her symptoms indicate tuberculosis. The diagnosis of the man is that he is not sick and the instruction from the doctor is that he should go to work.

So in this case the man is referred to the Associated Charities for further care, which it is disposed of.

From these few illustrations it is clearly demonstrated that the nurse must stand ready to serve and co-operate with all social forces; that she must realize the importance and significance of her calling; that she must be able to observe and report social symptoms, directly as they are linked with the physical destiny of the individual patient.

'WILSON'S CONSTITUTON IS IRON," SAYS O'NEAL

President's Face Reflects the Strain He Is Under, Declares Governor

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 10.—Governor O'Neal returned to Montgomery Friday from Washington, where he went to call on President Wilson in the interest of the Naval League of America. The executive stayed only one day at the capital.

"It takes an iron constitution to stand up under the work done by a man like Woodrow Wilson," declared the governor. "The president is one of the busiest men I ever saw, and his face reflects the arduous strain he has been under while the tariff legislation was in progress."

Governor O'Neal says the president is very hopeful over the prospects of the adoption of a Democratic tariff measure that will comply with the pledges of the Baltimore platform.

While in Washington Governor O'Neal called on Congressmen Richardson, Clayton, Heflin, Blackmon and Dent.

"I did not have much time to talk politics, though," said Governor O'Neal, "and I did not learn anything new concerning the attitude of the president toward federal appointments in Alabama."

Judge Richardson is not in the best of health, but he is taking an active part in the tariff fight, according to the governor. While on the trip Governor O'Neal spent a few hours in Annapolis, where he has a son in the United States Nafal academy.

France's Inferiority

This party is represented by seventy-six members in the chamber of deputies is one of the most important groups supporting the present ministry. The placards ascertain that Germany will have on October 1, 866,600 effectiveness in its army against the 457,000 in the French army.

HOW GOVERNMENT VIEWS SALARIES OF TEACHERS

Not Enough Paid to Carry Adequate Life Insurance, Declares Report

WASHINGTON, May 10.—"Public school teachers of the United States receive enough salary to save money to carry adequate life insurance or to proceed with further professional training," announced a report of the United States bureau of education issued today.

Most of the teachers of the country have, in effect, had their salaries reduced since 1897, says the report.

Despite an apparent increase in money received by them, the high cost of living has cut into their salaries just as definitely as if a school board had sliced them. A teaching position which paid $600 in 1897 is paying in purchasing power the equivalent of about $418 today, if measured by 1897 prices. the teacher on the $1,000 salary gets no more for his money than he would have procured fifteen years ago for $693.

The report shows that wholesale prices in 1911 weer 44.1 per cent higher than in 1907; that retail prices has increased 50.2 per cent in the same period; while in June, 1912, retail food prices were 61.7 per cent higher than in 1896. With these figures as a basis an analysis of teachers' salaries in five cities in different parts of the country shows the plight of the teachers and the problem of increased cost of living.

"Teachers spend more than workingmen for some things," the report states. "though their pay is about the same. Rent and clothing are bigger items in the teacher's budget than in the laborer's, indicating more exacting community demands. Teachers also spend relatively more than workingmen for life insurance, religious purposes, amusement, vacations and care of the health."

GEORGIA GIRL WINS PRAISE FROM EUROPE'S GREAT MUSICAL CRITICS

Miss Ruth McBride, of Thomasville, Who Has Spent the Past Season Abroad Touring Italy and Switzerland, Is Praised by Geneva Paper

GEORGIA has produced a musician who has drawn praise from the leading critics in Europe and has entranced larger audiences through Italy with her concerts during the past winter. Miss Ruth McBride, of Thomasville daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. McBride, who have recently moved to Florida, has become a pianist of great renown.

Three years ago Miss McBride left Thomasville to take up advanced studies in music and spent the two following years in New York City under the guidance of the leading masters of that place. Last year she sailed for Europe, where she studied under masters during the spring, summer and fall and last winter toured Italy and Switzerland in concert.

Of Miss McBride's accomplishments, one of the Geneva, papers has the following:

"The past has taught us not to be exigent when we see an American performer announced on a classical musical program, but now and then we are treated to an agreeable surprise. Last night it was given to us by an American pianist, Miss Ruth McBride, who played a highly interesting program at the monthly concert given by the Musical club.

"This young artist was recommended to us by the Musical Critics' club of Vienna, at whose concert she was the center of attraction several times last winter. We admired her excellent technique, her originality, her broad, exquisite, artistic sense of interpretation and an uncommon versatility, all the mere worthy of praise when one considers that she is still so young.

"Miss McBride studied with the best masters in America and then went to Vienna to complete her musical studies. During the eight months she spent there she studied with the famous Sig. Antonio Guarneri, who was at that time one of the leading musical directors at the Royal opera house and who is now directing at the Colon theater, Buenos Ayres, South America.

"We learn with pleasure that while in Vienna she divided several programs with the famous dramatic baritone, Attone Freytag, who we are proud to say, commenced his musical studies at at our conservatory, some years ago. Miss McBride says she owes much of her interpretative powers to this highly intelligent artist.

"Through the recommendation of Sig. Antonio Guarneri, Miss McBride has been engaged to play by many of Italy's best philharmonic societies next winter, among the cities she will play are Venice, Padova, Bologna, Parma, Milano and Turin.

"Miss McBride will shortly leave for Paris, where she hopes to study some new works with the renowned Prof. Raul Pugno.

The writer asked Miss McBride for her opinion about musical study on this side as comared with musical study in America, and she said that as far as the technical or mechanical side was concerned America offered as good advantages as Europe, but that the real artistic atmosphere, which helps so much to encourage an artist and the psychological, the philosophical side of musical study without a thorough knowledge of which no musician could hope to interpret correctly the soul of a masterpiece, can only be gotten over here. America is, however, advancing in the musical art, she said, and it will only be a matter of time when she will take a leading place among the musical nations of the world."

MISS RUTH M'BRIDE.

THIRTEEN-YEAR-OLD LAD RESCUES DROWNING CHILD

Was About to Get Spanking for Being Wet When Mother Learned of Heroism

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 10.—William Ehrlich, thirteen years old, is a hero in his east side home today, but not from his own telling.

Yesterday he led two other little lads who were on a raft in the East river in diving to the rescue of a four-year-old boy, who had tumbled off a wharf.

With his clothes dripping wet William went home, conscious that he would "get a licking," as his mother had warned him not to go near the water. He knew excuses would be of no avail, so he meekly submitted to his mother's preparations for a good old-fashioned spanking.

He was lying across his mother's lap ready for business, when a policeman, who had heard from the other boys of William's heroism, called to tell Mrs. Ehrlich how brave a lad he had proved himself. William escaped spanking and had a mother's hug instead.

M'REYNOLDS SUPPORTS BAR ASSN.'S PETITION

Supreme Court Holds Retrial by Jury Necessary to Overturn Verdict

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 10.—In an issue of what is regarded as of great importance to prevent some of the jews's delays, Attorney General McReynolds today joined in a petition of a committee of the American Bar association asking the supreme court to grant a rehearing of its decision that a federal appellate court may not correct verdicts of jurors when they believed insufficient evidence has been introduced to support them.

The court, five to four, held that a reversal by an appellate court violated the seventh amendment of the constitution, and a retrial by a jury was necessary to overturn the original verdict.

While the government is not directly interested in the case, the attorney general sustains the views of the American Bar association that the decision will result in prolonged delays and continued litigation.

BEUTHEN, Germany, May 10.—The strike by 60,000 coal miners in this district which began on April 21, has been called off by the men trades unions, owing to the hopelessness of attaining success.

The employers flatly refused to grant the concessions demanded.

Sucks Germs From Body; Cures Disease

Astounding Effect of Robinson Thermal Bath on Many Diseases

Prominent Physicians Endorse Remarkable "Life-Saver."

During the last few years there has been a tremendous "change of heart" among physicians in the treatment of diseases by means of drugs. In all parts of the country prominent physicians have been advising the use of hot-air baths, commonly called Robinson Temal or Turkish Baths, with results little short of astounding.

One of England's greatest authorities on hygiene says the surface of the whole body is covered with 7,000,000 tubes or pores, each about a quarter of an inch long, and if stretched out end to end, would extend nearly 28 miles. This immense drainage system is designed by Nature to relieve the body of its vicious secretions. When these pores are obstructed, a deposit is formed at the mouth of each pore which tends to paralyze the healthy action of the skin and sow the seeds of disease.

Drugs do not eliminate the clogged-up poisons from the system; they have to fight myriads of germs, the battle is too unequal and the germs rout the drug instead of the drug routing the germs.

The Robinson Thermal Bath extracts poisons from the pores almost as a liquid is sucked up through a straw; the poison is extracted and the cause of disease disappears.

The effect of the Robinson Thermal Bath on rheumatism, lumbago, kidney and blood troubles, dyspepsia, throat and lung trouble, nervous prostration, insomnia, eczema and all skin troubles, bad colds, neuralgia and constipation are simply surprising.

Robinson's Thermal baths can now be taken at home at a cost of but a few cents each, and with almost no trouble at all.

The results are a Godsend. If you are sick from any cause, it will have an almost miraculous effect upon your system. If you are well, it will keep you so.

That great book, "The Philosophy of Health and Beauty," retail price $2.00, Free at our Main Store, upon request, for a limited time only. Be sure to get a copy. Also see the interesting demonstration of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinets; no obligation to purchase.

Coal Carrying Stocks Were the Center of Heavy Bear Pressure

Rumors of Further Proceedings Under Anti-Trust Law Against Certain Coal Carrying Roads Made These Stocks Target of Bear Attack

By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 10.—The decision of the department of justice, announced from Washington, to institute further proceedings under the anti-trust law against certain of the coal carrying railroads made these stocks the target of speculative attack today. Their weakness extended to the remaining list, causing materially lower level, the declines ranging from 1 to 15 points. The effect on sentiment of this movement was increased by confirmation of liquidation of investment stocks, some of which have been held for several years. New York central sold under 100 for the first time in two years, more than 9,000 shares changing hands.

In the face of these influences the active stocks in general held up fairly well. The trend was downward, but losses in most cases were comparatively small. The market closed steady after the close.

While the banks did not make the expected cash gain, a net in loans of $17,000,000 resulted from improvements sufficiently to add nearly $1,000,000 to the reserves.

The gains were steady. Total sales, par value, $426,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call.

AUSTIN & RAIT MARKET LETTER

NEW YORK, May 10.—Cotton—As has been the case with most staples, the cotton price has leaned on or near the low point of May delivery during the past month, with a range of 20 points and while we admit that the speculation has been reversed, yet in a critical weather period the market is buying on such reports as generally the case in the end. The significant and serious fact is that the season has passed and decidedly more interest is now shown by producers who have been holding their crops for several years for so long that the question of their future marketing is now receiving serious consideration, especially when the present high cost of living, cents which would allow them good profits on present cost of production.

We believe the cost of production will enter into the marketing this year more than ever before and we trust you have considered the figures presented by Prof. Branson, of the State Normal School of Athens, Ga., before the conference of educators, in the south at Richmond, Va., last month in his paper on "A Diversified Crop in the South." Space here does not permit a resume of this paper, but we commend it, we emphasize it. * * * The cotton crop of Georgia last year did not pay for the food and feed bill for the state, not to mention more essentials. With the present campaign for diversification the south should suffer no more acute depression. With universal interest throughout the world, extension of the cultivation and incidental requirements for clothing in the U. S. A. and Europe, the supply of cotton is interesting all European countries, and while they may find themselves short on our south, and with the inevitable increase in consumption and the reduction of labor supply makes it a matter of serious doubt as to how it can be sold at a living profit. It would seem that the present high price is evidence of the present marketing of one year's growth before the crop is gathered, at a sacrifice price for a few of last year's period, that the grower and spinner are not getting together on prices on a mutually satisfactory price, both protected by a suitable tariff, especially that afforded by the mills of the great cotton exchange of the world at New York, New Orleans, Liverpool and Havre, and that the use of this contract must increase rather than decrease, and with same will come a more stable and wider distribution of capital, in the production, distribution and consumption of the staple.

With such matters developing the vital concern of all of us, it seems to be the next move in order. It would seem that matters should not be unusually literal in the production of all staples, but more especially cotton, which has been thought many thousands before gins are started into the south. We have had the experience of our correspondents, briefly, but all most favorable that a good start had been made and through the western belt and that much cotton was not coming up, much replanting needed, but with some exceptions it is almost impossible to secure as it had been planted and that the acreage will be found to be positively injurious, yet light rains are necessary to bring up the planted seed and while less this is merited soon these complaints will diminish in importance character. Reports of shut downs at Fall River and other mills are in answer to the exercise of caution by our business men with a tariff agitation in progress and a decided cut of finished goods should prove beneficial to the mills, but during the period when the freedom present prices should impel. Reports of curtailment in the south are also favorable of increasing their business, taking on raw cotton as long as they can see that the tariff permits them to do so. We remain unconvinced, therefore, that the demand for the raw article can possibly be curtailed to reduce the price at which it can be sold depends upon the ginning, and we believe that the exports of portions of the eastern belt and a resumption of activities in the manufacturing world will find army of short sellers and we believe satisfactory profits on present purchases within the next few months.

Cottonseed oil: Apathetic conditions have prevailed this week with a consistently sagging tone of sentiments, especially noticeable in the liquidation of a long standing interest at handsome profits. Crushers are not anxious to buy here, especially of near positions, on these bank of deferred positions, and the trade in general not shown the way in the shape of advances here, hereby invites the belief that there is no great pressure as shorts hoped for. The market is upon Dallas and Texas reports of a large crop. Positively scarce for replanting of cotton and any renewal of interest by the consuming trade, and speculative interest, must bring about additional advances. New crop conditions have an important bearing on the final July months, and slight favorable reports might bring about considerable support, but only on the months, and slight favorable reports might bring about considerable support, but only on the months, and slight favorable reports might bring about considerable support, but only on the

Renewed Bull Support and Short Covering Caused Rise in Wheat

Determined Bull Leadership in the Face of Several Strong Bearish Factors Advanced Wheat Prices Saturday

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, May 10.—Determined bull leadership in the face of several strong bearish factors today advanced wheat 3c to 5@5½c, corn finished 1c to 2c up, and oats 3@3½c to 4@5c higher. Provisions closed a shade to 167½c off.

Because of Whitsuntide holiday at Liverpool the wheat market was largely "home made." Bull sentiment was apparent from the first, all options, except the December, showing a sharp gain after yesterday's curry, showing strength. Cables told of continued cold weather over southern Europe, and this aided the bulls. Besides, there was a large increase in southwestern and northwestern receipts of wheat, operation of favorable winter crop reports and news that spring wheat is about 80 per cent seeded, could not check the advance.

Acceleration of the upward movement came when wheat bulged at Minneapolis, shorts there being driven to cover and finding offerings cut right. Even May, the weakest option here, had an uplift. Corn inherited the strength of some extent demand, improved and this also helped futures. Thereafterward the market showed continued strength and the close was very firm.

Primary receipts of wheat today 566,000, last year 342,000 bushels. Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour equalled 392,000 bushels.

Lightness of the world's shipments was a feature of the corn market. On good demand strength was manifested throughout the session.

Reports of poor condition in oats in some markets also helped the bulls. Cash trade gave greater strength to the market than noted for some time.

Provisions were depressed because of large accumulations here of lard. Offerings from the west were also in evidence. Good trade was light.

AUSTIN & RAIT GRAIN LETTER

NEW YORK, May 10.—Wheat: The government reports continue to show that the crop is a good deal above average. The acreage decrease of course exceeded expectations, but indicates a crop of 513,371,000 bushels, subject to the usual change, as compared with a crop of 635,000,000 bushels last year. Spring planting is reported as 57.9, against 84.9 last year and a six-year average of 54.3 per cent. The market is now strictly under European direction, which explains the sharp upturn in advance during the dispute as to sight drafts which must soon be settled. Now crop conditions are hardly ever better and our own market is guided by them, naturally. Bearishness has been so frequent of late with confident predictions of "wheat being given away," helped by the flood of favorable closing bulls, and the reported settlement of the Balkan situation, that only possible change that can now occur will be in favor of the buyer on sharp reactions although pressure must be expected while favorable growing weather continues.

Corn and Oats: Corn has acted well this week in the face of a rising tide of receipts and receipts much less than expected with a visible turning this week at all points. The country is full of rosy talk and a good crop for farm feeding is worth more than present market price, but this market will not respond to crop talk and we try to wheat and suggest a trading attitude. Some good buying orders appeared on the recession of damage to the old crop and late seeding of the new crop, but oats will move about with corn.

Provisions: Railway reports show the market falling off in movement of all the products compared with last year, but the fill prices attracted a heavy movement, as is natural. Packers' profits were 25 with confident predictions of "wheat being given away," helped by the flood of favorable closing bulls, and reported settlement of the Balkan situation.

Government Must Pay New Hampshire Sum Of Thirty-Five Cents

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The commonwealth of New Hampshire today lodged a claim for 35 cents against the federal government of the United States, and worst of it is the United States has to pay, notwithstanding that economy must be the watchword of the administration in the face of tariff revision.

Zealous state authorities in an unrelenting campaign against pests, invaded the back yard of the postoffice building at Dover, N. H., and discovered three brown tail moth nests in a lonely tree that sheds its shade upon the hard-working postal employes of Dover during their rest periods.

The state "bugologists," without much ado, destroyed the nests of the pernicious bugs and nonchalantly presented a bill for 35 cents, evidently at the established rate of 15 cents for the first nest and 10 cents for each of the others.

The postmaster protested vigorously, with the declaration that he himself could have annihilated the moths without expense if the state had pointed them out. An issue was threatened and the quarrel was referred to the treasury department.

Sherman Allen, assistant secretary of the treasury, who learned diplomacy as an assistant secretary to President Taft, conceded the principal. After a formal bill and voucher are rendered, a treasury warrant will be sent to the state.

Has Nineteen Children But Wants to Adopt Still Another Kiddie

B. B. EVANS DEPRIVED OF RIGHT TO PRACTICE LAW

Supreme Court of South Carolina Indefinitely Suspends Prominent Attorney

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 10.—Barnard B. Evans is indefinitely suspended from the practice of law and deprived of the rights and duties of an attorney with the privilege of moving at the end of two years or reinstatement upon satisfactory proof that he has not used intoxicating liquors for two years, in a unanimous opinion of the supreme court.

That B. B. Evans indorsed and misappropriated to his own use a check for $198.90 belonging to George L. Salter, which he had secured for Salter as his attorney and that he misappplied to his own use money which he had collected for the Murray Drug company from J. E. Wowlinr were conclusions reached by the court.

The charges which Evans made against B. W. Crouch and E. W. Able, attorneys, of Saluda, that they were "thieves, incendiaries and blind tigers," and against Sheriff Sample, of Saluda, that he was a "thief," the court held were false and recklessly made. Says the court in this connection:

"It is not for this court to animadvert upon the prevalent exaggeration and excess in public speech so discreditable and misleading. Allowance must be made for weak men who drift with a current into untrue statements and who assume one character in private life, and another in public speech. A charge of falsehood against an attorney in the heat of political campaign would rarely be considered by the courts in disbarment proceedings. But unirue asservations without probable cause made by a member of the bar that certain citizens have stolen or burned specific property is a serious offense, going to the foundation of character, and must be weighed by the courts especially when coupled with other offense showing a reckless disregard of professional duty."

Jury Decides Ladies Violated Law With Card Game of "42"

WAXAHACHIE, Tex., May 10.—There was consternation among members of the Women's Social clubs here today when the Ellis county grand jury, just before its adjournment, declared where members of the ladies' organizations played "42," or other card games, for prizes, they were violating the law. Nor did they stop with the expression of their opinion, but recommended to the succeeding Inquisitorial body that such alleged violations be taken up for investigation and "treated as the law demands."

The women had presented a petition to the grand jury in which they condemned the operation of pool halls in this city. The grand jury commended the clubs for their interest in the pool hall matter and then made its recommendation about card playing in the same connection.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The sight of a perspiring foreign diplomat of high rank, clad in flannels and running breathlessly between wickets, may become a common sight to visitors in Rock Creek park, for it was announced today that Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, ambassador to the United States from Great Britain, had joined the Washington Cricket club. The intention to join the local cricketers was conveyed by the ambassador in a letter to Captain J. T. Rose, of the club.

PRATT'S SCALES ARE REDEEMED BY REPORT

No False Weights Given by Coal Company, Says Commission

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 10.—Charges made during the convict investigation that the scales of the Pratt Consolidated Coal company at Banner mines were registering false weights are without foundation, according to a report filed with Governor O'Neal by the special commission appointed to examine the scales. Those composing the commission were Dr. E. B. Kay, Tuscaloosa; Prof. G. N. Mitchem, Auburn, and P. J. Rogers, Birmingham.

After a thorough inspection of the two scales at the mine and after making exhaustive tests the commission reached the conclusion that the scales were in good condition and have been making correct weights.

It was discovered by the commission that the scales are constructed on correct mechanical principles and are reasonably accurate and that no fraudulent device is attached to either of them. The commission declares that it is mechanically impossible to arrange the scales so as to weigh with a constant percentage of error without a radical alteration of the parts.

Concerning the allowance for slate made at the mines the commission says that this allowance is not made for the purpose of defrauding, but is an attempt to make an equitable allowance for rock loaded with coal.

In conclusion the commission says: "inasmuch as the scale weights at Banner are not used as a basis for settlement between the Pratt Consolidated Coal company and the state of Alabama, it is evident that the state is suffering no loss of revenue by reason of the method of weighing in vogue at the mine."

These findings of the commission bear out the statements of George B. McCormack, president of the Pratt company, who declared several weeks ago that the scales were not giving false weights and that it would be impossible to make them weigh a certain percentage of error without being completely rebuilt.

Reports filed with H. Y. Brooke, examiner of public accounts, by W. D. Nesbit, state mine inspector, declared that the scales at Banner mines were weighing 20 per cent underweight on February 25. This evidence was brought out during the investigation of the affairs of the state convict department.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

WEAR white flowers and think white thoughts, for today is Mothers' Day. Throughout the country men, women and children are wearing white flowers as a tribute to the woman who gave them being. It may be that she has gone into the great silence, leaving behind her a memory which is like a daily benediction, or it may be that her living presence is still a solace for every sorrow and a refuge from every evil, the white flower is worn just the same.

Thoughts are as potent as words, and if everyone as they pin on the symbols of their love would let nothing but thoughts as pure rest within their minds and hearts, the observance of Mothers' Day would leave the world a better and holier place.

IN three weeks the June bride will be with us, the coming month to see a number of interesting weddings which will be preceded by the usual round of entertaining. June the sixteenth has been the date decided for the marriage of Miss Charles Owens to Mr. Edward Hall, of Morristown, N. J.

The pretty bride will be an interesting visitor to the New London boat races. She and Mr. Hall later will spend several weeks on their yacht, cruising off the coast of Maine.

The marriage of Miss Courtenay Harrison and Mr. Loring Raoul will be a lovely event, the ceremony taking place in the early dusk of a June afternoon at "Fernbank," the country home of the bride's parents, Colonel and Mrs. Z. D. Harrison. Of equally cordial interest will be the marriage of Miss Muriel Hall to Mr. Lewis Turner. The friendship between the two young couples gives an additional interest to the marriages in which they will figure as principals and attendants.

An interesting announcement of today is that of Miss Minnie Van Epps to Mr. Hanson, of Tennessee. Miss Van Epps is a daughter of the late Judge Howard Van Epps and the center of a warm circle of friends. She is both clever and pretty, and is one of several young Atlanta women who have given up a part of their social duties to philanthropic work.

An out-of-town announcement of general interest is that of Miss Irene Nickerson to Mr. Gordon Hight. Miss Nickerson has been the admired guest of Mrs. Hilliard Spalding in Atlanta and has a host of friends here. She is a graduate of Lucy Cobb and one of the most popular young women of Athens. Mr. Hight is a university man and also an alumnus of the Technological school. He is a son of the late Charles M. Hight and name sake and nephew of Congressman Gordon Lee, of the Seventh district.

Cast for Players' Club Announced

The cast for the Players' club play, "The Importance of Being Earnest," by Oscar Wilde, has been announced as follows:

Algernon Moncrieff—Lamar Hill.
John Worthing—Marsh Adair.
Rev. Canon Chasuble, D. D.—Hamilton Douglas, Jr.
Lane, Manservant—R. Frank Taylor.
Lady Bracknell—Mrs. John M. Slaton.
Hon. Gwendolen Fairfax—Miss Hildreth Burton Smith.
Cecily Cardew—Mrs. William Owens.
Miss Prism, governess—Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott.

The play is being prepared under the direction of Mr. Warren A. Rogers, who has recently assumed the position of dramatic director of the Players' club, and is now actively engaged every evening in drilling the players and in rehearsing with them the minute details of the plot, upon the stage of the Grand opera house, which has been secured for rehearsals nightly from now till the date of the production.

Mr. Rogers is a man who has had many years' experience as a stage director, having been associated with Viola Allen, Richard Mansfield, and Cohan and Harris and having himself staged "The Fortune Hunter," "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," "Brewster's Millions," and other successful productions. He is at present engaged in business in Atlanta, and the Players' club has received many congratulations at securing his services during his residence here.

"The Importance of Being Earnest," which is one of the most popular of all the plays of Oscar Wilde, is rich in humor and satire, and has been pronounced a perfect portrayal of the emotions, the follies, the weaknesses of the English upper set. The scenes are laid at a country manor house in England, and in a fashionable bachelor's apartment in London. The plot deals with love, courtship and society in a manner that is always pleasing and entertaining.

Both on Friday and Saturday nights of this week the players have been at the Grand, rehearsing their lines, and they express themselves as delighted at the play and the opportunity it renders for character delineation. Mr. Rogers, who is delighted at the talent he has found existing in the Players' club, says that within ten days the play will be rounded into shape and presented in a manner that will surprise and please Atlanta.

While the proceeds of the performance are to be devoted to charity, the club has decided not to make this an appeal for selling tickets. And accordingly the name of the charity will not be announced beforehand.

The initial showing of the hats that Atlanta women will wear this sumer occurs Monday. What is new? Come and see. There are Cool looking things, with broad drooping brims, with crowns of delicately figured crepe, with bows of soft maline, or lace, or roses--just right for summer days.

Or smaller shapes, smart with ribbon flowers, coque feathers or quills.

Or the poke bonnet always youthful and becoming.

White hats and natural straws for the most part with delicate colored flowers and chiffons and feathers.

HAPPENINGS IN LONDONTOWN

LONDON, May 10.—The royal visit to Woolwich was admirably done, and showed the artillery arm of the king's forces at its very best. Their Majesties were accompanied by the Princess Mary and the Duke of Connaught, and their retinue was reduced to the simplest dimensions. No invitations were sent out to civilian society outside the borough, the affair being strictly a service inspection. The court changed into half mourning but the queen and her daughter were in black, as was also Lady Ampthill, the only court lady who was in attendance. Woolwich was reached early in the forenoon by a long drive in closed motor cars through south London.

Starting from the Royal artillery mess with a sovereign's escort, the inspecting party wheeled smartly out to the common, where a thousand gunners, men, with eighty-four guns, were massed for the review. Standing at attention while the king rode along the line, the batteries held themselves in leash, presently to break into a trot and then into that thunderous gallop which is one of the most impressive things in the British army. Hence the royal procession hastened to the academy, where the brain of the army of the future is being moulded. The commandant's little daughter, Mary Holland, was lifted up to the queen's carriage, bearing in her trembling fingers a bouquet of mauve orchids and lily-of-the-valley. Her majesty was much touched by the thoughtfulness of this choice, which was in harmony with the formal mourning of the royal family.

In the court environment just now there are some discussions going on as to a certain nephew and a certain niece of Queen Alexandra. I am not referring to Prince Ernest and Princess Olga, of Brunswick-Luneberg, the children of the duke and duchess of Cumberland, whose future has already been arranged, or is in process of being arranged, by alliance with the German imperial house. There is always a delight in talking about possibilities, and especially when they concern such interesting personalities as two of the children of Queen Alexandra's younger brother, Prince Waldemar of Denmark. A few words of explanation will help to clear up the situation.

Prince Erik, who is Prince Waldemar's third son, is a stalwart youth of twenty, who has decided to strike out a line for himself. Not for him the excitements of the army, after the manner of his eldest brother, or the inherited love for the sea which bore his second brother, Lord Irvine Dalkeith. Prince Erik, the Viking, has a hankering for a farmer's life, such as that which has brought so much profit to modern Denmark, and he has planned a course of practical study on an Oxfordshire farm during the present summer. Now and then he will go over to Sandringham, in order to pay his respects to his aunt, in whose honor he was named Alexander. And what court gossips want to know is whether he will find fresh fields to conquer in the cousinly heart of an English princess, who is seven years younger than he. Let it suffice to say on this point that there are far more unlikely things than that.

The German crown prince and princess are expected to pay a visit to London during the coming summer.

A quarrel, amusing to those not immediately concerned, is taking place between the parents of a recent debutante and a well known society lady who makes a little money out of her undoubted influence. For a promise of $2500 she had arranged to take the young lady to several functions, and to introduced to her people in the best position.

The trouble is that the parents refuse to pay the $2,500, alleging that the young lady had only been taken to second-rate functions and introduced to tenth-rate people. Papa says nothing can be got from him except by process of law, and the society lady, while able to prove this promise, is afraid of exposing her method of making pin-money. Altogether an amusing situation.

A certain leading tariff reformer is heading an influential syndicate to utilize the most successful talking picture machine obtainable to convert the country to tariff reform and other political beliefs not appreciated by the masses. It is hoped that when the influence of talking pictures on hundreds of cinema theaters is brought to bear on them a change will be soon observable. Inquiries for insuring the machines and other properties connected with the scheme have already been made.

Owing to the fear of suffragette interference, the name of the ground on which the Parliamentary Golf Handicap is to take place has not yet been disclosed.

The mystery surrounding the lord chief justiceship is not difficult of solution. Lord Alverstone and his friends have been hoping against hope that he would be sufficiently recovered to return to the courts, where his prolonged absence has been very detrimental to legal business. Unfortunately, although there is no immediate danger, the distinguished judge is only able to be moved from one bed room to another. In these circumstances Lord Alverstone's resignation cannot indefinitely be delayed. Indeed, it is said to be now in the hands of the prime minister. On the other hand, big judicial changes will necessarily take place with the passing of the appellate jurisdiction bill, carrying the apointment of two additional law lords, and the government desire to obviate the necessity of rearranging legal and judicial positions at Whitsuntide as well as after the long vocation.

One o fthe smartest American society girls is setting up house for herself in London without a chaperon. This is a decidedly new innovation, and people are curious to see how such a bold move will be received by the leaders of London society. It may be mentioned that the young lady is extremely good looking, very wealthy, and numbers among her acquaintances many foreign royalties.

The interest taken in the boy scout movement by the duke of Connaught is shown by the fact that while in Canada he signed personally every boy scout's commission.

Much amusement has been caused in London scholastic circles over the openly expressed admiration of a popular head-mistress for a well-known public man, who has been honored by his fellow-countrymen for his great bravery. So enthusiastic was the lady's worship of her hero the other day that she even went so far as to make invidious comparisons between him and her husband.

Several sensational arrests are likely to be made in connection with the wholesale smuggling of jewels and the latest Paris creations into the United States during the past few months. It is said that the American authorities are only awaiting the arrival of the persons concerned—who move in the highest society—from Europe.

THE FONTAINE HOME IN COLUMBUS

Where Mrs. Dozier Pou Is Entertaining a Mou se Party.

A beautiful alfresco reception was given for Mrs. Pou's guests on Friday afternoon by Mrs. Rhodes Brown. ## ANNUAL REPORT OF THE HOME FOR INCURABLES

The annual meeting of the ladies' *board of managers of the Home for In*curables was held on May 5, at the Carnegie library, President Mrs. Floyd McRae presiding. There was a fine attendance, and much interest was evinced in the work.

The annual report of the superintendent shows that the home has cared for seventy-one patients during the past year and four months.

The former treasurer, Mrs. J. L. Dickey, reported a balance of $1,855.78.

The treasurer, Mrs. Frank Holland, reported from January, 1912, to May, 1913, her balance being $1,283.79.

The financial secretary, Mrs. Oscar Rayland, reported nineteen names added to the membership roll, making a total to date of 139 members. This has been a busy and interesting year in the work. The home is in a fine condition, and the grounds are attractive and afford much pleasure to those of our patients who are able to be carried to the lawn. It is hoped at some time to have an elevator so that all who are not too ill may enjoy the sunshine and fresh air. A much needed trunk room is the only addition to the home this year, though many small improvements have been made to make it more attractive and comfortable for the patients. The board has worked hard to raise funds to meet the increased cost of living and supply enough nurses for helpless patients, and are much gratified that the pure food show and cooking school netted about $1,200.

In closing the report, Mrs. Whitefoord Russell, the recording secretary, said: "We wish to express our deep appreciation of the many kindnesses extended us in our efforts to make money for this work, and our gratitude for the added sunshine and cheer that has come into the lives of the inmates of the home."

Facts About Refrigerators

When you are to spend $25.00 or $30.00 for an article, no matter what it is, you have a perfect right to know what you are getting. Especially is this true of something like a refrigerator, that has to do with the family health. You don't know about refrigerators—WE DO, THAT'S OUR BUSINESS. We have been handling them for half a generation—and we are in a position to give you valuable assistance. We can show you the best refrigerator that is made in the world—THE EDDY. We can show you why it is the best—and can prove every assertion we make concerning it. We will show you a list of nearly four thousand Atlanta users—give you their names and addresses—and you can ask any of them what the EDDY will do. Every one will be an unqualified endorsement of the EDDY.

Read what Dr. Bernard Wilff, President of the Atlanta Board of Health, has to say of his Eddy:

Dr. Bernard Wolff. Atlanta. Ga.

Atlanta, Ga., April 26, 1909.
Messrs. Hightower Hardware Co.,
Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen:-

I desire to state that an Eddy Refrigerator has been in use in my family for about seven years past, and has given entire satisfaction. The slate shelves are clean and sanitary, and give off their cold slowly. I have found by test that even with a small quantity of ice, the temperature of the lower compartments is from 40 to 50 degrees Fahrenheit.

I feel that I can recommend the Eddy Refrigerator as dependable.

Yours very truly,

Bernard Wolff.

Why Is The Eddy The Best?

BECAUSE

IT IS BUILT OF WHITE PINE—the most durable wood known—is in itself a non-conductor of heat and cold—is not susceptible to changes in climate or temperature—the doors don't get loose in dry weather and swell tight in damp—always just the same air-tight, snug fit.

BECAUSE

IT IS LINED with No. 9 smooth, heavy, polished zinc. No coating of porcelain or enamel to chip, scale or crack, leaving a rough, uneven place for germs and filth to collect. Absolutely sanitary—and will always be sweet and clean with just a little care.

BECAUSE

IT IS EQUIPPED with SLATE STONE SHELVES—absolutely non-absorbent—can be removed and washed like a dish. Always level—no fear of small dishes overturning. Almost unbreakable—we replace broken ones FREE.

BECAUSE

It is insulated by EDDY'S renowned non-conductor—insuring you against big ice bills.

If you are in the market for a refrigerator you cannot afford not to investigate the EDDY. Let us show you—by so doing you will incur no obligation.

Eddy Refrigerators, $12.50 up.
Eddy Ice Chests (with double covers), $7.50 up.

Out-of-town inquiries given prompt, careful attention. Ask for our complete catalogue.

TERMS

If it doesn't suit you to pay all cash for your refrigerator, we'll gladly arrange terms to suit you. We have only the one price—the SPOT CASH PRICE. Terms are allowed as a matter of accommodation, and not as a source of revenue. Come in and get acquainted—you'll find us as clever and accommodating as any firm with whom you ever dealt.

Perhaps the feature of the entire program will be the home coming of former students on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. All former students and graduates have been extended invitations through the press and many letters of acceptance and messages of greeting have been received by the committee in charge. A brilliant close to the series of programs will be the annual concert and graduating exercises which takes place on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Those taking part were Misses Elizabeth Ramsey, Eleanor Harrison, Florence Tracy Madden, Rolfne Trimble, Layce lette Rauschenberg, Elizabeth Mason, Lota Cheek.

Mr. I. T. Quinn, of the Alabama Polytechnic institute, delivered a splendid oration to the Cox college girls on Saturday morning. AT WESLEYAN COLLEGE.

The occasion of the installation of the Delta chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi into Delta Delta Delta, which event is being celebrated this week-end, is considered by members of sorority circles as one of the most important and interesting of the season at Wesleyan. Delta Delta Delta is one of the four largest national sororities, and the Alpha Delta chapter at Wesleyan, together with chapters at Emory university and Judson college, Alabama, are the first established in the south.

The junior class of the Washington seminary entertained the seniors and members of the faculty most delightfully at an afternoon reception on Friday, May 9.

The decorations and refreshments emphasized the senior colors, green and white.

If I was hanged on the highest hill,

I know whose love would follow me still,
Mother o' mine, oh, mother o' mine.

If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
Mother o' mine, oh, mother o' mine;

"FIFTY YEARS AFTER"

THE largest and most important annual event in the south is the reunion of the United Confederate Veterans. Every old soldier in the south goes to see his comrades once more and to recall and "reminisce" to his heart's content. They are always located in camps which remind them of jolly soldiering days and the hardships and griefs and sorrows of those days have faded away, leaving only bright memories.

It is an amusing experience of would-be kind hosts for the week to find that all the veterans want to be in camp. "No, indeed," said the old campaigner of '61, "I cannot accept your invitation. I want to be out in camp with the boys. I want to eat hard tack and bacon and sleep in a tent!" And that is the answer you'll receive if you ask one of them.

Realizing this spirit, Chattanooga has provided "hard tack and bacon" or their equivalent—more suitable to the seventy-year-old appetites with a lavish hand. A splendid meal will be served three times a day to the veterans in Camp Stewart. Twelve thousand of them will be cared for as guests of the city, and more, if they respond to the roll call during this reunion of 1913. It is no small task to feed 12,000 men, but it will be done and excellently done. Some of the busiest men in Chattanooga, men of large financial affairs, and some of national renown, have laid aside their own business to accept the chairmanship of these important committees, and are giving every moment of valuable time to perfecting every arrangement for a successful four days' encampment. The government has sent the tents. A huge dining hall has been built. The kitchens are immense, even temporary storerooms will be installed to hold the quantities of meats and groceries and breads that will have to be used.

Two thousand guests will be served at each meal and the meals will follow each other as rapidly as possible, so that with the best of arrangement, there will be almost a continual serving at Camp Alexander P. Stewart.

Lieutenant General Alexander P. Stewart was a beloved Tennessean, and was commander of the Army of Tennessee. It is peculiarly fitting that the camp of the soldiers should bear his name. Chattanooga was his home and delighted to honor him in life, even as it delights to honor his memory. Probably the most heroic deed of his whole four years' service was at Chattanooga, in the last of the Missionary Ridge engagement. When the "Battle Without an Order," as some one has appropriately christened Missionary Ridge, was fought and won, when the Confederates gave way before the onslaught of the Federal force and began to withdraw, Alexander P. Stewart held the Federal army in check until the whole of General Bragg's army withdrew from the field.

At the first sign of retreat, General Stewart grasped his battle flag from the hand of a wounded, dying color-bearer, and holding it high in the air, he called, "Men of Tennessee, rally to your flag! Protect the Army of the South. Rally! Rally to your flag!" The men adored "Old Straight," as they called him, and the wavering, broken ranks gathered to him, and fighting hand to hand with the soldiers in blue, they, and "Old Straight and the Flag" held the pass from 5 o'clock until 9 that night, fighting still as the moon came up, around their brave commander and the tattered flag, while General Bragg and the remnants of his gallant army passed by, starting on that memorable retreat to Atlanta which has become probably the most famous in history.

"Missionary Ridge," "Chickamauga," "Lookout Mountain," "Chattanooga," such stands out in the story of the world—each name would be of itself enough to attract thousands of brave old soldiers, thousands of visitors. But together, what a combination! Chattanooga, whose every suburb is a battlefield, whose site itself is a battlefield, offers an interest to veterans and to students of history absolutely unrivaled. The very camp, where there will dwell 12,000 soldiers in peace and plenty, is itself the site of a battlefield. It is a part of the Battle of Chattanooga which took place on a range of little hills, Orchard Knob, Indian Hill, Brush-Knob, then on the outskirts of Chattanooga, but now a part of the town. Brushy Knob was selected by General George H. Thomas during the battle of Missionary Ridge (the day after the battle of Chattanooga) as a place for burial. It was the first of the national cemeteries to be selected and established and it is now a magnificent park.

Camp Stewart lies to the north and is on government ground, and in the vista can be glimpsed the Confederate holy place, that bivouac of the dead—the men who died in gray and sleep beneath the soft green sod, cared for by tender hands.

The veterans, however, are not going to be allowed many moments for sad memories if the present program of the committee is carried out. Every possible entertainment will be provided for them. Even a flying machine will give daily exhibitions. Spectacular events will be arranged—the battle of Lookout Mountain, the battle of Chattanooga, the battle of Missionary Ridge all in fireworks—novel experience that, after fifty years to sit comfortably in a grand stand and see the battle in which you fought, going on with all the thrilling effect of the real thing.

Then there are receptions and balls and parades and music, music all the time. Thirty bands have been engaged and they will be playing most every minute. The Eleventh cavalry will parade first of all on the opening morning, headed by its magnificent band. This will in a way be the opening event of the reunion. Twelve troops of the Eleventh will ride through the streets of Chattanooga from 9 to 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning the 27th of May, and all the old soldiers and young ones, too, will have their blood stirred by the tramp of hoofs, the bugle calls, sharp commands and brilliant guidons.

The men who fought for their own Stars and Bars will cheer lustily for the dear old Stars and Stripes floating in the sunlight and the men who sang "Dixie" and the "Bonnie Blue Flag" and "Maryland, My Maryland," will take off their hats in love and devotion to the "Star Spangled Banner." Colonel Rucker, the regimental commander of the Eleventh, has entered with enthusiasm into every plan for the reunion. And will himself command the regiment in parade.

The procession of sponsors will be a brilliant feature and one in which interest centers. Five hundred machines have been engaged and all the beautiful young women who attend the reunion as sponsors and maids of honor and matrons will be in automobiles. They will carry pennants and banners and the machines will be decorated in red and white. Bands, of course, will be riding also in automobiles, for no parade could be a success without plenty of music. And when this parade has passed and repassed and been admired in every part of town, it will wind through Chattanooga so that every veteran can have the privilege of close inspection of department and division and brigade sponsors. And then the gay procession will come to a close in Warner park, where a lawn party will be enjoyed by all the young people from 5 to 7. The guests will be the sponsors and their attendants and the young men of Chattanooga who are on for to represent the organization. After the sponsor committee, or rather the committee for entertainment of sponsors and maids of honor. Also the young men visitors will be invited to this affair. There will be balls galore, a Veteran ball and a Sons of Veterans ball and a sponsors ball.

The sponsors and their maids of honor furnish the most interesting feature of the reunion to many, and the greatest curiosity is often expressed as to just what the sponsors do, and why they should exist. The custom originated when Miss Winnie Davis was living. Miss Davis was called the Daughter of the South and the Daughter of the Confederacy because she was born during the war in the capital of the Confederate states, Richmond. When the Confederate Veterans met—in Chattanooga, by the way, twenty-three years ago the organization was formed—they shortly made Miss Davis sponsor of sponsors and maids. General Norfleet, commander, appointed Miss Amelia Russell sponsor, Miss Anna Martin is maid of honor, Miss Mary Pearl Read is maid of honor, Miss Irene Rogers is maid of honor and Mrs. John Edmondson Smart is matron of honor.

General Norfleet has honored two popular Chattanoogans in his appointments. Miss Anna Martin, who has been chosen first maid of honor for sponsors in chief, Sons of Confederate Veterans, is the daughter of Mrs. Anne Martin, and the late Mr. William A. Martin, who was a gallant officer in the Confederate army. He was severely wounded in the war. He was a leading citizen of Chattanooga and his family has been one of the first in the city's social, business and philanthropic affairs. The compliment to Miss Martin is one that is appreciated by the whole city of Chattanooga.

Mrs. John Edmondson Smartt, matron of honor to the sponsors, was before her marriage Miss Mary Read, the daughter of Mr. Samuel R. Read. Mr. J. E. Smartt is the son of Captain and Mrs. James Polk Smartt, and their marriage was a recent social event of importance. Mrs. John Edmonson Smartt is the granddaughter of Dr. P. D. Sims, Chattanooga's loved physician who, throuf half a century has ministered to the people. During the visitation of the yellow fever scourge in 1878, ere the ravages of war had been healed, Dr. Sims performed heroic service for the community, but it is from his record during the siege in Chattanooga that young Mrs. Smartt has eligibility for her high honor. Dr. Sims with a never faltering courage and patience waited upon the Confederate wounded after the battles, when they lay upon the bare cold ground. He formed a committee of women and with General Grant's permission nasty mattresses were made of leaves from Cameron Hill, then a wooded forest, and all day and night after the battle of Missionary Ridge, Dr. Sims, with one other physician, Dr. Mil Smith, cared for the wounded and dying.

General Grant, who gave permission for the moving of the leaves from Cameron Hill and for Dr. Sims and Dr. Smith to care for the Confederate wounded, also furnished wagons to haul the leaves from Cameron Hill. One of the ladies assisting Dr. Sims was Mrs. James A. Whiteside. The Whiteside estate owned Cameron Hill, where the leaves were gathered, and owned the old Lookout Mountain house, which had long been a hotel. Mrs. Whiteside set a committee of women to work sewing the hotel sheets (which she had stored) into huge bags, and these and the pillow cases were filled by her direction with the leaves. These improvised mattresses were placed as rapidly as they were filled under the wounded men.

The opening day of the reunion will be devoted to the Confederate Southern Memorial association, of which Mrs. W. J. Behan, of New Orleans, is president, and Sons of Confederate Veterans, of which Mr. J. P. Norfleet, of Memphis, is commander. The C. S. M. A. will meet in auditorium at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, May 26, when an interesting program will be given. Addresses of welcome and response and music will be enjoyed. The Confederate choir, of which Mrs. J. Griff Edwards, of Virginia, is director, will be heard for the first time in Chattanooga. This choir of twenty young women has been augmented by six Chattanooga voices. The choir is uniformed and its appearance in Confederate gray is the signal for applause. They sing the famous old songs of the south are always encored again and again. They will also sing at the opening of the Son's convention, Monday evening, for which a splendid program has been prepared.

Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock will be the first event in the veterans' convention. The Eleventh regiment, United States cavalry, under command of Colonel Lockett, will parade for the benefit of the old soldiers and their friends. Immediately after the parade the enlisted men will be entertained at luncheon at Camp Stewart as a courtesy from the committee.

At 10 o'clock the convention of the United Confederate Veterans will be called to order for its twenty-fourth annual session by Commander-in-Chief Bennett H. Young. Just twenty-three years ago the United Confederate Veterans' association was organized in Chattanooga, and it is fitting that a special mention should be made of that fact. One man who was largely responsible for its organization, Captain J. F. Shipp, is now leader in all arrangements for the present convention. He is a member of the executive committee, chairman of sub-committees and deeply interested naturally in the success of the event. Captain Shipp is the ranking officer of the association in Chattanooga and is one of the three highest officers of the whole association, of which General Bennett H. Young is commander, General William Mickle adjutant general and General Joseph H. Shipp quartermaster general.

After the invocation by Chaplain General Jonathan W. Bachman, Mrs. W. H. Fryor will be heard in a beautiful and appropriate solo. Addresses of welcome will be made by Chairman W. E. Brock, the efficient chairman of the executive committee, whose hard work has made a success of the reunion; Mayor Thomas Clarkson Thompson and Governor Ben W. Hooper.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis spent some time in Germany, and had the pleasure of meeting another great singer, one of the greatest of the German Empire, Heinrich Knote, and were entertained by him and his attractive wife at their villa on Starnberg Lake, near Munich. ### Shorter College Notes

ROME.—Last Thursday, May 1, was celebrated as May day at Shorter, on which occasion the gymnasium work, which has been directed by Miss E. Blanche Vail, closed. Every girl in school took part in these exercises, some as groups of Russian peasants, wearing red skirts, black bodices and white waists; others, in green, were Irish lasses, while Swedish and Dutch girls wore blue. One of the prettiest features of the day was the procession from the college to the tennis courts, at which place the exercises took place with the colors of all the peasant girls mingling with the yellow and white of the academy students. Miss Louise Bethel, of the senior class, was crowned Queen of May. Miss Mary Mobley and Miss Annie Pitts were her maids of honor, with all the seniors and academy students as attendants. Miss Nina Morris and Miss Juanita Pieres were heralds, and Miss Cathryn Henderson was selected from the academy to place the crown upon the head of the queen. Then came the grand march, in which all the peasants took part. This march was followed by Russian, Irish, Swedish and Dutch folk dances, the closing feature being the May pole dance by the academy students.

On last Saturday evening, May 3, the sophomore class very delightfully entertained in honor of the seniors at Maplehurst. In the receiving line were Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Van Hoose, the senior class, the officers of the sophomore class and the honorary members of the two classes, Miss Edyth Hall, Miss Loana Emily Hooker and Miss E. Blanche Vail. Everything was decorated with white carnations and ferns, to carry out the color scheme of green and white, the seniors' colors. Academy girls served from the punch bowls. In the dining room was served cream, molded into the form of white carnations with green stems, and the cakes were iced in white with, 1913 in green. Nixon's orchestra played during the evening. Besides many young men from Rome, there were several out-of-town visitors.

Are You Subject to Constipation?

MRS. G. B. PRUITT.

Very few people go through life without some time or other being troubled with constipation. Thousands injure themselves by the use of strong cathartics, salt mineral waters, pills and similar things. They have temporary value in some cases, it is true, but the good effect is soon lost, and the more one takes of them the less effective they become.

A physic or purgative is seldom necessary—and much better and more permanent results can be obtained by using a scientific remedy like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It does not hide behind a high sounding name, but is what it is represented to be, a mild laxative medicine. It is so mild that thousands of mothers give it to tiny infants, and yet it is so compounded, and contains such definite ingredients that it will have equally good effect when used by a person suffering from the worst chronic constipation. In fact, among the greatest endorsers of Syrup Pepsin are elderly people who have suffered for years and found nothing to benefit them until they took Syrup Pepsin.

It is a fact that millions of families have Syrup Pepsin constantly in the house, homes like those of Mrs. G. B. Pruitt, Berea, Ky., who used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as a laxative tonic. Mrs. Pruitt writes that it so strengthened and cleansed her system that she was quickly relieved of a severe cough which had troubled her for months. The special value of this grand laxative tonic is that it is suited to the needs of every member of the family. It is pleasant-tasting, mild and non-griping. Unlike harsh physics it works gradually and in a very few hours time the stomach and bowel muscles are trained to do their work naturally again, when all medicines can be dispensed with.

You can obtain a bottle at any drug store for fifty cents or one dollar. The latter size is usually bought by families who already know its value. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

Herr Paul Stahmann, an experienced Astrologer, of Ober Nieswadern, Germany, says:

"The Horoscope which Professor Roxroy worked out for me is quite according to the truth. It is a very clever and conscientious piece of work. As an Astrologer myself I carefully examined his Planetary calculations and indications, and prove that his work in every detail is perfect, and that he is up-to-date in his science. Mr. Roxroy is a real philanthropist, and everyone ought to avail himself of the Professor's services as there are many advantages to be gained by doing so."

Baroness Blanquet, one of the most talented ladies of Paris, says:—

"I thank you for my Complete Life Reading, which is really of a startling accuracy. I had already consulted several Astrologers but never before have I been answered with so much truth, or received such complete satisfaction. It is sincere pleasure I will recommend you and make your marvelous science known to my friends and acquaintances."

If you wish to take advantage of Baron Roxroy's generous offer and obtain a free reading, send your date, month, and year of birth, state whether Mr., Mrs. or Miss; also copy of the following verse in your own hand-writing:

I have heard of your power

Desserts Need Pure Flavoring

Housewives who use extracts made from fresh fruits, have most success in flavoring desserts. Fruit extracts have a delicate tang that is impossible to produce with chemicals, and the taste is far more delicate and lasting.

Blue Ribbon Vanilla Extract flavors thoroughly and economically any dessert—custard, ice-cream, pudding, cake or candy. It is made of selected vanilla beans, and contains no chemicals. It gives a delicate, real fruit flavor, and the flavor lasts.

Blue Ribbon Extracts are economical because of their strength and purity. A teaspoonful to the quart is sufficient to give dessert a deliciousness that is impossible with any other extract. Each of the twelve Blue Ribbon Flavors is pure and wholesome. Sold by best grocers.

HOW I ENLARGED MY BUST SIX INCHES IN THIRTY DAYS

AFTER I HAD TRIED PILLS, MASSAGE, WOODEN CUPS AND VARIOUS ADVERTISED PREPARATIONS WITHOUT THE SLIGHTEST RESULTS

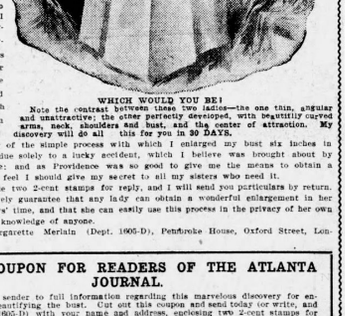
A SIMPLE, EASY METHOD WHICH ANY LADY CAN USE AT HOME, AND QUICKLY OBTAIN A LARGE AND BEAUTIFUL BUST

BY MARGARETTE MERLAIN.

Well do I know the horrors and intense humiliation of being flat-chested—of having the face of a woman on the form of a man; and I know that words to tell you how good I felt, and what a terrible load was lifted off my mind when I first saw my bust had really grown six inches in size. I felt like a new being, for with no bust I realized I was imperfect.

Can such a woman inspire in her friends those feelings and emotions which can only be inspired by a real and true woman—a woman with a beautiful well-rounded bust? Most certainly not.

The very people who shunned me, and even those who passed me carelessly by when I was so horribly flat-chested, and had no bust, became my most ardent admirers shortly after I obtained such a wonderful enlargement of my bust. I therefore determined that all women who were flat chested should profit by my accidental discovery, and have a bust like my own. I had been imposed on by charlatans and frauds, who sold me all sorts of pills and appliances for enlarging my bust, but which did me no good whatever. I therefore determined my unfortunate sisters should no longer be robbed by these "fakirs" and frauds, and I wish to warn all women against them.



WHICH WOULD YOU BE?

Note the contrast between these two ladies—the one thin, angular and unattractive; the other perfectly developed, with beautifully curved arms, neck, shoulders and bust, and the center of attraction. My discovery will do all this for you in 30 DAYS.

The discovery of the simple process with which I enlarged my bust six inches in thirty days was due solely to a lucky accident, which I believe was brought about by Divine Providence; and as Providence was so good to give me the means to obtain a beautiful bust, I feel I should give my secret to all my sisters who need it.

Merely enclose two 2-cent stamps for reply, and I will send you particulars by return. I will positively guarantee that any lady can obtain a wonderful enlargement in her bust in thirty days' time, and that she can easily use this process in the privacy of her own house without the knowledge of anyone.

Waxene POLISH FOR FLOORS AND WOODWORK

GEORGIA PAINT & GLASS CO.

35-37 Luckie Street.

For Sallow, Wrinkled, Freckled, Pimpled Skin

(From Woman's Home Journal.)

If you have any cutaneous blemish, don't use paint, powder or anything else to cover it up. Too often this only emphasizes the defect. Besides, it's much easier to remove the disfigurement with ordinary mercolized wax. Applied nightly, the wax will gradually remove freckles, pimples, blackheads, moth-patches, sallowness, red or yellow blothes, or any surface eruptions. The affected cuticle is absorbed, a little each day, until the clear, soft, youthful and beautiful skin beneath is brought wholly to view. Ask the druggist for an ounce of mercolized wax and use this like you use cold cream. Remove in morning with soap and water. Many who have tried this simple and harmless treatment report astonishing results.

If bothered with wrinkles or crow's feet, a wash lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel will prove remarkably effectual.—(Advt.)

Doctors, nurses, and experienced mothers, have all lent a hand in solving the problems of children's apparel. Never has there been such a variety to meet every possible demand of health, comfort and style as there is in the shops today.

The careful mother will keep in touch with the world's progress in these lines by reading about the clothes and accessories advertised in the columns of THE JOURNAL.

In selecting her children's summer wardrobe she cannot afford to overlook anything for their comfort that she might easily procure if she knew just where it was to be had.

School Girls to Present "Endymion"

Photographs by Mead.

May 28 at the Grand, a spectacular play, "Endymion," adapted from Keats' beautiful poem and preserving the language of the poet, will be given at the commencement exercises of the Hanna school. Many beautiful spectacular effects have been introduced into the play and numerous songs and choruses. Several fine solos will be sung by Miss Mamie Clyburn whose beautiful voice has so often charmed Atlanta.

Mythology has no more beautiful myth than that of Endymion, with whom Diana became so enamored, that she caused him to fall into a deep and endless sleep, that his youth and beauty might never suffer change. But still more beautiful, because more spiritual is Keats' Endymion.

According to the poet's version Endymion is shepherd king of Latmos, whose people

"Herd their sheep in valleys deep,
Or by the foaming tide."

But he is loved by Diana, who appears to him in every fountain, or flowery dell that adorns his mountain home, and despair at not being able to attain to this lovely being, has cast upon Endymion a spell of deep despondency, from which the entreaties of his sister, Verna, cannot rouse him.

Finally he yields to her efforts and tells the story of his grief. She begs him to wake from this dream and be "His noble self once more," and then she sings him to sleep.

As he lies, stretched on a mossy couch under the forest shades, Diana again entices him, he yields and a forest nymph explains to him the trials he must endure before he can hope to be exalted to his love. "He ne'er is crowned with immortality, who fears to follow where any voices lead."

Endymion obeys the nymph and descends "into the spurry hollows of the earth," and having met and conquered all difficulties, and overcome all temptations, is declared by Diana to be spiritualized, so that she can exalt him to her heavenly state. Peona, the sister, is crowned queen of Latomas and Endymion is carried to Olympus.

It is this version of Endymion that Miss Hanna has selected for her play, adapting Keats' poem to dramatic presentation, but preserving the language of the poet.

Out to the present time the proceeds of the many spectacular plays given by the Hanna school have been freely given to Mountain education, the present benefit commencement will be for the purpose of establishing a much needed library at the Hanna school.

"Mothers' Day" at Home for Old Women

The board of managers of the Home for Old Women earnestly requests that today being Mothers' day, the dear old mothers of their institution be not forgotten.

Mothers' day was adopted by the board as a suitable day to make an annual appeal to the public, and many generously contributed last year to the little boxes placed in hotels, clubs, etc.

With the passing years loved ones of the little old ladies have passed away, until now in their declining years the comfort and necessity of being tenderly cared for them are no more. They are alone, with sad, sweet memories of other days.

In memory of one's own dear mother or in appreciation of her sweet presence in your home, brighten the lives of some one else's mother, by a visit to the institution or a little gift to the cause, furnish a memorial room or send a check to help pay off the $2,000 indebtedness incurred in building the annex and making improvements; ask the board managers of the home.

With the wearing of the white flower, emblem of purity and love and significant of the occasion, many will wish to help the cause of these aged and indigent women.

Gifts sent to the home, 61 West End avenue, or checks made payable and addressed to Mr. Joseph A. McCord, treasurere, will be gratefully received and acknowledged.

Jackets Down Georgia Crew In Second, 5-4

Pitts Pitched Good Ball in Pinches—Morris Blew Sky-High in the Eighth, When Tech Scored Three

ATHENS, Ga., May 10.—Amid the cheers of hundreds of supporters, Heisman's lads further upset the dope by pouring it into the Georgia aggregation 5-4. The game was a hair raiser from the start to the finish, both teams fighting for a score every minute. The Tech team, however, outplayed the Georgians.

The biggest crowd of the season filled Sanford field to the brim. There was something doing every minute. The senior society's annual parade was held in the center field ditch and the seniors entertained the crowds for quite a bit, by their antics.

The right field bleachers roared with Tech yells and from the opposite of the diamond the Georgia cohorts cheered their men. Fierce rooting characterized the game.

Tech's first big inning was the second when Montague went out third to first, but Pounds' single started things. Amason laid down a bunt and died a first. Pounds advancing. Pitts singled and stole second. Pounds scoring on Harrison's bad throw to catcher. Donaldson scored Pitts with a single, dying on the attempt to stretch it into a double.

Georgia's runs came one at a time. The first was due to Big Henderson's base running. With the bags full, Hutchens was forced at the plate by Erwin's grounder, Henderson scoring on the throw to first.

The game was tied in the fourth when Henderson singled, and went around on errors. In the fifth Georgia took the lead on Ginn's walk and a sacrifice fly. Henderson again featured in the sixth and eighth with hits. In the sixth he scored Georgia's last run when Morris drove one to deep center.

TECH WINS GAME.

Tech grabbed the game in the lucky seventh when Wooten got his second single, Moore walked, Malone was hit by a pitched ball, and Wooten scored on a wild pitch. Moore scored on Montague's fly. Pound was safe on Short's error and Amason walked Moore, scoring on an error and Malone on a wild pitch. Malone collided with Morris at the plate, and Morris was hurt, Corley taking his place.

In the eighth Henderson hit safely and was injured in sliding to second, so Bowden was placed on the bag for him, but could not score. The ninth was ditto, Brown batting for Corley led off with a single, but could not get around.

In pinches the Tech team was as steady as clock work, and the Georgia hitters seemed to have left their luck places at home, as they hit Pitts freely, but their drives went in outfielders' hand.

Wooten again starred for Tech, rapping out three safeties out of five trips to the plate, while Donaldson made some beautiful stops at short.

Henderson and Hutchens were the Georgia stars.

Manager Smith Out to Land Another Pitcher and Good Catcher

The addition of Pitcher Al Furchner and Bill Chappelle is apparently only a start in the remodeling of the Atlanta club.

Right now it is known that the club is after one or two more dependable hurlers and doubtless another catcher will be added. Pitcher Dent, now with the Washington club and last year with the Newark International team, is being sought and may be purchased before the day is past. Wires are out for several catchers but it is not known which one will be landed, all the majors being a bit leary about turning loose any promising youngsters they now have.

Reports hav it that Joe Dunn is catching a rather poor article of ball in Montgomery and this probably caused Billy Smith to make the yell for another receiver. Or it is possible that he contemplates letting Pat Graham go. No word has been received from the manager since the team hit Mobile and just what he is going to do is a puzzle.

MORE WORK WOULD HELP PAT GRAHAM'S CATCHING

BY JULIAN MURPHEY.

Some people are born in famous cities while others make cities quite well known by pointing to them as the place of their birth. In the case of Patrick Graham, catcher of the Atlanta ball club, and Cass City, Michigan, it is a case of the Michigan city being made famous by the player.

Right around the center of the state of Michigan, of course, Cass City is known, but beyond the confines of the state there were not a dozen people who knew there is any such city until Pat Graham came along and developed into a star ball player. Since living his native town Pat has boosted it to the skies and now throughout the many circuits in which he has played the game the name, Cass City, is a by-word.

Pat began his baseball around the wilds of Michigan during the off season. In his young days he was rather busily engaged most of his time at the fishing and tree-cutting industry and this made him a bit late in starting the great professional game. However, when he did get away he went fast and it took him but a season to jump to the International league. Here he starred with the Rochester club until traded to Atlanta last season by John Ganzel.

Last season he was not called upon to do any large amount of work by the Atlanta leader, but this year he started like a house afire and right now he would do better work if used oftener. Unfortunately the opinion prevails that Pat cannot hit a lefthanded hurler and yet he can do as well as many other batters who are used in the different games. This fact keeps him out of many games and undoubtedly weakens the batting strength of the Cracker team.

Graham stands at the bat on the left side of the box and uses a free swing. He hits the ball squarely and many of his drives force their way through the infield and go for hits. He is especially good at driving them out for extra base hits and is a good man to have up when a sacrifice fly is needed to tally a runner from third. In fact, he is a good man to have around any old time.

All the while Pat does not keep the very best of training rules and this more than anything else has kept him from getting a trial in the big show. He is a bit inclined to dissipate, but to his credit, he never attempts to do any such dissipating on the sly. He is frank in every line of work he attempts and can be depended upon to tell the manager just how he feels before entering a game.

With his fellow-players Pat is very popular. He is brim full of dry wit and humor, but this does not creep into his work on the ball field for when he is in a game he is there working all the time. He knows the weakness of all batters who have worked in front of him and is able to properly handle his hurler. Everybody who knows the young receiver likes him and are pulling for him to stick with the team and catch oftener.

Jam-Up Ball Took Battles

Surprises Will Never Cease. Generalship Big Help to Tech in Taking Both Games From Georgia Bunch

BY JULIAN MURPHY.

Baseball generalship proved its worth in the recent Tech-Georgia baseball games, when Tech, supposedly an inferior team, won two straight games from Georgia, in both completely outclassing the Red and Black sluggers in each department of the game. It was admittedly a complete surprise to all followers of college athletics.

The Tech team all season has been knocked about by most every college nine it has faced, while Georgia has hammered admitted star hurlers far and wide. This served to make the Georgians a big favorite, and rightfully so. When a ball club shows as little as did Tech in the early season games it should be ranked low, but the manner in which it pulled itself together for the big games places it on a pinnacle that none of the supporters had hoped for.

There are those who would knock the famous Tech coach, but when it comes to mastering the baseball situation there are few who can turn the trick as he has done. He is undoubtedly a wizard at the game, and any one who outguesses him is traveling fast.

In losing to Tech the Georgia team is not disgraced in the least. Tech played as good ball as any one could ask, and only superhuman effort could have piled over more runs than were allowed in each game. The boys were keyed to the minute by Alex Cunningham, who has long ago proven his worth as a handler of athletes, and they played good ball, but were simply outclassed. No college team could have done any big scoring against the fielding and pitching shown by the Tech Jackets.

EDGE TOO SOON.

It is simply another instance of one team reaching its edge in mid-season and then hitting the decline while the other waited until the very last to hit its stride. Tech is the team that has just hit its gait, while the Red and Black went too good during mid-season, when from ten to twenty hits were made in each game.

Eubanks and Pitts, neither boosted as any star at the hurling game, pitched as they had been taught, and the result is too well known. The Tech batters hit at the ball as they have been instructed, and the way they ran the bases took much of the heart out of the Georgia bunch. In other words, all-round baseball—fielding, opportune hitting, good pitching and crack base running—won out over hard hitting.

But two other games are yet to be played, and Georgia has a chance to come back strong and even it up. Baseball is uncertain, and to pick the winner of the next two games is going too fast.

Eight men are batting zero, one an even thousand and one .750 as a result of the Tech-Georgia games. Hutchens was the most consistent and hardest hitter of the games. Henderson also batted well.

Wooten and oDnaldson, for Tech, were the real hitters of the two games. Both men are batting .500. The teams' averages show that Tech batted for the series .169, while the Bulldogs from Athens hit the pill for the grand average of .285.

The men and their averages are as follows:

ROAD RECORD NOT SO GOOD

Since leaving Birmingham, where the present road trip was opened, the Atlanta ball club has been going a bit badly, the series in Mobile resulting decidedly disastrously, while the battles in Montgomery do not tend to show up the Cracker squad as being overly strong.

In Birmingham the team took three games and lost one. In Mobile four in a row were dropped, and now in Montgomery one has been won and two lost with one more to be played. Yet Memphis and New Orleans are to be played, eight games remaining on the road schedule.

To date the team has won four on the road and lost seven. This is a percentage of .363, and not one to be so proud of. It takes even better work to win pennants in this league. However, the team may get together in Memphis, which is the next stop, and New Orleans and pull out with a good road record.

Left Fielder Badly Needed

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 10.—If he can secure a man who can cover left in Jam-up class A fashion, Elberfeld believes he has in his present squad of Lookouts a club that is going to give seven others in the league a terrific finish for the 1913 bunting of the Southern association.

The Lookouts are going at present like pennant-winners, and the games which have been dropped at Mobile can be attributed almost directly to the weakness in left or to the weakness left at short whenever Elberfeld goes out to the garden and places Harbison at short. "Dug" is all right as a utilitarian, being a fair man in both the infield and the outfield, but it is now well understood locally why Billy Smith did not want the former Cracker as a regular performer upon his 1912 galaxy.

With the annexation of Golden, Elberfeld believes that his hurling staff will hold; the manner in which the Lookout hurlers held the Gull swatsmen in comparison with the other staffs, indicates that the Kid is not without facts for his belief.

From this angle of the circuit, Mobile, by the way, is not as much feared as is Atlanta, Birmingham and Nashville. It is generally conceded locally that the Gulls are playing above form, and that when a slump hits them, just as it hits all clubs, and they are forced to play the game from the defensive side, they will not look so much like world beaters.

Otto Jordan, who is about as competent judge of ball clubs as any man in the world, went on record before leaving this burg as stating that the Gulls were playing about 50 per cent above form, and that Charley Starr was responsible for at least 50 per cent of the form being shown. Otto further said that the Gulls were getting the breaks, and that when viewed analytically the club did not appear any stronger than at least four others in the league. Otto, like other local experts, is of the opinion that Birmingham, Atlanta and Nashville, when pending changes are made, will be Chattanooga's really formidable opponents.

MILLIONAIRE MOTORCYCLIST WILL STAR ON NEW TRACK

Monty Graves, one of the motorcycle racers that will be seen at the coming motorcycle races on Jack Prince's new bowl track, has the honor of occupying in the motorcycle world the same place that David Bruce-Brown occupied in the automobile world. He is a millionaire in his own name, and races for the love of the sport. He cares nothing for the money that he wins out of the races, but goes into the sport purely for the excitement and the love of the thing. Jack Prince considers Graves to be one of the best riders in the business today and expects to hear great things from him in the near future.

Graves is a very little man, weighing only 110 pounds. He can hardly be seen when he is riding. Crouched down behind his huge motor and with hand on his control he makes a weird sight as he whirls around the track at a ninety-mile per hour clip. His greatest rivals for the honors of champion are Balke, Seymour and Renal, the famous French rider. However, the other riders who are booked for the races are all good men and have good records behind them and they are giving these top notchers a run for their money.

Shields and Lockner are two other good riders who will be seen at the motordrome. These men are known as the "Twice Around the Clock" winners, they having won the twenty-four hour race at Brighton Beach.

"Scotty" McNeal will be another good rider who will perform for the Atlanta public. He is from Edinburgh and brings with him three eight-valve type machines. He, writes Prince that if the track will hold him he can do 100 miles per hour easily.

The booking of such good riders assures the sporting public that they will get to see some of the best motorcycle racing in the world. The motordrome will open about May 20, and will be run at night only. The track will be lighted with flaming arcs and the spectacle of seeing the "flying men" in the arc light presents a weird and attractive spectacle. This is another good addition to Atlanta's night pleasures and the public will be extremely fortunate in having such a man as Prince behind the sport.

Furchner Blew In the Sixth; Dobbers Won

Tommy Long Hit the Bull Sign and Receives $50—Atlanta Outhit the Billikens, but They Were Not Bunched

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 10.—Atlanta's failure to bunch their hits cost them the third game of the series in their battle with the Billikens. The score was 5-2. The Atlanta team played good ball up until the sixth inning when the Billikens bunched five hits and made five runs. Furchner, the new pitcher, was in the box for the Crackers and up to the sixth had the Montgomery team at his mercy. He blew in this inning and the local men crossed the plate five times.

The Crackers scored two in their half of the sixth, this inning finishing the scoring for both sides. The Crackers went into the field first and the losing Jinx of the Billikens seems to be broken.

The game was fast and exciting. How the Crackers lost is hard to tell. They outbatted the local team and played faster ball, but the hits wouldn't come in the right inning and the runs were left out.

The feature inning was the sixth. This was the inning that everything happened. Montgomery made all its runs in this one and so did Atlanta. To cap the climax, Long poled one to the fence, hitting the Bull in the ribs and getting two bases besides the $50 offered by the tobacco company. This makes two out of the three for the Billikens.

Clemson Beats Auburn Nine

AUBURN, Ala., May 10.—Clemson defeated Auburn in the deciding game of the series here this afternoon 5 to 2. The game was fast and exciting till the end and was full of brilliant fielding. Daves was hit hard, but was steady in the pinches, and only three earned runs were scored off his delivery. One scored when the ball took a bad bounce by Louiselle, and another when Locke lost a fly in the sun. Cureton started the game by hitting for a home run, and Davenport hit a long one in the sixth, but was thrown out trying to stretch it to a homer. Hutto, Hires and Tennant featured both with three hits each. Moulton featured in the field by scooping Brown's grounder over second and handling other difficult chances without a bobble.

Auburn threatened to overcome Clemson's lead in the fifth, when Major opened for two bags and was sacrificed to third by Moulton. Harris hit a hot one to Locke, which he caught and threw Major out at third. Williams' pegging killed many base runners, only one base being stolen off him. The game was hard fought, as second place honors in the S. I. A. A. depended on the outcome of the series. Ezell and Davenport played their last S. I. A. A. games, Ezell going to Pittsburg with the close of college.

Hill Manager For LaGrange

LAGRANGE, Ga., May 10.—Though already having a winning ball team so far as high quality players are concerned, and having won the attendance trophy of the league, and also winning yesterday the first shut-out game of the 1913 season of the league, the directors of the LaGrange club set the fans on fire today when they put in charge of the team as manager Obediah Hill, former captain and catcher of the University of Georgia team and one of the fastest and headiest ball players in Georgia.

For some time the directors have been figuring with Mr. Hill who has had many flattering offers to manage Georgia teams this season, but up to today he has declined every offer because his business interests did not permit.

His interestin LaGrange and his desire to have her have a winning team led him to accept the management of the club. His home is at Greenville in Meriwether, adjoining county to Troup. He is a son of Hon. Warner Hill and great grandson of Hon. Hiram Warner Hill of the supreme court of Georgia.

He is a man of sterling character and a baseball player both fast and heady.

Simmons has been shifted by Manager Busch to the Petersburg outfield, having been used at second last season. He is leading off but has hit less than 200 thus far this season.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Chicago defeated New York today in a close game, 2 to 1, both Demaree and Cheney pitching fine games. Only three hits were made off the New York youngster, but he was poorly supported. The Cubs scored in the sixth on a scratch hit by Evers, a muff at second by Fletcher, Phelan's sacrifice hit and Saier's sacrifice fly. The Giants tied in the seventh on singles by Fletcher, Doyle and Herzog, though the locals would have retired without a run but for a muff at second by Evers. Evers then drove home the winning run with a triple in the eighth, after Miller reached second on a bad throw by Herzog. . It was Johnny Evers' day at the polo grounds. Evers was presented with a large silver loving cup, a cane and several floral pieces, sent by friends in Troy and Chicago.

BOSTON, 1; ST. LOUIS, 1.

BOSTON, May 10.—Boston and St. Louis played a twelve-inning, 1 to 1 tie game this afternoon, the contest being called on account of cold weather. It was a pitchers' battle between Tyler and Perritt, when the latter was taken out in the tenth innnig to allow a pinch hitter to go in. Sallee finished the game and struck out four batsmen in three innings.

Boston's run was due to errors. Devlin grounded to Konetchy. Whaling and Tyler walked. Maranville hit to Whitted and Huggins droppped the throw to get Tyler at second. The latter kept on to third. Whaling being thrown out at the plate by Huggins. Myers hit to Whitted and was safe on his poor throw, Tyler scoring. Sweeney fouled to Konetchy.

St. Louis tied the score in the sixth innning. McLean singled and was forced at second by Perritt. Tyler's balk advanced the latter, and he went to third when Whaling threw wild to catch him napping. Perritt scored on the squeeze play, Huggins bunting toward first. MaGee was safe on Tyler's wild throw and Whitted went out at first.

CLEVELAND, 9; BOSTON, 2.

CLEVELAND, O., May 10.—Taking to*day's game from Boston, 9 to 2,* Cleveland captured three out of four from the world's champions in the first series. The games was almost even until the sixth inning, when four hits, including Jackson's ttriple, and an error gave Cleveland six runs.

Speaker hit the firsthome run made at the local park this season, in the first inning. In the fifth inning, Jackson was purposely passed to get at LaJoie, the first ttime in many years such a thing has occurred. LaJoie hit to Wagner, whose toss to Yerkes was fumbled, two runs resulting.

NEW YORK 10, DETROIT 9.

DETROIT, May 10.—Thrilling situations and awful errors reigned supreme in the last game of the series today—a ten-inning struggle—which New York took from Detroit by a 10 to 9 score. Ty Cobb's sacrifice fly in the ninth, bringing Witt home, tied the score. Daniels brought in the winning run when Hartzell drove a savage single to center. New York used two pitchers and Detroit three. None was steady or effective, and the loose support which each received helped to produce many of the runs. Chase's weird fielding and throwing enabled Detroit to come up from behind and tie. After the visitors apparently had the game safely won.

Cobb, whose eyes have been bothering him, was sitting on the Detroit bench in civilian clothes in the sixth inning, when his club began to forge toward victory. Springing to the club house he donned a uniform and returned in time to bat for Louden in the ninth. He lifted a weak fly to Cree, but the fielder threw poorly to the plate and Witt had no trouble scoring. It was "Chance day" at detroit.

WASHINGTON 1, CHICAGO 0.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Walter Johnson, the speedy pitcher of the Washington club, added nine more innings to his record in holding his opponents runless by shutting out the local team today, 1 to 0. This gives him a total of 52 2-3 innings pitched in which his opponents have been unable to score. The record for runless innings is held by Doc White, pitcher of the Chicago American league club. White pitched 56 innings without allowing a score nine years ago. Johnson was opposed by Benz, who gave a fine exhibition.

The fielding behind Johnson ,especially that of Moeller and Shanks in the eighth inning, when Chicago had a man as far as third base with only one out, enabled Johnson to add to his record. Johnson held the locals to two hits.

The visitors made their one run in the fifth inning when Schaefer walked, Milan singled and Schaller droped Laporte's long fly, allowing Schaefer to score.

The day was the coldest of the season, but a very large crowd witnessed the game:

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 10.—Philadelphia won from St. Louis today, 8 to 6. Plank was hit hard by the locals and his wildness in the ninth inning almost caused his downfall. Philadelphia won out in the tenth, scoring two runs. Lerenz, who replaced Stone, walked Collins and was relieved by Hamilton. Baker and McInnis singled and Collins scored. Baker scored on tan fatfield out. St. Louis tied the score in the ninth when Plank hit Austin and Agnew and Walker McAllister, who batted for D. Walsh. Austin scored on an out and Wallace, batting for Stone, singled, scoring two more runs. Austin was put out of the game in the tenth for disputing a called strike by Umpire O'Loughlin.

FEW STARS

In the recent Tech-Georgia games which were played at Athens and which were both won by Tech there were many surprises in the players' department. Several men who were expected to show *extra good form were not up to the ex*pectations, while others who were thought to be only mediocre showed that they were players of the deep water variety. The games were fast and marked by the lack of errors on both sides.

Among the players who starred for both sides are:

Bowden—This man was playing utility for the Red and Black and broke into the game when Henderson was injured in the Saturday's game. He is a player of real merit, and was given an offer by several big league moguls.

Morris—This is Morris' first year on the Red and Black nine, but he has shown form that is remarkable in a new man. In a recent game against Vanderbilt he pitched a no-hit, no-run game. He will have a good chance for All-Southern honors. He pitched a good game Saturday, but lost. He was injured in the eighth.

Moore—He is playing the third sack for the Yellowjackets and is considered one of the best in the game. He has the honor of knocking the first home run that was ever gotten on Tech diamond.

Amason—This boy is the Yellowjackets' first baseman since Holliday was declared ineligible. He is some player and played the Georgia series up to big league form. That he will make a good man next year is putting it light.

Corley—This is the man that relieved Morris in the Saturday game. He is a good man, and has done some good work for the Red and Black this year. He is built for a pitcher, and has a fine delivery. He will be heard from in the remainder of the series.

The last but not least man that we have is Pitts, the left-paw pitcher of the Jackets. He worked the second game of the series and did splendid work. It was his work that was largely responsible for the Tech victory. He is a good man to send in at any time, and his specialty is pulling out of the hole with three men on bases and nobody known.

Run After Being Burned

A story, which fortunately is fully verified, comes from Williamsport, Pa., of the performance of two Cadillac cars which under ordinary circumstances would be hailed as unbelievable.

Recently a combination barn and garage burned in Williamsport. There were a half dozen motor cars and several horses in the structure. The horses were burned and so were the cars. But after the fire had been extinguished and the ruins cooled off, several men entered the barn to ascertain the damage.

The bodies had been burned off the cars, the wheel-spokes charred, etc. One of the men threw on the switch of one of the Cadillacs and was greatly surprised when the motor started to purr, having started on compression.

The motors of the other cars were tested. None of them would start on the switch, but the other Cadillac did start with one turn of the crank while the other cars could not be moved. Although the steering mechanism of both Cadillacs had been damaged, both cars were run out of the structure on their own power and taken to another garage to be repaired.

Errors Helped Memphis Crew To Win Game

In Second Inning Turtles Got Away With Two Runs, Thompson and Harrell Both Pitched Good Ball

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 10.—Memphis, with one game of the series to its credit, won again today from Birmingham 3 to 1. Both Thomson and Harrell pitched excellent ball, but the Birmingham man's supoprt weakened in the second, when bunched hits and errors enabled Memphis to score two men.

Robertson Is Star Hitter For Southern

Three Atlanta Players Have Averages Better Than Three Hundred–Mobile Outfielder Is Sure a Comer

n Robertson, the sensational young college player the New York Giants turned over to Mike Finn at Mobile for additional training, is the premier hitter of the Southern league. He has an average of .434 and continues to go at a great clip. Next in line is Tommy Long, of Atlanta, this speed youth boasting of an average of .359.

Not only is Robertson the leading hitter of the league, but he holds first place as a slugger and at stealing bases is second only to Stock, also of the Gulls.

KILBANE DID NOT GO GOOD

NEW YORK, May 10.—Although Johnny Kilbane seems to have been unjustly treated by having his bout with Dundee called a draw, the fact remains that the featherweight champion did not enhance his standing to any great extent by his showing. On the whole it was demonstrated that New York's estimate of Kilbane as champion was not far out of the way. He is merely a clever boxer with wonderful footwork, but nothing else that compares favorably with his predecessor's ability.

On account of his knockout of Joe Rivers and his defeat of Abe Attell, Kilbane stood high in the estimation of Californians. They could not understand why he failed to score a hit in New York and laid the blame to local prejudice. But now that Kilbane has shown himself to possess nothing in the way of a decisive blow, his rating is being set at a much lower notch. Far coast fans do not favor the Packy McFarland brand of cleverness. In Eddie Campi they have a most talented glove artist, but as he lacks a punch he is not appreciated and he will soon be given a mitt. Kilbane is likely to suffer in the same way to some extent, although as he is a champion, he cannot be overlooked altogether.

It was also demonstrated that Kilbane's talk about turning his attention to the lightweights is somewhat premature. He could not weight without difficulty and there appears to be no reason why he should not continue to do so. Certainly on that score he displayed he could not expect to hold his own with the topnotch lightweights.

Wolgast Continues Though All Through

NEW YORK, May 10.—When Ad Wolgast was a champion he found great pleasure in sneering at Battling Nelson and others who continued to struggle along after their best days had departed. He was wont to remark that he was the one veteran who had too much good sense to continue after defeat came his way. But now that Wolgast has the chance to put his oft-repeated remarks into effect his point of view seems to have veered most decidedly. According to his latest statements he means to struggle on as long as he can obtain a match in the forlorn hope of fighting his way back to the top.

Now that Wolgast is down and out, a review of his career shows that he was far such a bad champion after all, compared with his successor, Willie Ritchie. Wolgast appears to better advantage. During the time he held the title he spent little time on the stage. He fought whenever a purse that was satisfactory to him was forthcoming and gave few would-be opponents. In fact, it was his anxiety to fight that led to his undoing. He neglected to wait until he had fully recovered from his operation before donning the gloves again, and as a result he never did fully recover.

Motor Race for Viking Cup

NEW YORK, May 10.—The New York Athletic club has chosen June 21 as the date for the first race for the $2,500 viking cup offered by Sir Thomas Lipton for cruising motor boats of a water line length between thirty and thirty-eight feet. The course will be from New Rochelle through Long Island sound to Block Island, a distance of 160 miles. The prize must be won three times by the same owner to become his permanent property. The crews must be made up entirely of amateurs.

Boats competing for the Lipton rup may race at the same time for the Day trophy, which is open to cruisers from twenty-five to forty feet.

A special cup is being offered by a well known yachtsman to the boat defeating the largest nhmber of boats that compete in the following three long distance races:

MICHIGANDER IS ON STAGE

Paul Bert Dickey, one of the best athletes that ever attended the University of Michigan, will be in the city next week, doing a vaudeville sketch at the Forsyth theater. He will do some very good comedy and singing work. While at college he was leader of the Michigan Comedy club, and the season that he was leader was an especially good one.

Besides being a leader in dramatics he was a football, baseball and track star. He played an end and a half during the season of '02 and all followers of the game will remember the famous team that the Michigan bunch had that year. He was a quarter-miler on the track and showed a clean pair of heels to many a college athlete. Dickey is of a very pleasing personality and is a fine specimen of a man, physically. He is about six feet tall and weighs around 185. His act is a good one, and he is calculated to get more than his share of applause when he appears here.

Severe Test Given Packard Engine

The most severe test ever given an automobile engine under official observance began Saturday, May 3, when the motor of a standard Packard "38" was placed upon the test rack in the garage of the Automobile club of America, in New York, for a non-stop run of 200 hours. The official world's record non-stop motor test is 132 hours, made over two years ago in England.

The motor being tested was taken from Packard "38" car upon its arrival in New York, after a hard run from Cleveland, Ohio.

The test is being made under the auspices of the technical committee of the Automobile Club of America, which will make a detailed report of the outcome. The motor is running under a brake resistance equaling the work necessary by a loaded Packard "38" climbing a 6 1-2 per cent grade at a speed of 37 miles per h ur.

A speed of 1,200 revolutions per minute is being maintained by the Packard motor. This is in excess of the requirements of the rules governing the test. The throttle is wide open and with the standard Packard gearing the motor is doing work sufficient to drive a car 888 miles every twenty-four hours.

If the motor runs the full 200 hours, the test, figured in miles, whould exceed a non-stop run from New York to San Francisco and return.

CHANCE IN "REGULAR GUY"; EVERY MOVE MEANS SOMETHING

Peerless Leader of New York Americans Has Task to Do and This He Is Forever Working Upon

NEW YORK, May 10.—Frank Chance is a regular guy. The accent is on the "regular" and the phrase is the phrase of the bellhop at his hotel, who called him for me. The telephone girl says he is a real man, accept on the adjective. Two men in the lobby said he was some ball player, and the clerk at the desk shouted, "Call Mr. Chance," with an earnestness, earsomes, almost joyousness that proved he was as proud to have "the peerless leader" in his hotel as a kid with a new red wagon.

The bellhop, the telephone girl, the men in the lobby and the hotel clerk are right. Frank Chance, manager of the Highlanders, rejuvenator of the New York American League baseball team, the man who put the "go" in Chicago baseballically speaking, is a real man.

You know this as soon as you lay eyes on him, even before you hear him speak in his simple, direct way, with a slight bark in his voice, as befits one that has bawled coaching directions to his men for a dozen years or so.

As he crossed the threshold of the reception room the most noticeable thing about him was his parenthetical legs. You get the impression that they and the Rock of Gibraltar are the only things in all this world that will last forever.

He is exactly six fet tall and weighs 191 pounds. He is as thin and comfortable looking round the waist as a debutante. His shoulders and neck look as though he could walk, off with the piano, library table, morris chair and china cabinet without inconvenience.

His face is lean and well featured, with grayish, tawny eyes, surrounded by a shringing of laugh wrinkles. His hair is slicked back smooth as satin, and his hands are well shaped and strong. They never make extra motions, never tap-tap, or fuss with things. Every word Frank Chance says, every move he makes, means something.

There was not a shadow of grouch on his face, although he had lost his fourth game that afternoon. And he hates to loose.

"It is the hardest thing I do," he said.

"What's next hardest?" I asked him. He leaned forward to catch the words, saying, "Marm?" like a small boy in a little red schoolhouse. I repeated the question and he thought carefully for a moment.

"Making the first guess," he answered cryptically. "If a manager could always guess right when he chooses a man for the box it would be a comparatively easy life," he sighed. "But a manager only has first guess. He picks the man he thinks is going to make good. If he doesn't, he fans want the manager's life. You see, the fans have second guess as to who the best man is, but I have only first."

A slow, kind smile spread over Mr. Chance's face.

"Aw," he replied, "I don't believe in jawing. It all depends on the kind of mistakes he makes. Every man makes mistakes with his hands. The better player he is the more he's apt to make. He has the most work to do. I wouldn't want a fellow who never made mistakes with his hands. No—there's not much daniger of getting one.

"I believe in rewards. Everybody works best under encouragement, I don't care who it is—ball players, friends, everybody—even your wife.

"I try to do the right thing by the men and I think they understand me. I used to worry a lot. You can't worry and be a good player. Loss of sleep through worry nearly put me out of business last year. Now I just do the best I can and try not to rock the boat.

"There's one thing baseball managing does for a man. If he can stand the excitement, the knocks and the worry of it, he can stand anything. Once upon a time I would have worried about my frozen oranges out in California. Now it don't bother me.

"Taking it all in all," summed up the big, keen-eyed leader, "it's the greatest game on earth—just that. The excitement is terrible sometimes and the responsibility is big. You can't please everybody, but you can try. No, marm, there's nothing like baseball."

You can look cross-eyed at Frank Chance without fearing him. He is willing to walk under a ladder, break a mirror, room in No. 13 and stub his toe. But if you point a camera at him he will duck like a boy in an orchard when he sees the farmer and his shotgun.

DUFFY LEWIS IS BEST AT HITTING OVER THE SCORES

During the first two weeks of the American league championship season, Duffy Lewis, of the Boston Red Sox, drove in more runs than any other player in the junior organization. The Speed Boys' left fielder batted in eleven counters, nine of the tallies being registered on safeties and two on sacrifice flies. Two other Johnsonites—Joe Jackson and J. Gladstone Ganey, of the Naps—reached double figures in batting in runs, each man having hit in ten tallies.

Tied for fourth place in the timely hitting list are Moeller, of Washington; Johnson, of St. Louis, and Baker, of Philadelphia, each man having driven in eight runs. Napoleon Lajoie, during the first fortnight of play sent seven of his teammates to the bdreau of registration, and Tris Speaker, who won the Chalmers American league trophy last year, five.

Up to last Wednesday, Lewis had been Boston's timollest thumper. Graney or Jackson, Cleveland's; Moeller, Washington's; Johnstone, St. Louis'; Baker, Philadelphia's; Collins or Borton, Chicago's; Moriarty, Detroit's, and Cree, New York's.

PLAYERS MUST TELL OF CLUB HOUSE ROW.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Third Baseman Olson, of the Cleveland club, and Catcher Nunamaker, of the Boston team, will be suspended unless they file by Monday with President Johnson, of the American league, full reports of the general fight among players which took place after the game in Cleveland Wednesday.

Olson and Nunamaker were ring-leaders in the fist melee reported to President Johnson.

Outsider Won Derby Honors

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 10.—A champion three-year-old of America leaped into prominence today and the Churchill Downs Derby course record was broken before the largest crowd that ever witnessed a Derby here, when Donerail, a Kentucky colt, nipped Ten Point at the wire and won the thirty-ninth renewal of the Kentucky Derby. The winner, never having shown startling ability as a two-year-old, paid $184.90 for $2 in the pari-mutuel betting. The time was 2:04 4-5.

The field was larger than had been predicted, eight starters facing the barrier, and spectators who have witnessed runnings of the Derby for years, interesting alike for its turf prominence and sentiment of Kentuckians, say it was one of the greatest exhibitions of a real horse race ever presented at a Derby contest.

In their belief that the west would win from the east in this premier turf event of America, westerners had pinned their faith to Foundation, believing Jockey Buxton colt to have the best chance to beat the top heavy favorite, Ten Point, A. L. Aste's Jack Point colt.

When the horses passed the grandstand after running a quarter of the mile and a quarter course, Ten Point had been hustled into a short lead, with the others close behind him. At the next turn Jockey Buxton had allowed his mount to take a commanding lead, and at the mile Ten Point was three lengths ahead, with the others fighting hard and with about even chances. As they rounded the last turn, Jockey Goose began to force Donerail ahead of the crowd he had been running with and started after the leader. Whether a more determined ride by Jockey Buxton would have stalled off the fast coming Donerail was questioned, but the Kentucky colt was slowly wore down the favorite in the stretch, and just got up enough in the last few strides to win by a length. Gowell, a filly sired by Ort Wells, was third, and Foundation, second choice in the betting, and Pride of Kentuckyians finished out of the money.

Any one who wants to see the Kentucky Derby may do so free of charge as far as the Jockey club management is concerned, and never before had the "free field" been so popular. Early in the day country folk came from near and far, and by the hundreds to the field encircled by the track, spread their lunch and waited for the Derby. On the other side of the track the grandstand and betting shed were crowded.

Donerail is by McCree, out of Algie M., and is owned by Trainer J. T. Hayes. Other starters were Lord Marshall, Jimmie Gill, Yankee Notions and Leochman.

The prices were:

Donerail, $184.90, $41.20, $13.20.
Ten Point, $3.50, $3.30.
Gowell, $14.10.

Motorcycle Service

Louisville, Ky., business men are rapidly adopting the motorcycle for use in their particular departments.

One grocery company there has purchased a motorcycle for the order clerk, who makes his daily rounds in a small portion of the time it formerly required. The only all night drug store in Louisville uses a motorcycle to deliver prescriptions by telephone orders in emergency cases. This one motorcycle takes the place of three bicycles. A cleaning company also uses a motorcycle for collecting and delivering garments. Five motorcycles are at the disposal of street lamp inspectors and repair men of the Louisville Lighting company. There are also three real estate men in Louisville who have provided motorcycles for their collectors.

State Motorcycle Patrol

Having found motorcycles of prime value in policing cities and counties, Kansas has gone a step further and has made the entire state a unit for motorcycle police work.

The organization of a state-wide motorcycle patrol, now being perfected, will make Kansas too hot a place for lawbreakers of every degree.

Under the plan which is being worked out, the organization will have one or more motorcyclemen in each city and town—men who will be ready to respond to any call. No matter what portion of the state finds the sudden need of swift pursuit of a criminal, there will be available motorcyclists who can take the trail at short notice and overtake 'anything on wheels."

Collins Hits Above Form; Jackson Close

Warm Race to Be Waged in the American League for the 1913 Honors at the Batting Game–Speaker Goes Good

Eddie Collins, the sensational Mack youngster, continues to hit the pill far above his natural ability and is now topping the American league batsmen with the high average of .460. Next in line come Jackson, Speaker and Lajoie, though this trio of celebrated swatsmiths are many points behind the Philadelphia youngster.

Home runs have been scarce to date, no player getting more than one to date. Jackson is the leading swatter, his 28 hits going for 50 bags. Jackson has made 28 hits in 20 games and Collins 29 in but 17 battles.

Harvard Won From Cornell

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 10.—Harvard athletes defeated the men from Cornell today in their first dual track and field meet. The score by points was Harvard 65, Cornell 54.

The crimson's success was unexpected, Cornell having been the favorite since its victory over Michigan last Saturday.

A strong cross wind which blew into the stadium discouraged any attempts at record breaking and mediocre performances resulted.

Harvard's strength was in the field events, in which T. Cable gathered two first places, the broad jump and hammer throw and A. L. Jackson won both hurdles events.

Cornell's runners gave the Ithacans the bulk of their points. O. A. Heller obtained first places in the 100 and 220 yards dashes.

More Motorcycle Weddings

Clad in serviceable corduroy suits and leather leggings, George A. Lawrence and Flora Isabella Cantwell engaged into Son Jose, Cal., on a motorcycle, procured a marriage license and the services of a justice of the peace, and then chugged away again toward the southern part of the state, where they will spend their honeymoon.

An extensive motorcycle honeymoon has also been planned by Rev. C. W. Wharton, of Kentland, Ind. Rev. Mr. Wharton, who is to be married within a short time, recently purchased a motorcycle with side car attachment, and, with his bride, will tour France, Germany, Switzerland and the Netherlands.

Build Yacht For America That Is Star

Understood That Backers Won't Rely Upon Old Reliance at Coming Meet With Sir Thomas Lipton's Craft

NEW YORK, May 10.—It may be said on excellent authority that the New York Yacht club, in event of the arrangement of a series of races for the America's cup next year, will not rely so much upon Reliance as followers of yachting here think—or, as Sir Thomas Lipton, it is said, hopes—it will American designers have not been asleep since the days when the vanquisher of Shamrock III was a thing of life, as it were, and there are several men in this city whose opinion upon things nautical are entitled to very deep respect, who are inclined to look upon Reliance as old-fashioned and not to be compared to any first-class ninety-foot sloop that might be turned out next season, either for the defense of the cup or as a challenger.

Down the wind, at least, it is held, a modern product would be very likely to show the 1913 defender a pretty pair of heels. The statement that a seventy-five footer of the vintage of 1914 built from the boards of a designer of a high order of ability, should be able to defeat Reliance, boat for boat down the wind, will strike almost any one not keenly conversant with modern trends as essentially rash, and yet I have it from a man who is wholly given to guarded utterances, if only because of his realization that the things he says are to be accepted as with authority.

Lipton, by the way, is committed to a seventy-five foot sloop, as a single-sticker of that length is named in his challenge, and there is as a matter of fact, a decided sentiment among racing members of the New York Yacht club in favor of seventy-five-foot cup racers. This trend is shown by the reaction in the club toward schooners ranging from sixty to seventy-odd feet water-line, of which we may expect to see, within the next two years, a number launched. In event of a cup race being arranged with sloops of the length named in the Royal Ulster challenge, I shall be very much surprised if, at least, four—probably more—candidates are not built for the honor of selection as the boat to meet Shamrock IV.

It is a foregone conclusion that nothing to defeat the Lipton boat, and to dispose finally of the "genial baronet" as a contender for America's cup honors will be left undone. Whether unjustly or otherwise, there is the feeling that so long as Sir Thomas remains in the field other English yachtsmen are disinclined to put themselves forward as challengers. The defending club is by no means averse to holding a cup race, but it is felt that a greater diversity in the matter of challenging personality would be more agreeable in every respect. This is one great reason why the present defiance is almost certain to be accepted; a series with a new Lipton boat has been hanging over years, and now appears to be the time to arrange for the race and get it out of the way. In event of a fourth series being decided against Lipton, it would certainly be every ethical and moral and sportsmanlike reason why he should subside in favor of Mr. Allom, or the Duke of Sutherland or whatever have a "hack etaoiSHRDL et etaoin other Britton might feel inclined to have a "hack" at the great prize.

There is great esprit de corps in the New York Yacht club, whatever may be held against that organization, and once the committee announces the completion of arrangements with the Royal Ulster committee, no amount of money will stand in the way of an effectual defence of the trophy. That Nicholason, the English designer, will send over a sweet cutter, in the event the series is held, is foregone. He is a man of extremely original ideas, as all his boats have demonstrated, and any challenger of his would have points repaying the study of fellow-designers, here and abroad. Fife was not a man of original ideas, a fact emphasized as strongly in his Shamrock I as in any other of his creations Watson, on the other hand, had an original method, and his Shamrock II was by far the best boat of the Lipton cup racers. Sir Thomas, I think, would have done well to have had his third cutter designed by him, but he returned to Fife with disastrous results.

MOTORCYCLE RACING GAME IS STARTED AT BRIGHTON

NEW YORK, May 5.—With a view of permitting the sport-inclined populace of the greater city to see the best motorcycle riders in the country performing during the coming session, the management of the stadium-motordrome at Brighton Beach has completed arrangements whereby the premier pilots of the east and west will clash in a series of matches at the Brighton course as a fitting close to a banner season.

The races will be between the pick of the eastern riders, eight in all, and the best riders of the American League of Professional Motorcycle Racers, which controls the sport in the big cities of the west.

The dual tests will consume the final two weeks of the season, beginning, in all probability, on Labor day. Three nights each week will be devoted to the settling of the intersectional supremacy between the most daring riders of the Atlantic seaboard and the fearless pilots of the Mississippi valley.

In order to decide the riders best qualified to repulse the western invasion, the management of the Brighton track will conduct a series of elimination contests at varying distances and handicap events. The weeding out process will commence on the opening night, May 30, and continue till the latter part of August. A score of riders have already signed for the battle to uphold eastern supremacy. The management has decided upon racing three nights every week throughout the season.

Five riders who promise to be in the final tests to bear the brunt of the work against the visitors hail from New York and Philadelphia. They are Arthur Chapple and Mike Costello, of this city, and Hartley Thomas, William Vandebury and Ray Veditz, representing the Quaker City. This quintet, along with more than two dozen others, will engage in the old elimination series to determine the men who will establish eastern superiority.

The five men mentioned are already in condition to start the season, which gives every indication of being the greatest in the history of the sport on this side of the continent. The intersectional arrangement is the best that could be made to close a season of hard campaigning, for the enthusiasts are desirous of seeing how their favorites will fare with the best produced thousands of miles to our west. The season will endure from May 30 to September 15, and exciting competition is assured at every night's meeting.

Extra Large Force Worked by Peerless

A pressure of business upon the Peerless Motor Car company such as has not existed in the high-grade motor car field since the early days of the industry is revealed in a bulletin issued by E. J. Kulas, general manager of sales, to the dealers and branches of the company. The company offers all customers whose orders are on the books for delivery before July 1, time for delaying the delivery until after that date if the delay amounts to 30 days, and $200 if it amounts to 60 days.

It was evident several months ago that the number of Peerless cars sold this year would be greater than it had been for several seasons. The company took time by the forelock and made special preparations to turn out a larger number of cars. Additional factory facilities were provided and the organization made ready for the rush. But the volume of sales, beginning early in January has increased constantly ever since, until the demand is considerably in excess of the immediate output.

Trap Shooters Go For Big Tournament

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 10.—Elmer E. Shanon, of Pittsburg, Pa., treasurer of the Southern Interstate Trap Shooters' association, reached Montgomery this morning and assumed personal command of the arrangements for the association's eighth annual handicap tournament, which begins Tuesday at the grounds of the Capital City Gun club, five miles from this city. It is expected that there will be between 125 and 140 entries. Preliminary practice will start this afternoon.

The tourney lasts three days.

Invitation Extended To Exposition Athletes

NEW YORK, May 10.—James E. Sullivan, director of athletics at the Panama-Pacific exposition, has cabled an invitation to the athletes of the world to take part in the events of the exposition. The invitation will be extended to representatives of all nations attending the special congress of the international Olympic committee in Switzerland by Prof. William H. Sloan, the American committeeman.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

Oversize Means This

Ten per cent extra air capacity over hooked-base clincher tires.

It means the same as extra width, which costs you extra money. It means, on the average, 25 per cent more mileage.

No-Rim-Cut tires, with this 10 per cent oversize, cost no more than clinchers.

More Than 10%

The oversize of No-Rim-Cut tires is more than 10 per cent.

Actual comparison with six makes of clinchers shows the average oversize 16.7 per cent.

That means that you get in No-Rim-Cut tires about one-sixth more air capacity than you get in clinchers. And air is what carries the load.

You get this extra without extra cost. For No-Rim-Cut tires now cost the same as standard clincher tires.

Statistics show that 23 per cent of all clincher tires become rim-cut.

Those are the reasons why clincher tires must go. Men will not stand this rim-cut ruin when a new-type tire prevents it.

Men are bound to demand an oversize tire when they know what it adds to their tire mileage.

When you know these tires, as legions do, you will never buy any others. Come let us show them to you.

Then Add This

You also get in this new type a tire that can't rim-cut. A clincher tire can and does.

INTERNATIONAL ASPECT TO BIG SWEEPSTAKES EVENTS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 10.—The fact that some very fast foreign cars have been entered in the 500-mile race May 30, will lend a bit of international character to the competition.

The work of some of the cars which are entered is interesting. The big Peugeot car, which Jules Goux will drive in the 500-mile race, again broke its record for six hours. Goux piloted the car around the Brooklands track for a single lap at a speed of 109.27 miles an hour, beating his former record of 108 miles an hour, made in the same car on the same track.

The shearing of a pin caused him to discontinue the trial after the fifty-seventh lap, and three tire changes kept him from shattering the hour record, which is held by Percy Lambert in a Talbot car. Two minutes lost in the seventeenth lap to replace a tire, another change in the twenty-seventh lap, lost him the records by but three miles. In his hour of running he drove 101 miles and 321 yards. The record is 103 2-8 miles an hour. His time for the 100 miles was 59:49:78.

Three Isotta-Fraschini seventy-five-horse-power racing cars are to compete in the 500-mile race. They have been shipped from Havre. This is the word brought back by Ray Gilhooly, who has recently returned from the Isotta factory at Milan, where he was sent to see what progress had been made in turning out the racing cars.

The drivers of the three cars will make a strong trio for the re-entry of the Isotta in a big way into the racing world in this country.

Harry F. Grant, twice winner of the Vanderbilt cup, has been signed to drive one of the three machines. Arrangements have about been completed with Eddie Tetzlaff, the creator of a world's speed average on the Santa Monica course, to take the wheel of another of the fast Italian cars.

Gilhooly, who has not had experience on the Indianapolis speedway, but who is thoroughly familiar with Isottas and their speed possibilities, will be the driver of the third machine.

Montgomery Holds Golf Tournament

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 10.—Arrangements are being made for the southern golf tournament which will be held on the links at the Country club, of Montgomery, in June. Two hundred golfers from all parts of the south will be here for several days.

Many improvements on the club house and links have been made and several men have been busy for four or five months rearranging bunkers, changing greens and making other improvements.

Several members of the Country club have gone to Birmingham to attend the annual invitation tournament of the Birmingham Country club, which began Thursday morning.

Ball Ground Wins

CANTON, Ga., May 10.—Ball Ground defeated Canton here last Saturday before a good crowd. Although Canton rallied in the eighth and put over three runs coff of so many hits, they could not overcome the lead piled up by Ball Ground in the first part of the game.

MURPHY MAY NOW RETIRE

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—Mike Murphy, the veteran athletic trainer who has been ill for some time from a complication of diseases which physicians think was brought on by too great exertion during his athletic days, is now very seriously ill, with little chance of recovery. It is reported from his bedside that he has been unable to take nourishment and that his condition is alarming. Murphy has trained Pennsylvania athletes since the fall of 1905, when Pennsylvania got him from Yale, after Yale had taken him away from Pennsylvania. He is one of the most widely knbwn college trainers in the country, and on two occasions has been abroad with the American Olympic teams. During the past five years he has been the victim of several breakdowns in health.

Famous Racer Dead

WARRENSBURG, Mo., May 9.—Walnut Ray, the famous pacing stallion, which made the fastest pacing record of any breeding horse on exhibition at the Columbian exposition, Chicago, in 1893, is dead here. The horse was owned by John Callison, a well known breeder of pacing stock. The horse was twenty-seven years old.

Freak Stroke for Foreign Stars

NEW YORK, May 10.—W. P. Jones, of the Australian tennis team, which is to compete here in June, has developed a new freak stroke which followers of the game abroad claim more effective than the lofard.

Jones has christened his new delivery "the twister." It is a combination drop and out-curve and is used almost entirely in alley play, either to draw an opponent from mid-court for a quick smashing follow up, or to make him fan.

Strange to say, the new shot is a by-product of humble parlor ping-pong. Mr. Jones watched the puzzling curves that a skilled player could produce with his paddle and little celluloid ball and conceived the idea of a similar short hold stroke in tennis.

The outdrop is obtained by grasping the racket just below the head and lofting, and at the sametime cutting the ball to right.

Good players who rely upon a fast mid-court game, generally avoid all cut-strokes, inasmuch as slicing slows up their play.

The twister takes very little speed from a shot. It is difficult to return and if placed, carries an opponent out of bounds.

Uncertainty Is Biggest Asset In Fistic Game

Many Pugs Have Looked Good Today, Only to Sink Into Insignificance Tomorrow—Hard to Make the Ranking

NEW YORK, May 10.—Part of the fascination of boxing for its devotees has always been the rank uncertainty of the game. The making and the losing of fortunes have been as noted as the sudden rises and falls of the fighters from popularity. There always has been about boxing the glamor of adventure, the uncertainty and hazardousness which called free spirits to piracy in less lawful days than the present.

No better examples of this can be found than in the fighters of the present day. The headliners of even a year ago have walked the plank, while, on the other hand, many who were unconsidered or down and out have attained the height of popularity.

A little more than a year ago Abe Attell was featherweight champion and drew large houses wherever he went. Now his drawing powers and reputation have diminished by over half. Kayo Brown and Matt Wells loomed high last year. Now Wells, the Britisher, would draw but little in this country and Brown is visibly slipping.

"One Round" Hogan, Grover Hayes, Mike Gibbons, Jem Driscoll, Owen Moran—all now are becoming mere names. Hogan is sliding rapidly; Hayes is just so-so; Gibbons has lost his popularity and must reconstruct himself. Driscoll admits he is all in. Moran has lost his former punch and stamina and the big money passes him by.

Now, conversely, note Frankie Klaus, who a year ago was fighting but little and making less financially. In Paris he seems to have plumped into the midst of a rosy dream. The French sporting public idolizes him.

Freddie Welsh last year was boxing small bouts for minor guarantees. Now he has just returned from England and the promoters are swarming to offer him double what he could have made in London. He has the opportunity to make his fortune.

Billy Papke has seen both sides of the story. A year ago he was fighting for small money. Then, going to Paris, he fought three battles for big purses. In the last one, however, he found Klaus and the French have about tied the can on him. He was indefinitely suspended in New York state before going abroad, and is barred on the coast. It looks as though he would have to retire.

In such fashion does the old game twist and warp the fortune of its servants.

Wrestler Quit Cold; Injured His Foot

NEW YORK, May 10.—George Lurich, the Russian heavyweight wrestler, quit in his catch-as-catch-can match, two out of three falls, with Raymond Cazeaux, of Bordeaux, here last night. After twenty minutes' aggressive work by Cazeaux, he turned Lurich over almost to a fall with a toe hold. Lurich limped out of the ring, saying his foot was injured and that he could not continue.

TENNIS MEET

WASHINGTON, May 10—With a number of players of national note competing, the sixth annual open tennis tourney of the Chevy Chase club opened here Thursday. There were no upsets in form in the first day of play.

Gustav Touchard, present holder of the American indoor title and winner of two "legs" on the club's singles championship cup, failed to appear. C. B. Doyle, of Washington, also has two "legs" on the cup and will own it unless he is beaten in this tournament.

PINNING HIM CLOSE TO FIRST

Rollie Zeider, of the White Sox, being kept close to first by Cleveland's star southpaw, Vean Gregg, in the opening game in the Ohio city. Johnson had just received the ball as his attitude shows. Zeider was the only man to score on Gregg in this game.

RACE TRACK FOR TROTTERS

NEW YORK, May 10.—One of the most interesting places in the metropolitan district at this time is the Parkway track at Gravesend, where Jack Phillips and his second trainer, Frank Small, are working more than forty trotters and pacers.

At this time all of the horses have had "repeats," and the black trotting mare Meteor has been a mile in 2:50 and back in 2:45. This mare looks like a real high class trotter and will be named in all the slow trots on the metropolitan circuit.

The pacer Joe Mapes has gone 2:30. The big son of Joe Patchen never looked better in his life. He, too, will be named in all the 2:11 paces. At this time it looks as if he would be somewhere when they pay off.

The gray mare Kitty Bellini worked her first mile of the season the other day, but was not allowed to beat three minutes.

Borelli has paced in 2:30 once or twice, and the boys at the track predict that he will be a better horse this year than ever.

R. M. Williams hopes to have the Empire track in shape about May 15. With a promise of good weather, horsemen may hope to get on the track before June 1.

Seven Runs Scored In Sixth Inning

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 10.—Washington and Lee defeated the University of South Carolina, 11 to 9, in a loosely played game. Carolina rallied in the seventh and hit in seven runs. After this the game was called to allow the visitors to catch a train. The batting of Lancaster for the winners and Perritt and Rudisill for the losers featured.

| Score: | R. | H. | E. |

| Washington and Lee | 11 | 14 | 2 |

Smith Wants Jeffries For Sparring Partner

SAN FRANCISCO, May 10.—In preparation for the twenty-round bout scheduled for May 17, Jess Willard has five men at his training quarters as sparring partners while "Gunboat" Smith has so far been obliged to content himself with the services of only Bob Armstrong. But even this, the fight fans say, does not explain what moved the ex-sailor to send to Jim Jeffries this telegram:

"Do you want to come north and act as my sparring partner. Answer immediately."

Haven't Fixed The Date For Dual Session

Harvard and Yale to Meet Cambridge and Oxford on Track at Some Date During the Coming Summer

BOSTON, May 10.—Although there is reason to believe that a satisfactory date has yet to be named for the Harvard-Yale vs. Oxford-Cambridge dual games, the opinion is gaining ground that this famous meet will be added to the already long list of international attractions scheduled for the coming summer and autumn. Despite the extended preliminaries, no definite arrangements have been consummated to date. The four universities interested are all in a receptive mood, and if a suitable date can be selected the other details can be quickly completed.

The invitation requesting the English collegians to compete in the Harvard stadium have been dispatched. The tentative date named—Thursday, June 19—is not expected to be satisfactory to the English team, and they are likely to ask that it be changed to either Saturday, July 12 or 19. This request will in all likelihood be granted, since the most prominent candidates for the Harvard-Yale team have been canvassed and have agreed to continue training until the middle of July should that concession clinch the contest.

The American intervarsity team will be selected on the performances and records scored in the Yale-Harvard dual meet and in the Intercollegiate games to be held in the closing weeks of May. There will follow a period of some weeks, during which it will be necessary for the American combination to retain their athletic form. Since the Oxford-Cambridge dual meet was held on March 14 and the English athletes have broken training, a new course of preparation will be in order should the invitation be accepted, as it is expected by those who are using their best endeavors to bring about the meet.

One reason for the confident prediction that the games will be held is the fact that the English universities can present a strong combination, one which will equal the best that the two American colleges can develop to defeat. Although the team from across the water will be theoretically an English one, the probability is that it will be international in itself. Taking the personnel of the Oxford-Cambridge teams as they compared at the Queen's club, London, May 14, it will be found that nine of the forty-four entrants were either Americans or Colonials.

All of these athletes are eligible to compete for the English universities in the same manner as did G. E. Putnam, the American Oxford Rhoades scholar who won the hammer throw at the last dual games held in London in 1911. While it is of course too early to make any actual comparison of the material of the two squads, some idea of the invading strength of the English universities can be gained from a glance at the performances in the Oxford-Cambridge games held last month. The weather and track conditions at the Queen's club were far from favoring record-breaking track or field feats. The athletes were hampered by a high wind which swept the field, accompanied by frequent and heavy rainfalls.

Vols Grab Hurler

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 10.—Pitcher Jack Brackenridge, last year with the Vernon, Cal., club, of the Pacific Coast league, has been signed by the local team. He was a free agent.

Pitcher Signed

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 10.—Pitcher Ralph Works, of the Cincinnati National league club, was purchased Thursday by the Indianapolis American association management. The price was not announced.

Arrangements for financing the Superior club, of the Northern league, have been tardy, and Manager Fred Curtis, who has his players in training at La-Crosse, may be embarrassed for someone to draw upon for necessary funds.

Is the Car You are Thinking of Buying Up to Date or a Year Behind the Times?

EITHER THE AUTOMOBILE WITH

|---|---|
| Six Cylinders | Self-Starting Motors |
| Left Side Drive | Electric Lights |
| Clean Running Boards | No Projecting Hinges |
| No Projecting Lamps | Tire Inflator |

is a year ahead of the times, or without these appointments it is a year behind the times.

Would you make the mistake of buying a single or two-cylinder car? Of course not.

Would you make the mistake of buying a four-cylinder car today, when in the seven months, or since August, 1912, more than five times as many manufacturers have taken up the six-cylinder car?

Who would consider the purchase of an automobile today without fore doors? Not that such an automobile is not serviceable, but because it is out of date and has not kept up with the times.

In 1914, when every manufacturer who has been able to dispose of his old stock, is advocating and building left-side drives, will not the right-side drive car be as unsalable and conspicuously out of date as is the car without fore doors today, except fore doors can be added while a right-side drive can not be changed to a left-side drive?

Who would ever think of abandoning the left-side drive where the passengers can enter from the sidewalk for a right-side drive where, in order to comply with traffic regulation requiring you to stop with the traffic on the right side of the street, the occupants of the front seat must dismount in the street or go out into the street to enter the car?

The flush side body with concealed hinges and clear running boards will characterize the motor car of the future; the car with projecting hinges, tool boxes, battery boxes and spare tires on the running board, with projecting lamps and horns, will be conspicuously out of date.

There is no question as to which of the characteristics will mark the car of the future. Be sure the car you are considering has these cleaner, later and more practical characteristics, and is not already a year or more behind the times.

Fulton Bag Wins Again

In one of the most exciting games of baseball ever played around this little Empire City was pulled off at Red Hill diamond, between the Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills baseball club and the Atlanta Gas Light company's bunch of ringers. Seeing they were defeated unless they strengthened materially since their last game, they set their lines out for City League players, and landed them, the same being George Dukes, Benny White and Wise. The manager of the Fulton team was wise to this proceeding, but feeling confident his speed boys could mop with anyone, consented to their playing, which was not compulsory according to the by-laws and constitution of the league.

Newnan at Home; Hopes to Spurt

NEWNAN, Ga., May 10.—The Newnan baseball team returns tonight on a special train, after playing in hard luck for three days in Opelika. The Newnan team never was blessed with hard luck since its organization. The first game that was played during this series was played on one of the worst diamonds in the league, and the locals lost, making fourteen errors.

Opelika comes to Newnan for a three-game series and President Bagwell states that he hopes to not have any trouble in overcoming them. Manager Bagwell's team is very much crippled, being deprived of four of the best players. Hawkins, the big right-hander of the locals, is to pitch the opening game Monday. Hawkins is considered one of the best, if not the best, pitcher in the league. He twirled excellent ball against LaGrange Friday day, giving up but three hits. A large crowd is expected out to the game Monday.

SMITH AND HOWARD REPLY FAVORABLY TO MILEAGE LETTERS

They Write Post B., T. P. A., They Will Examine Wallin Bill and Do What's Possible to Aid Travelers

MEASURE SEEKS 2-CENT INTERCHANGEABLE BOOKS

Would Remove Time Limit Restrictions and Permit Baggage Privileges—To be Considered in December

Favorable replies have been received to the letters written by J. H. Andrews, secretary of Post B, T. P. A., to Senator Hoke Smith and Congressman William Schley Howard, requesting their support of the bill introduced in congress by Representative Wallin, of New York, to compel all railroads to issue interchangeable mileage books.

The letters were written by the secretary at the direction of Post B, which, at its last meeting, passed a resolution favoring the purposes of the bill and asking the Georgia senator and representative to examine it and, if they found its provisions just, to urge its passage.

Both of the representatives stated in their letters that they would look into the matter and familiarize themselves with the provisions of the bill and would work toward the end of giving the travelers whatever relief was proper and possible.

"Your letter of the 20th has been received.

"I will take up the Wallin bill and study it carefully. We will not reach action upon it until the December session of congress.

"Please assure the members of the T. P. A. of Georgia that I will give this matter my earnest study, and seek to help perfect a bill which may relieve them of their troubles.

"Sincerely yours,
"HOKE SMITH."

Washington, D. C., May 2, 1913.

Congressman Howard's letter follows:

"I am just in receipt of your favor of the 29th ultimo, asking my support of a bill recently introduced in congress by Mr. Wallin, of New York. With regard to the issuance of interchangeable mileage books by the railroads.

"I have not yet had an opportunity to study the provision of this bill, but I shall make it a point to do so at the very earliest possible moment, as I am deeply interested in any legislation that will be beneficial to the splendid body of men you represent. I assure you that any influence I may have will be exerted in their behalf.

"With kindest regards, I am,
"Yours very truly,
"WILLIAM SCHLEY HOWARD."

Washington, D. C., May 1, 1913.

The contents of the Wallin bill, so far as given by press dispatches, are to the effect that it will compel railroads to issue interchangeable mileage books good on all lines without any time limit restrictions and at the maximum rate of two cents a mile. The mileage is to be issued in 500, 1,000 and 5,000-mile books, and the purchasers are to be entitled to baggage privileges.

The introduction in congress of the Wallin bill is an evidence that the mileage book situation generally throughout the country is not satisfactory to the traveling public and that the question will be the subject of federal legislation until an equitable solution of it is reached.

South Carolina appealed to the federal commerce commission seeking relief from the intolerable mileage situation that has been forced upon that state by the railroads. Testimony in this case is now all before the commission, and it is likely that a decision will be handed down before very long.

J. L. FORREST IS NOW WITH WARD-TRUITT CO.

J. L. Forrest, dry goods traveler widely known through middle Georgia to the knights of the road and to the dry goods trade, is now pulling for Atlanta again after several years with a big St. Louis house.

He will cover practically the same territory he had in that connection for his new house, the Ward-Truitt company.

Mr. Forrest's home is at Macon, and that city will be his headquarters. He is an experienced dry goods salesman and will be a valuable addition to the Ward-Truitt staff.

He left Atlanta Friday with his new samples.

BRATTON DISCUSSES VALUE OF GUMPTION

Says Merchant Must Possess This Quality in Order to Make Business Success

Editor Firing Line: The term "gumption" may sound inelegant to some people, but it means a whole lot. Correctly defined, it stands for quickness of perception, common sense, intelligence, etc. It means more than these, however, for to possess intelligence doesn't always mean to possess "gumption." This is a higher order of intelligence. It carries with it the gift of discernment, and makes for success in the various walks of life. It is that degree of intelligence that enables us to distinguish between the good and the bad, to determine the right course and oing things. It is the dynamic force behind our motions that impels us on to the accomplishment of things, and steers us away from the breakers of failure.

"Gumption" pervades every branch of human endeavor. We find it in religion, society, politics and business and in a great many instances where we have a right to expect it we find it woefully lacking. A man may be sufficiently intelligent to know a good thing when he sees it, that a certain proposition can be made to succeed, but without "gumption" he stands a poor chance of putting it over.

The minister with "gumption" gets along with his congregation and as an instrument of good is worth while; the public man that possesses it endears himself to his constituents and through them is enabled to accomplish the tasks that come before him; the school boy who gets ahead has the innate intelligence and when he has acquired "gumption" he advances in his studies and thus becomes prepared to go out into the world and do things.

The business man endowed with "gumption" is as a rule a success. In fact he must possess a liberal share of it in order to be even partially successful. The lack of this qualification among retail merchants is perhaps the strongest contributing cause of nonsuccess of all others, at the same time one of the most important.

A merchant may possess an ample amount of capital with which to do business; he may have good ideas as to how a business should be run, but without "gumption," the power of discernment, he will prove a failure. "Gumption," like education, comes by cultivation. It can be acquired. Through study and observation, and the experiences of others as well as ourselves do we get it. The "gumptuous" merchant is one that is wideawake, who studies conditions and adapts himself to the varying changes of the times. One who, when questions affecting his business comes up for discussion, decides them, instead of letting them drift along in a haphazard manner. Further, the "gumptuous" merchant is one who steers clear of fake propositions, such as fake collection agencies, fake credit rating agencies and the like. He doesn't jump at conclusions, but, like the fellow from Missouri, says "Show me."

He is also a broad gauge man; he is open to conviction, and when convinced, accepts, puts his shoulder to the wheel and pushes.

In the retail merchants' organization the "gumptuous" merchant plays an important part. He it is that knows a good thing when he sees it and co-operates with his brother merchant for the common good of all.

By all means acquire "gumption" if you would keep up with the procession and get away from the yesterdays and has beens.

TRAVELERS ENTITLED TO PROTECTION OF LAW

Salesman Is Valuable Messenger of Sunshine and Progress, Says Shackelford

Editor Firing Line: The world concedes that the traveling man is a forerunner of progress. He is always cheerful, never has the grouch, he smiles when business is bad, and he smiles when business is good. He always has the right hand of fellowship out for his fellowmen. He is first in charity; does not know what it is to be what is called "chinchy." He helps to pay all the people that serve him by tips; buys the best, and always pays more for it. He is good to his family; loves his children; loves his fellowmen, and is loved in return by all. He is a distributor of all good news to his country customers, and retains within himself all that will make one sorrowful.

Now, I ask why should not such a good fellow be protected with all sanitary laws. He is at least entitled to eat his food without being compelled to fight flies. He should be able to sleep at night in clean beds, and not be afraid of being burnt up by fire. He should be able to ride in clean coaches on railroads. He should get clean drinking water in his new drinking cup. Or in other words, he should at least be entitled to the same protection that our domestic animals are, and we know that he will get such protection if he will only demand it. For he is also known as a power in any community.

Now, boys, the public is with us, the trouble is we have been used to taking just what was given us. The public does not know the abuses that we are up against every day. So now get busy, and after the meeting of the next legislature, we will not have these few bad hotels to contend with. They will either have to obey the law or quit.

Yours very truly,
H. D. SHACKELFORD,
Press Committee, No. 18, U. C. T.
Atlanta, Ga., May 9, 1913.

HEADS OF FIRM MAKE "GET ACQUAINTED" TRIPS

Tobacco Jobbers Employ This Means of Bringing About Closer Trade Relations

Many managers make short "get acquainted" trips among their customers with the salesmen.

The Capital City Tobacco company, one of Atlanta's jobbing houses, is a company that very actively follows the policy of the men at the head of the business keeping in touch personally with customers of the house.

E. F. Malone and W. B. Carlton, who are the executives in this company, make it a regular part of their work to take occasional trips with each of their salesmen for the purpose of getting personally acquainted with the trade.

Speaking of the value of this, Mr. Carlton says:

"We regard these trips of value to our company, to the customers and to the salesmen. We feel closer to the *customer and he feels closer to the com*pany. This helps toward clinching him as a regular buyer and thus helps the salesman covering that territory.

"We can write a customer on any matter that comes up to much better advantage when we have met that customer, talked with him and know something of his personality. Knowing us personally, the customer feels free to take up many things with us direct without waiting for the next visit of our salesmen.

"No manager should spend all of his time in his office. High officials of the big tobacco companies whose products we handle call on us and their other customers over the country. It must pay them to do this traveling."

W. A. PARKER NOW HEADS HARDWARE JOBBERS' ASSN.

W. A. Parker, vice president of the Beck & Gregg Hardware Co., of Atlanta, was elected president of the Southern Hardware Jobbers' association at the annual convention of that association held at Mobile, Ala., last week. The other officers of the association are E. Eshleman, of New Orleans, first vice president; J. C. Bering, of Houston, second vice president; John Donnan, of Richmond, secretary and treasurer; H. H. Beers, of Richmond, sergeant-at-arms; H. P. Chenoweth, of Birmingham, assistant sergeant-at-arms. W. M. Pitkin, of New Orleans, and W. C. Thomas, of Tampa, were elected new members of the executive committee. White sulphur Springs, Va., was chosen as the next place of meeting.

PRESIDENT MOORE SUGGESTS TRADE EXTENSION TRIPS

WILL PRESENT SUBJECT TO JOBBERS AND MAKERS

Trade Boosting Party Would Visit Points in Territory and Give Unique Entertainment to Retail Merchants

Trade extension trips by by the manufacturers and jobbers of Atlanta is the suggestion made by Wilmer L. Moore, president of the chamber of commerce. Mr. Moore thinks this method of enhancing the importance of the wholesale market here would prove of great value. It is a custom practiced by other big jobbing centers with great success.

So meritorious does the plan seem that Mr. Moore has in contemplation calling a conference of the wholesalers and manufacturers and presenting to them the suggestion and the good that can be derived from putting it into operation.

The purpose of the trips is that of bringing to the attention of the retailers of the south the advantages of this city as a wholesale market and bringing it to them in a direct, personal way, which is, of course, the method most effective and most productive of lasting results.

"The plan which I have in mind," said Mr. Moore, "would be for the wholesalers and manufacturers to charter Pullman cars and make a trip to some point in Atlanta's wholesale territory once a month or at such other intervals as might seem desirable. The visiting party should then give an entertainment to which the retailers and business men of the town and surrounding country would be invited. The wholesalers would do all the entertaining and the retailers would be their guests.

"There are many possibilities in an entertainment of this kind. It would be capable of the most varied development. The party should of course take along a number of interesting speakers. Educational and inspirational should be the dominant note of their speeches. Motion pictures of Atlanta and Atlanta enterprises and factory processes could be shown. Other features of a lighter nature, say in the way of a cabaret entertainment, might be added.

"By means of such trade extension trips, new business acquaintances would be made by the jobbers and manufacturers here and old acquaintances and old friendships would be cemented. The alertness and progressive quality of Atlanta's wholesale market would be convincingly demonstrated. It would be advertising in its most direct and productive form.

"The chamber of commerce will gladly lend its aid in the organization work necessary in launching such trips and it would then be up to the manufacturers and wholesalers to carry the plan to the point of high success to which it is undoubtedly capable of being brought."

*In connection with Mr. Moore's sug*gestion, it is further pointed out that the trade trips might be used also as a means of strengthening and preparing for the Distant Weeks which the wholesalers and manufacturers of Atlanta now hold twice a year and which in the past have proved so highly beneficial to the wholesalers here as well as to the retailers who were their guests.

TIP-TOP BAKERY SERVES WIDE GEORGIA TERRITORY

Fresh Bread is Being Shipped Daily to Dealers at Distant Points

The big bakeries are one of the lines of Atlanta industry that is steadily broadening its field of distribution. Bread baked tonight in Atlanta is served tomorrow on the tables of homes far distant in south Georgia and other equally distant points in South Carolina and Alabama.

"Shipments are not unusual to towns as distant as Waycross, Valdosta and Bainbridge. The field is necessarily restricted to towns that can be reached quickly with fresh bread, but Atlanta baking companies are seeing that every town possible is using Atlanta bread.

The New South bakery now has as regular customers many merchants at a radius of 150 to 175 miles from Atlanta, each receiving Tip-Top bread daily from the baking plant here.

This company intends to cover the whole of Georgia with its daily service, and likewise for the same distance in other directions.

"THE WAX LADY" IS SOME EXPERT AT TAKING BUSINESS DICTATION

A. P. Baylis, of the Baylis Office Equipment company, testing a record of one of his dictating machines.

Office Supply Dealer Tells How She Goes About Her Task and How Her Popularity Increases

Dictating machines are a subject being kept continually before Atlanta business men now. Dealers here are working the field close and hard. Edison himself has recently taken an active hand in the marketing of what is his pet invention—his hobby. Their use everywhere is increasing apace.

This "wax lady" of modern business efficiency is expected to replace the stenographer at the elbow of the executives in big business offices to such an extent that she of the pencil and note book will in future years be found in very few offices.

She will be there, it is claimed, but not writing shorthand, but at typewriting and clerical work.

Salesmen working Atlanta and surrounding territory are fast making the machines a common sight, especially in the big offices.

With all the increased efficiency, saving in time and its conveniences, the man who goes after orders for those most modern of office tools must be a strong salesman.

Hnman nature does not take to "new fangled" things.

Such salesmen to win out must be firing liners with the edges beveled and a four coating finish—no mere order taker can succeed.

Then, all the work is on prospects. These salesmen have no circle of old customers to help hold up their sales record. Their commission is good and they deserve it.

The neat commission that comes from the sale of a large set of machines for the offices of some big corporation is well earned by the salesman. Frequently he has worked for weeks gathering cost records from the work done right in the office to prove the saving. Proving to the stenographers, who are usually against the machines at first, that they will like them when they become accustomed to them.

Just now the device is on the eve, it is said, of coming into its own. The next five years will likely make it a commonplace. A few concerns in Atlanta have already had them several years. Many have taken them on lately.

An Atlanta man had one of the first commercial graphophones ever sold in this country or abroad. That was sixteen years ago. It belonged to Hooper Alexander, the attorney.

On its first appearance back in those days the dictating machine did not prove commercially practical. Great improvements have been made within the last few years and more in recent months.

A. P. Baylis, of the Baylis Office Equipment company, which has the state dealership for the Edison machines, is enthusiastic over the machine dictating idea and its prospects.

"I confidently expect to see them become as common as typewriters," says Mr. Baylis. "After the business world is educated to their use they will be bought by practically everyone as a matter of course. They will be as regular part of the office equipment as a desk or typewriter.

"There are many big users of them in Atlanta. Among them are the General Electric company, Elyea-Austell company, Southern Bell Telephone company, Western Electric company and the W. R. C. Smith Publishing company. Our Mr. Aird has also placed several large contracts for machines in other parts of the state.

"The government has followed the lead of the big corporations of the country on the use of the machines, and it is only a question of time before they will be common in small offices as well as the big ones."

ATLANTA GIDEONS FORM CAMP AT ATHENS TODAY

Georgia Division Stands at the Head of List in Getting New Members

A party of Atlanta Gideons left this morning for Athens, Ga., where they will organize a new Gideon camp. The party consisted of C. H. Burge, president of the Atlanta camp; A. F. Todd, state president; W. H. H. Phelps and C. W. Hatcher.

The launching of the Athens camp will make the fifth new camp which Georgia Gideons have organized since the international convention held here last July. The Georgia division stands far ahead of the list of all the cities in the United States in the acquisition of new members.

The next international convention will be held at Toronto, Canada, and already the Georgia Gideons are preparing to send a big delegation. Fifteen or twenty members have signified their intention of going.

"We expect to secure a Pullman for our party," said Mr. Burge, "and I will have it decorated with streamers on both sides announcing that we are the delegation from the "Atlanta Camp of Gideons, of Atlanta, Ga., Fulton County."

The usual Gideon services will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the convention hall of the Piedmont hotel. In the absence of President Burge, W. T. Justin will preside.

The Wallin Bill

That the mileage book situation all over the country needs to be readjusted and made to conform better to the wants and conveniences of travelers is apparent from the fact that a bill has been introduced in congress by Representative Wallin of New York seeking to compel railroads to issue interchangeable mileage books at a maximum rate of two cents a mile, without time limit restrictions and with baggage privileges.

It is evdence further that no question is settled until it is settled right. When South Carolina passed a law requiring mileage to be pulled on trains, the roads still continued to issue mileage but discontinued the interchangeable feature. South Carolina has appealed to the interstate commerce commission for relief. And now the Wallin bill shows that federal legislation is being generally invoked to take command of the situation. The mileage policy particularly of the roads in the southeast has been nothing less than short-sighted folly.

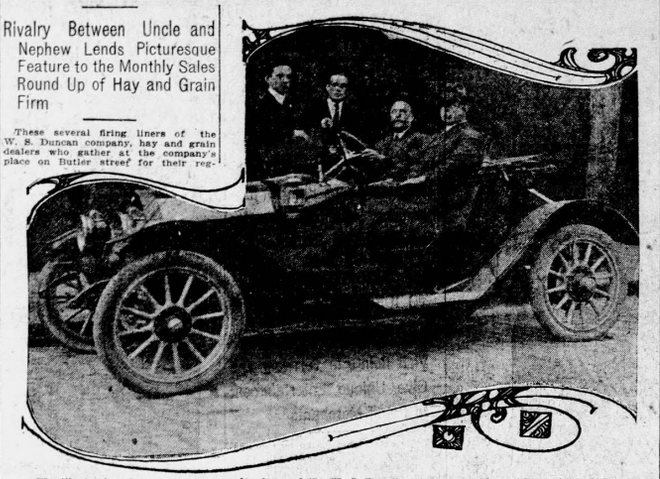
CONTEST FOR LEADERSHIP IS SPIRITED WITH SALES FORCE OF W. S. DUNCAN CO.

Rivalry Between Uncle and Nephew Lends Picturesque Feature to the Monthly Sales Round Up of Hay and Grain Firm



These several firing liners of the W. S. Duncan company, hay and grain dealers who gather at the company's place on Butler street for their regular Saturday morning meeting, make up a well-balanced sales force in which the lead in total sales each month is always uncertain until the final count.

C. D. Farill, the leader last month, did not put in an appearance in time to get in the photo. He was still out on the firing line and it is claimed by the others that he is working Saturdays to hold that lead, and that he will have to keep it up to rank first, for they are hot after him.

J. Lee Duncan, on the left end, though not a firing liner strictly speaking, for he pulls the strings from the office, is well known to most of the city salesmen.

Speaking of sales forces, Mr. Duncan recommends the idea of an uncle and nephew as a combination that is sure to produce results as salesmen. He has the instance right at hand to show it. W. B. Estes and J. L. Estes, the two in the center, are the pair. Nothing tickles the former more than to outsell his uncle, J. L. Estes, who covers the city trade with the car. He lands a volume of business that makes it no easy job for his nephew to show a lead, though this has happened.

W. B. Estes works north and west of Atlanta. Mr. McMullan, on the right of the picture, is a familiar figure to the trade along the Central of Georgia and the West Point Route and an efficient salesman.

CREDIT MEN TO HOLD BANQUET NEXT TUESDAY

The annual meeting and banquet of the Atlanta Association of Credit Men will be held next Tuesday night at 7 o'clock at the Piedmont hotel. At this time the annual election of officers will take place. Hon. W. G. Brantley, former member of congress, will be the guest of honor and will deliver an address.

The following letter has been sent out to the members by Secretary H. T. Moore urging them to be present for the occasion:

"You are cordially invited to attend the tenth annual meeting of the association, Tuesday, May 13, 1913, at 7 o'clock at the Piedmont hotel. President H. E. Choate, presiding.

"After luncheon, your gifted president will deliver his valedictory, and after the swan song by the (retiring)s president, reports will be submitted by respective chairmen of the adjustment and information bureaus.

"The election of officers and two members of the executive committee for the ensuing year, also the appointment of eight delegates to the convention of the National Association of Credit Men, convening in Cincinnati May 17-20, will be held, and any other business presented for consideration.

"After the routine business has been transacted you will have the pleasure of hearing Hon. W. G. Brantley, of Georgia, ex-M. C. He comes to you fresh from the greatest legislative body in the world, and his ripe experience, and comprehentive grasp of all legal and public questions has made him one of the most formidable debaters in congressional life.

"As members of the association will be the hosts of this occasion, we owe it to our distinguished guest to have a large and enthusiastic attendance.

"As you know, at nearly every annual meeting of our association, we have been compelled to provide so many extra plates that it has really embarrassed your entertainment committee, and to avoid delay and confusion at this meeting, won't you please sign your card promptly, and mail by first post?"

ATLANTA GETS MEETING OF GEORGIA RETAIL ASSN.

Majority of Local Organizations of State Cast Votes for This City

The 1913 convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia will meet in Atlanta during the latter part of July. That this city will get the meeting is known from the fact that John Bratton, secretary of the association, has received notices from three more than a majority of the various local organizations in the state stating that Atlanta is their choice for the convention place his year. This number will be largely augmented before all the organizations are heard from.

"This will be the first time that the association has met in Atlanta for a number of years," said Mr. Bratton, "and we hope to make it the biggest occasion in our history. The executive board will meet some time this week and decide upon the exact dates. The convention will likely be held during the week of July 21.

"It will bring here not less than 1,200 of the livest retailers in the state and I would not be surprised to see the attendance running as high as 2,000. I already have assurances from a number of the local organizations that they will send solid carloads of delegates to represent them at the Atlanta meeting.

"The success in securing the convention for Atlanta, I attribute in no small measure to the co-operation of the Firing Line, which has demonstrated the interest of Atlanta in our association by the publicity which it has given to our work and the aims and purposes for which we are organized. This co-operation has been of the most substantial benefit to us. It has already produced many good results, not the least of which is the 1913 convention for Atlanta."

Somewhere the other day we saw this bit of wisdom: "A boil doesn't have to be very big if it's well located."

We thought this a very good way, in a negative sense, to show the value of location.

The Feed Problem For Horses and Mules

WE have solved it with MO-GRAIN and ALFARINA.

¶ Composition---These feeds are made of the best grades of corn, oats, alfalfa meal and molasses. No dishonest material is ever used. Visit our mixing plant and see for yourself.

¶ Use---MO-GRAIN is a molasses feed; ALFARINA, a dry alfalfa feed. The ingredients composing them are so blended that each feed forms a perfect, balanced ration. They keep horses and mules in the pink of condition and at the maximum of working power.

¶ Cost---We make the feeds in our own plant at 268 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga. We thus save the usual manufacturer's cost---a saving that goes to you and to your customers. ## ROAD REMINISCENCE

"The Psychological Pause"

"You hear no talk and read no article a salesmanship these days," observed old traveler, "that fails to make some section of 'the psychological moment,' but I would like to call attention to the psychological pause,' or what may be described from the viewpoint of the man whom we are trying to sell as the psychological rest period.'

"This may or may not be a discovery of my own, but unaided I learned its use and value soon after I began my road career. It is especially important to a salesman introducing a new line of an old line with which his prospect happens not to be familiar.

"Concentration on one subject, particularly if it is new, is the hardest of all mental work. The tendency of the mind is to tire very quickly of one topic. It likes to pass leisurely from one thing to another. This accounts for the general popularity of the vaudeville show, which consists of many disconnected acts as contrasted, say, with a problem play, where the mind must follow the development of a single theme for two or three hours.

"Because concentration is hard work some men never learn it, and hence in business they drift from one thing to another, become a 'jack-at-all-trades and good at none.'

"But this is digressing. When you are talking new goods to a merchant of a new proposition, something in which his interest has not been previously aroused, he will give you close attention at first because of the very fact that your proposition is new. You, of course, are all enthusiasm for your goods, and you begin at once to hammer home your selling points. Just here is the danger. As your interest increases, his diminishes, because it requires on his part a continuation of concentration, and as I have said before, this is an effort which few minds will stand long without buckling.

"Whew! I must get out of here," he exclaimed.

"It is easy to strain this effort to the breaking point and lose a sale. Here's where the 'psychological pause' comes in. When you see that your prospect's first interest is waning, that the sustained mental effort is becoming too much for him, you must switch immediately to something else. The best thing to do is to tell a joke. It may be a very poor joke, absolutely unconnected with what you have been saying, but when you have told it, your prospect will laugh heartily and sincerely, as if he had just been looking for some such relief but did not know where in the world it was to come from. The tension will be broken, your prospect's sense of relief will be written all over his face and he will then be ready, after his 'rest period,' to go back to a favorable consideration of your proposition.

"Before I learned the secret of the pause, I have seen this effort at sustained concentration become acute agony in a prospect on whom I had turned loose my battery of sales talk. One man I remember particularly. He was a country merchant. I found him and his partner in their store. I started my talk and was rushing on with it at furious pace, when I noticed perspiration breaking out all over the man's face.

"Whew!' he exclaimed, mopping his face. 'I must get out of here. Tell it to my partner,' and grabbing his hat he left.

"'No, no, don't tell it to me,' said his partner, 'I can't stand it, either.'

"I knew another merchant who so hated the act of concentrating his thoughts even on what he needed in staple lines that it was always a task to sell him. He never seemed to know anything about what goods he had on hand and before I sold him, I had practically to take stock of all his lines. Even after that, it was hard to get him to decide what number of articles he wanted. He knew he had to buy to keep up his stock but the process of being pinned right down to the actual buying seemed to be the worst sort of torture for him. The more I advised him the more undecided he seemed to become.

"'I declare, I don't know whether to get any of these shirts or not,' he sighed, in perplexity. 'Jack,' he called to his clerk, 'do you think that Joe Davis would take any shirts like these, if I got some in stock?'

"'Dunno,' said the clerk, rousing himself out of a half doze. 'I saw Joe working in his field about a mile from here this morning and if you say so, 'I'll go over there and see.'

"But by this time the merchant had lost interest in the shirts and was examining the overalls which I was also showing.

"'I don't know what to do about these overalls, either,' he said.

"I began talking the overalls and the sales he would have undoubtedly have on them. He became interested but was ready to jump to something else, when a man entered the store.

"'Come in, Rabun,' said the merchant. 'Mornin', Hiram,' said Rabun, and advancing to the counter he began looking at the shirts.

"'See, here Hiram,' he said, 'I want one of these shirts. Just must have one. They are beauties.'

"'Well, if Rabun wants one, I guess I'll take half a dozen, so you might put me down for two dozen,'' said the merchant to me.

"'Hey, these are dandy overalls,' exclaimed Rabun before I had finished entering the shirt order. 'I must have a pair certain.'

"'I guess I'll take a dozen pair of the overalls, no three dozen,' said the merchant. 'Rabun here wants a pair.'

"From this I at once spotted Rabun as the man who could supply the psychological pause in the case of this merchant. And thereafter whenever I attempted to sell the latter I always had Rabun on hand. If he wasn't present I hunted him up before showing my samples, and if Rabun bought all the things he said he would he was the best dressed man in Georgia.

"Sometimes the psychological pause that's supplied by a third person may prove merely irritating to the prospect and therefore a deterrent to a sale. But even such interruptions may be turned to good account by a little quick thinking.

"Late one winter afternoon I visited a merchant in a cross-roads place and was getting along swimmingly with him in my sales talk when a rough looking individual, clearly under the influence of drink, came in, and flopped himself down in a chair in front of the open fireplace, where a bright wood fire was burning.

"From the moment this fellow entered I lost the merchant's attention. I thought at first the interruption was merely supplying the needed psychological diversion and I resumed my sales talk, but the merchant didn't follow me. He was ill at ease and even apprehensive.

"'That fellow's is a dangerous man when he's drinking,' he whispered to me. 'It's closing up time now, but he'll never leave and if I tell him to go, there'll be trouble certain. I am going to let the fire die down and perhaps the cold will drive him home.'

"The merchant waited on several customers who made their purchases quickly and hurriedly left the store when they saw the man by the fire and the condition he was in. The man, however, paid no attention to them. He would shift in his chair, spit in the fire now and then and grunt an ugly little grunt. As he shifted his coat caught on a chair revealing a big six-shooter in his hip pocket.

"While the fire burned low and the cold in the room began to be felt, I tried to introduce the subject of my goods to the merchant again, but the bad man by the fire was not only on his mind, but also on his nerves.

"'Put some more wood on that fire,' said the man lurching forward in his chair. 'What ye mean by letting it get cold in here like this?'

"'Woods all out,' replied the merchant.

"'Then bust up some old boxes. I don't propose to be frozen stiff.'

"'Boxes all in use, none to spare,' said the merchant, but he made a pretense of going out to the woodpile and of looking under the counters for fuel. 'Can't find anything,' he reported.

"Without another word the fellow rose from his chair and gathering an armful of swingletrees from a rack nearby flung them on the still glowing coals.

"The mental state of a drunken man is a curious thing. Liquor relegates the reasoning faculties to the background and puts the emotions in command. Hence the mind may be said to be poised on a pivot. Sometimes the merest trifle will swing the balance from one extreme of feeling to another, the very opposite.

"The swingletrees fell on the coals and blazed up brightly. With a cry, the merchant began to rake them out of the fire with the poker. 'The bad man was on his feet with six-shooter drawn. 'Stop that!' he commanded with danger agleam in his eyes.

"'Fire's a poor way to keep warm anyway,' said I quickly and distinctly. 'It may do for women and children, but a good, stout drink, that's a man's way of keeping warm in cold weather.'

"'By G—d, son, you're right,' said he turning to me and lowering his revolver.

"'Come on over here where I'm stopping,' said I, 'and I'll put some man's warmth into you that will keep you hot for a week.'

"'Lead me to it,' he said, and followed me without so much as glancing at the merchant who, as I looked back from the door, was pouring water on the still blazing swingletrees.

"In my grip I had an unopened quart bottle, from which he took a huge drink. Under the influence of the liquor and the warmth of the fire in my room he soon lapsed into the maudlin state of the really drunk man.

"'I didn't do that old skin flint right by making a fire out of plows, did I?' he said. 'But he certainly was funny, raking 'em out, wasn't he?' and he laughed till the tears rolled down his cheeks.

"'No, I didn't do him right.' He stopped laughing, but continued to weep in a drunken sort of repentance. 'I done him wrong. It ain't like me to do a man wrong,' and his tears were copious.

"He stayed on and on and I saw that now I had on me the merchant's problem of getting rid of him, which I finally solved by telling him to take the quart bottle home with him, in case he got cold during the night.

"The next morning he was still drunk and still maudlin. He went down to the merchant's store and bought and paid for all the swingletrees that he had damaged. 'Hiram, I done you wrong,' he kept repeating. 'Fire for women and children in cold weather, but firewater for sho' 'nuff men;' and he went away hugging the quart bottle, which was now nearly empty.

"The psychological relief had been furnished the merchant to a fare-you-well and when we went back to the consideration of my goods, it was no trouble to sell him a bill that was the largest of my road career."

B. F. AVERY CO. MAKES READY FOR SHOW OF GEORGIA RETAIL HARDWARE DEALERS

Convention and Show Will Be Held in Auditorium May 28-30—Many Manufacturers of Atlanta and Other Cities to Have Attractive Exhibits

Latest improvements in farm machinery will be one o fthe many things the visiting hardware dealers will find to interest them at the hardware show at the Auditorium when they visit Atlanta May 28 to May 30, for the annual convention of the Georgia Retail Hardware association.

It is the changeable speed mower, with fast speed for hard cutting and slower for light work. This will be in the Avery exhibit and demonstrations made of the two speed gearings.

Mr. Feibelman is enthusiastic over the coming hardware show. He was one of the first to reserve space for an exhibit and has been followed by a long list of other concerns, the number of them already insuring the show success.

"The retail dealers are looking forward to a live convention when they gather here," says Mr. Feibelman, "and the wholesale trade are doing their part to make it an interesting time for the retailers.

"The Georgia Hardware association have held seven annual conventions but this is the first held in Atlanta. While going after national conventions the city, in its aim to be a bigger convention city, should not neglect getting such local associations as this one to meet here.

"For the hardware show, Atlanta can fill the Auditorium with exhibits interesting to the dealers. With exhibits by all leading manufacturers represented here it will make the show a fine feature of the convention.

"We are selecting machinery for our exhibit and planning now how to make the most of the space we have reserved."

The show will be held under the auspices of the state organization of retailers and the assigning of space for exhibits is under direction of John L. Moore, of Madison, Ga., secretary of the Georgia association.

Convention sessions will be held in Taft hall and the exhibits will be in the main Auditorium. Besides Atlanta concerns, there will be manufacturers' agents here who will have exhibits. The main floor has been divided into spaces that will allow room for seventy-five to 100 exhibitors.

The state association numbers a membership of nearly 300 dealers throughout the state and is affiliated with the National Retail Hardware association.

CHILDREN'S SHOES GOOD LINE FOR RETAILERS

Wholesaler Points Out How This Line Will Hold Patronage to Store

"Many retailers of shoes overlook the value of the children's department," says C. J. Sullivan, of the M. C. Kiser company.

"By building up this department, the dealer builds up his shoe business. For when the parents learn that a certain store gives particular attention to children's shoes they will take their youngsters to that store, and when they are started doing that they will usually seek the same store for their own wants.

"Some shoe dealers have founded their success very largely on making a specialty of children's shoes, advertising the fact well, giving particular care to giving a good fit and entire satisfaction on such sales.

"Not only does it help make sales to their parents. The merchant who catches these young customers is likely to hold them to his store through later years.

"Retail dealers should have high respect for this part of their line. It will pay them."

Hewlett & Downs, prominent merchants of Conyers, Ga., say that business is very good recently there, according to O. E. Kenimer, the M. C. Kiser company traveler, who called on them a few days ago.

Salesmen making Poorterdale, Ga., for the first time in several months, will find a change in personnel at H. L. Weaver & Co.'s, the big commissary there. O. T. Hennessee, formerly of Atlanta, is now in charge and Mr. Weaver has moved to Roswell and is looking after his store there.

Lowe-Pittard & Co., old established mercantile firm at Duluth, Ga., have just moved into their handsome new building and are fixed up very nicely, says J. O. Chambers, who was there recently for the Brown, Perryman & Greene company.

Gaines & Lee, one of Cartersville, leading grocery firms, have recently fitted up their store with new fixtures, reports W. Y. Bailey, of Fain & Stamps. The store now looks spick and span in every way. Mr. Lee is entitled to most of the credit for this improvement, as he demonstarted his good workmanship by making the fixtures. George Gaines did the hoeing.

"G. M. Brewster, of Cedartown, Ga., was complaining a few days ago of not feeling well," said W. Y. Bailey. "but I think George had been eating too much. He was feeling better this week and reports business good."

E. W. Green, general merchant and miller of Fairburn, Ga., said P. S. Brownlee, of the E. L. Adams company. "never complains of business being dull. There's a reason. Mr. Green is always on the job and knows how to handle his trade."

F. H. Redwine company, of Palmetto, Ga. R. F. D., general supply merchants, report the best season's business they have had in years.

One of the big general merchants of South Carolina is W. T. Brorden, of Brogden, S. C. According to C. S. Hawley, new South Carolina traveler for the Consolidated Paper company, Mr. Brogden is not only a successful merchant, but is also one of the biggest farmers in the state, operating each year at least 150 plows.

C. S. Hawley, of the Consolidated Paper company, reports that J. G. Riley is doing a big business this season in his mill store at Buffalo, S. C.

J. W. Freeman, of Talking Rock, is one of the active general merchants of north Georgia. "He is also one of the state's most successful cotton growers," says R. A. Hawkins, traveler for the E. L. Adams company. "Only the other day, I believe, he disposed of 200 of cotton."

T. Kirby, merchant of Nelson, Ga., and customer of J. E. Almand, was a visitor last week at the E. L. Adams company. J. M. Austin, general merchant of Kenwood, Ga., also paid the E. L. Adams company a visit last week.

J. H. Johnston, merchant of Woodstock, Ga., lost his residence by fire last Sunday. The Baptist church of Woodstock was also destroyed at the same time.

Cliff Edwards, of Fain & Stamps, reports that Benson Brothers and Fowler Brothers, among the leading merchants of Marietta, Ga., are having a splendid run of trade this spring on all lines of their general stock.

MONTAG BROS. DISTRIBUTE MOTION PICTURE SLIDES

Send Them to Customers to Be Used for Advertising Purposes

Through their salesmen, Montag Bros., the Atlanta stationery manufacturers will in a few days start the distribution of slides for use as advertisements in moving picture shows to all of their customers who will make use of them.

It is expected that the plan will meet with a hearty response from the trade. It is of mutual benefit to the wholesaler and retailer, with each bearing a part of the expense and each getting the benefit of the advertising.

Several designs have been made, and samples of each will be sent the road men.

The salesmen will also within a few days be sent samples of counter display cases the firm will distribute to their customers.

JONES BROS. ENTERTAIN SALESMEN AT PLANT

Jones Bros. & Co. were hosts yesterday at their vinegar and pickle plant to the City Salesmen's association. Immediately following the meeting of the association at the city hall, the members repaired to the pickle plant where they were first served a delightful lunch of the Jones products including a round of sweet cider drinks. The salesmen evidenced much interest in the pure food processes by which the Jones products are manufactured.

In the absence of President G. C. Jones the honors of the occasion were done by W. R. Simpson, vice president; S. E. Brannon, secretary and treasurer, and W. O. Stamps, one of the directors.

Every Knight of the Grip Has His Pet Sales Article, and No Matter How Rushed He Is With His Other Lines, He Never Forgets His Favorite

The above photograph shows Lawrence H. Moore and Jack W. Evans, traveling salesmen for the Atlanta Agricultural works, trying to convince each other that their "hobby" is the best seller.

Few people will admit it, but it is true nevertheless, that everybody has a hobby of some kind. No matter what line of business or what profession one may be in, it is bound sooner or later to come out.

"It is a fact," said Mr. Evans, stopping his argument long enough to explain what the trouble was about, "that every traveling salesman who travels for any length of time for one concern has his hobby. No matter how large his sales of other goods may be, you can never get it out of his noodle that his hobby isn't the best seller. Now, in our line I am a crank about the Terrell thick center heel scrape, while Mr. Moore is a fanatic about spring tooth cultivators.

"It's real amusing sometimes the enthusiastic arguments we get into trying to convince each other that our particular hobby is the best seller and the biggest money maker. When we both happen to be in at one time, just let a big mail order come in for either one of our hobbies, and you'll see somebody's chest swell out and hear a mighty roar of 'I told you so.' I don't know how the other boys feel about it, but, no matter how big an order for plows I get from a fellow, I never feel satisfied until I have landed his order, for my hobby.

"And it's not only so in our line, but in every line. You've heard them. Just get to talking to a traveling man anywhere about his line, and almost before you know it you'll hear him say, 'Now, my house has a piece of goods so-and-so,' and there you are. If you don't choke him off, he'll come mighty near convincing you that his hobby is the most wonderful piece of goods on earth.

"After all, though, it's a pretty good idea for the sales manager to encourage these hobbies if he can manipulate it so as to split his line up among his force. If he handles it right, it's a cinch that he's going to get his full line pushed to the limit.

"You hear salesmen calling it all sorts of things, too; giving all kinds of excuses and seldom admit that they have a hobby. The young traveling salesman will talk to you of 'specializing' in certain lines and 'pushing' seasonable goods and all that, but the old staid fellows who have tugged at grip straps over everything from sixty-mile-an-hour Pullmans to jolty wagons pulled over country roads by a pair of hard-tails will come out and acknowledge the corn and admit it's nothing but a hobby.

"And why shouldn't they? Haven't you got your hobby? Weren't you particularly strong on one class of sport? Don't you love to do one part of your work more than anything else? Then why isn't it the same with the salesmen? We like to sell one thing better than another, and, take it from me, bo, when I land a big order for my hobby, I feel better all over."

Mr. Evans entered the plow business twenty-four years ago last Sunday, and a good portion of his experience has been divided between the buying and selling end of the game, and he is, therefore, able to look at the proposition from both angles, and the observation of his own hobbies and those of the many traveling salesmen with whom he has come in contact during that time gives him a pretty good insight into the subject.

And so the world is made up of hobbies. Webster defines "hobby" as "a ruling passion," and, from Mr. Evans' remarks, it looks as if a hobby is not a piece of fanaticism to be criticised in one, as is generally the case, but a good quality to possess, and especially so among the traveling salesmen, those knights of the grip, who at all times and under all circumstances present a glad and manly handshake and a smiling countenance, denoting an inbred enthusiasm on some particular piece of goods which it is hard to cultivate. It is "a ruling passion," or, in every-day parlance, a hobby.

JENKINS WRITES ON SANCTITY OF THE LAW

Says the Law Is Supreme and Its Majesty Must Be Vindicated

Editor Firing Line:

The case of Mary Phagan is about all I can hear. The people all over Georgia are anxious for the criminal to be found and, when found, punished. It matters not who he may be. Law would limp and lag far behind what the people want should it fail to find, convict and punish the criminal.

There should be no barrier to justice. No man guilty of an atrocious crime should escape. The glory of Greece lingers around the life of Socrates, Aspasia, Pericles, Phideas, Herodotus, Hippocrates, Aristotle, all criminals before the law, all disgraced, exiled or executed. But these men were great, and Greek history lives for them.

If in modern times any person should link his or her name with that of greatness and become so depraved and degenerate as to commit such a horrible crime as the murder of Mary Phagan, he should never be allowed to go free, but should be caught and punished.

The T. P. A. stands for justice. The great and grand old state of Georgia must be protected, must be vindicated. The murderer must be found and punished, let him be whoever he may. We are all bound together, and would be no better than the guilty to let it pass.

W. M. JENKINS,
State Press Chairman, T. P. A.

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

Jack Elliott, the Mc-Cord-Stewart order getter, is no longer swinging round his circuit in his old familiar red car, but it now going after them hotter than ever in a brand new pearl tinted machine.

E. J. Henderson and W. E. Rump, of the Warren Manufacturing company, are off the road until the start of their new season, which is early next month.

Jim Lanier, traveler for McCord-Stewart company, who was off the firing line because of illness for several days, is back in the game again. This is the first time in years he has been on the hospital roll, except for the recent occasion when his auto played him a trick that laid him up a short while.

R. D. Bagwell, the new Huguley Oil company salesman, is not expected to get much business just now, as his mind is filled with anticipation of journey across the hot sands he is soon to make on his Shriner initiation.

W. R. Simmons, the Central Georgia salesman for Jones Brothers & Co., is reported right on the job with a carload order.

R. V. Haslett, of the Liquid Carbonic company, has just closed another city sale of a handsome liquid fount. Salesman Fulenwelder, with the same company, has made a $3,500 sale at Jacksonville.

On special invitation from Jones & Co. city salesmen of the Atlanta wholesale grocers paid a visit to the company's new plant yesterday, saw the processes of making vinegar and preseves and enjoyed some good apple cider.

Sales of refrigerators and porch shades show that summer is really here, says the Rosenfeld company, who regard these items as a good barometer of the change of season.

C. A. M'CAIN has taken right to the line of vinegar and preserves. Though he has been a city salesman here for some time, this line was new to him when he went with Jones Brothers & Co. a few days ago. He is making a good start for them on the city firing line. He is now only two weeks old at the game, and already feels perfectly at home where the odor of vinegar marks the Jones plant.

J. S. Everett and J. C. Chandler, city salesmen for Conley & Ennis, enjoy a stag dinner almost as much as if they were writing up an opening order.

J. N. Parsons, the musical salesman for Conley & Ennis, contributed very largely to the pleasure of the stag party tendered the firm.

C. V. Nalley, with the Ward-Truitt company, is home again. By this is meant he is back in his old territory of northeast Georgia and the western part of the Carolinas, after an absence of one season working in middle Georgia. He is making headquarters at Gainesville, and has already made a trip in his new wterritory and turned in orders from a number of his old friends among the merchants in that way.

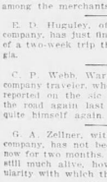
E. D. Huguley, of the Huguley Oil company, has just finished the first half of a two-week trip through south Georgia.

C. P. Webb, Warren Manufacturing company traveler, who has recently been reported on the sic list, was back on the road again last week and feeling quite himself again.

G. A. Zellner, with the Huguley Oil company, has not been seen in Atlanta now for two months. He is known to be still much alive, however, by the regularity with which the orders come in.

D. F. McDaniel and Luther Parker had a good week's business, says the Ward-Truitt company.

All the Huguley Oil company salesmen are feeling good and going after them strong this week. The shipments that have been long delayed in transit have reached the company's warehouse here, and they are again prepared to make shipments in their usual prompt manner.



AN instance of the worth of Atlanta's wholesale market is mentioned by the Ward-Truitt company in telling of an opening bill sold by them last week to a new merchant at Greenville, S. C. This merchant is a New Yorker, who only recently moved to South Carolina. He looked over the lines of dry goods, hats and shoes and other things carried by Atlanta jobbers, and decided to do all his buying here. "Atlanta always ahead" is a matter that vindicates itself daily.

All the Hirshberg company salesmen are still on the sample assembling job. Some job.

S. M. Rosenfeld is back in his Virginia territory after several weeks in New York. He was there with A. W. Rosenfeld buying fall goods. The latter writes that he has some surprises for their trade in the way of new rugs.

H. H. Ware, manager Atlanta branch of the Liquid Carbonic company, is away on a trip over the entire southern part of the Atlanta office's territory.

Leslie Miller starts Monday in his new territory of South Carolina and parts of Tennessee for the Jones Brothers & Co., after a short stay in Atlanta getting acquainted with their big new plant here. He has been with the company for several years, coming here from Arkansas.

Jack W. Evans, of Atlanta Agricultural Works, says that the boss must have read last Sunday's Firing Line as he caught on to Jack's game and put him to work early Monday morning. Jack can work when they get him to do it.

Clyde L. King, president, and Frank S. Peach, vice president, of Atlanta Agricultural works, were this week in attendance at the Southern Hardware convention at Mobile. They report a pleasant and profitable trip.

E. F. Malone, of the Capital City Tobacco company, spent last week on the road with T. B. Lewis, one of the company's travelers, and R. M. Tallichet, representative of the Porto Rican-American Tobacco company.

For the first week of May every salesman, city and road, of the Capital City Tobacco company, showed an increase in sales over the same month of last year.

Lawrence H. Moore, of Atlanta Agricultural works, has been busy during the past week getting detailed dope on some new implements which he is having gotten out specially for his territory. Lawrence always has his batting eye trimmed for new business.

THE subject of securing trade from Latin-American countries has recently had considerable discussion by the jobbers and manufacturers of the south, in view of the approaching opening of the Panama canal. Montag Brothers enjoy some trade from those countries, though they have not yet gone after it regularly with salesmen. When they do, however, they will have a man, now working Texas, who will be right at home on the tropical firing line. He is Isadore Feinburg. He speaks Spanish fluently and keeps brushed up on the language by trips into Mexico, where he has a number of customers.

H. E. Dean, superintendent of Atlanta Agricultural works, spent the greater part of the week in the field demonstrating to the traveling salesmen the working principles of several new implements. Ewing says that some of the salesmen would make better plow hands than he thought.

L. L. McDaniel was in Atlanta last week for his first visit here since he went on the road for Rice & Hutchins several months ago. It is his first time out on the firing line. He says he likes his territory. He works northern Alabama.

Tom Yon, the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company Florida salesman, is expected in Atlanta today. He was here last January. Mr. Yon has had a good season on the road. He is also in the retail mercantile business at Tallahassee.

E. G. Thomas, manager of the Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company left Friday for Boston, where he will spend two or three weeks attending a meeting of the Rice & Hutchins managers.

O. C. Long, S. P. Richards company's city salesman, is improving rapidly and was back on the firing line Wednesday. He was severely burned several weeks ago in a gas explosion at his home.

Gus Williams, the Rice & Hutchins traveler, made a short visit to the company's Atlanta headquarters last week.

Colonel C. G. Johnson, of the J. K. Orr company, is back from Florida, after a month's sojourn there for his health and is much improved.

Carlton Hanes was the Ragan-Malone company traveler who made the big clean-up for that company's forces last week. The figures for his week's business nearly touched a record figure.

Rockwell Johnson, buyer for the J. K. Orr Shoe company, is expected in Atlanta tomorrow from Boston, where he has been for several weeks visiting the leather markets.

P. W. Yates, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, says house trade was unusually good last wee; that there seemed to be more visiting buyers than for the average two weeks heretofore.

M. C. Kiser company report a shipment to Shanghai, China.

They are for use as transfer busses and "rubber-neck" wagons, at the great rustic constructed Grove Park Inn, at Asheville, N. C., recently completed and to be opened in July.

The two big double deckers, like the one shown in the picture, will have a seating capacity of thirty-five persons each, twenty-one in the two rows of seats on top with room for the rest in the chairs on the lower floor.

Each of the "rubber-neck" wagon bodies is twenty-one feet in length and will be fitted to the chassis of a five-ton motor truck.

The job will be finished and the busses ready for the freight cars by the first of June. When the hotel opens they will greet the first of the guests at the Asheville station.

Another large vehicle job recently handled in Atlanta was the construction of several circus wagons turned out also by the Karwisch works.

S. P. Richards company salesmen are all in Atlanta now and just finishing their work on the samples. This week they will be busy helping at the yearly inventory. They go out for the new season about June 1.

J. O. Chambers, genial sample caser for the Brown, Perryman & Greene Co., has just come in from a three weeks' trip, much longer than his usual jaunts. He says he had a good run of business.

Ben Messer, of Fain & Stamps, declares that it is not necessarily Firing Line mention that helps him get orders, but that it is the customers in his territory that make the Firing Line.

S. P. Smith, of the Consolidated Paper company, is still out on an extensive sales trip. He will spend Sunday at Statesboro, Ga.

Cliff Edwards, of Fain & Stamps, reports splendid business for the week with the outlook most encouraging. The farmers are needing rain bad in many places, he states. W. O. Stamps was out last week with Mr. Edwards, shaking hands with the merchants of Marietta and Smyrna.

H. J. McDonald, past counselor of U. C. T. 505, and former road man, is now sales manager and a member of the firm of the Brower Candy company.

P. S. Brownlee, secretary of U. C. T. Council 505, says that he meets with a number of U. C. T.'s from Columbus, Ga., and that they are preparing to entertain the convention of the grand council of Florida and Alabama in grand style when it meets in Columbus on May 22 and 23.

C. W. McClure, of the McClure Ten Cent company, returned last week from a week's stay at Indian Springs. He will leave Sunday for an extensive business trip through the middle west.

T. D. Anderson, salesman of the McClure Ten Cent company, is highly elated over selling a big bill to a merchant of Havana, Cuba, last week. The merchant was a visitor in Atlanta and dropped in to inspect the McClure stock and was so delighted with it that he made a big purchase with Mr. Anderson's aid. The goods will be shipped out at once and will go via New York to their Cuba destination.

W. Y. Bailey, of Fain & Stamps, reports big improvement in business throughout his territory.

J. W. Curry, prominent member of U. C. T. 505, is now with the Brower Candy company.

ATLANTA WAGON FACTORY IS FILLING ORDER FOR BODIES FOR BIG "RUBBER-NECK" AUTOS

The Cars Will Seat Thirty-five Persons and Will be Mounted on Chassis of Five-ton Motor Trucks—Order Will be Ready for Shipment by June 1

Here is another instance of the scope of manufacturing which carries the "Atlanta made" label.

Out at the J. M. Karwisch Wagon works, the finishing touches will soon be given to the biggest vehicle bodies ever built in Atlanta—or so far as known, anywhere in the south.

BULGARIAN PATTERNS IN GREAT DEMAND

Dry Goods Jobbers Buying Warily for Fear Fad Will Die Out

Dry goods travelers are all talking "Bulgarian" now.

This does not mean they have forsaken English for any foreign dialect, but that the fad for the brilliant kaleidoscopic designs that have recently become the fashion with milady bids fair to become a craze.

It is manifesting itself in many directions, say those who keep up with the fashions and even a quite cursory inspection of the dress of Atlanta maids verifies this.

Travelers for the Atlanta dry goods jobbers are selling the goods of odd and lurid patterns about as fast as their houses and the mills can supply them. Many repeat orders are going to the mills from the jobbers, for in spite of the increasing demand the latter are buying as lightly of such goods as they can under the circumstances, for they are afraid of the fad playing out suddenly as so often happens with fads, often leaving the dealer with "dead stock!"

"We are buying it very warily," says P. D. Yates, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company. "Fads come and go so quick these days that the jobber has to be very careful to change his lines as quick as the fashions. The losses to mills, jobbers and retailers due to these quick changes would be tremendous if all totaled up. It is a point that affects the cost of living for the prices of goods have to be "loaded" to offset the losses on goods that are left unsold after a fad has passed."

W. A. Ward, of the Ward-Truitt company, a company whose policy is to deal mostly in staples, believes dealers should handle these goods warily.

"Dry goods men, however," says Mr. Ward, "have been looking for the wonderful popularity of ratine to slump, but it hasn't come and ratine is now selling at about a 50 per cent increase in price over a season ago, with the demand apparently still growing. The Bulgarian goods may hold up strong too."

W. C. Barnwell, of the Ragan-Malone company, says all of their salesmen are having heavy sales on the Bulgarian novelties.

It is not all for the women either. The Bulgarian pattern tie is featured by haberdashers and dubbed by some as "turkey-trot ties."

HAWKES GLASSES
What is a Real Business Man?
Why, he's the fellow that's right on the job day and night, looking after the leaks; getting ready for a rainy day; keeping the resources well within a safe limit; guarding the credit of the house; reaching out after new business. He's a regular conserver. He's a good man to pattern after—no difference what you undertake. He's the man that's sensible enough to apply business methods to his personal health. When is eyes begin to annoy him—give out easily, strain and will not permit him to do continuous, close work without unnecessary fatigue, he gets busy—has an examination made and gets glasses. That's simply good business. Suffice to say we've been fitting glasses for the southern people for fifty years, and—well, that's sufficient for a real business man to know.

CLAIRVOYANTS AND WIRE TAPPERS CLEAR $500,000

Chicago Is After Big Ring of Alleged Swindlers–Dr. Kirby Involved

CHICAGO, May 10.—The clairvoyant ring, working in conjunction with a gang of wire tappers, has netted $500,000 in Chicago by swindles during the last eighteen months, according to evidence said today to be in the hands of State's Attorney Hoyne.

Incidentally the evidence brings in the name of Dr. W. T. Kirby. An investigation by Federal Judge Landis into the failure of a private bank, of which Dr. Kirby was the head, developed that $28,000 was missing and Kirby admitted that he had been swindled out of that sum by wire tappers. Judge Landis disbelieved this story, and a federal grand jury recommended that Kirby be held for perjury.

Included in the evidence are records of telephone calls from the headquarters of a gang of alleged wire tappers to Dr. Kirby. Records of calls between clairvoyants and the wire tappers also were obtained.

FRENCH DEPUTIES GO AFTER SECRET GAMBLERS

Clandestine Gambling Rife in Paris sl Described in Chamber of Deputies

PARIS, May 10—Clandestine gambling said to be rife in Paris and the manner in which wealthy visitors to the French capital are fleeced by professional gamblers working under the cloak of charitable institutions, were described today in the chamber of deputies by the Viscount Gustave Yves de Kerguezec, Deputy G. Cotes-Du-Nord.

He was speaking on a bill for the regulation of the French government's percentages taken from the receipts of race courses and from the recognized social clubs where betting and gambling are permitted.

The vicomte said that one active institution of this character rent cards to people arriving at the Paris hotels inviting them to attend evening parties in the interest of the suppression of tuberculosis under the pretended patronage of Armand Fallieres, Mme. Emile Loubet and Mme. Felix Faure, the wives of three former presidents and also the kings and queens of Italy, Spain and Bulgaria.

Those who accepted the invitations, he said, found brilliant salons in which were gathered numerous persons, seemingly ladies and gentlemen and quiet card rooms where professional gamesters of both sexes swindled the visitors.

The Vicomte de Kerguezec deplored the French government's partnership in gambling and its share in the responsibility for the ruin every year of hundreds of families and for many suicides owing to its licensing of gambling casinos.

The deputy declared he knew one officer who had made $8,000,000 out of such authorized pleasure resorts. Another one of his acquaintances had made a profit of $2,000,000.

"The French government in the year 1909 profited to the extent of $9,750,000 in percentages," said the vicomte, "but at what a moral cost! The profit accruing to the contractors for the casinos and other resorts was so enormous that the croupiers incomes of ten exceeded those of cabinet ministers. I myself know of one such employe who is receiving $18,000 yearly, while another has a salary of $12,000."

JAPS FILLING SCHOOLS OF HAWAIIAN ISLANDS

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Of the 20,000 children enrolled in the Hawaiian public schools nearly 10,000 of them are Japanese. This information was received today by the United States bureau of education in a report from Governor Walter F. Frear, of the islands. The Japanese, moreover, are increasing their attendance at the schools more rapidly than any other race, the reports add.

A notable feature of Governor Frear's report is found in the statement that the children of Americans and other Caucasian races outside of the Portuguese constitute only 12 per cent of the attendance. The Portuguese enrollment in the schools is next highest to the Japanese, being approximately 17 per cent of the total. The Hawaiian and part Hawaiian children form about 19 per cent of the whole, and Chinese 11 per cent.

The cost of maintaining the schools in the territory last year was approximately $625,000.

There are 151 schools of elementary grade, three industrial institutions, a normal school, a college of agriculture and mechanic arts and two high schools.

LAGER BEER

Can Be Made at Home for One Cent a Glass

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 11.—Through a recent invention of an expert Brew*master of this city*, a sparkling and foaming Lager Beer can be made right at home for one cent a glass. He has concentrated Barley Malt and Hops, the principal ingredients of Beer, so that simply by the addition of water and sugar a genuine and pure Lager Beer can be made. Easily made in any kitchen, no apparatus, no experience necessary, a few minutes is the whole work. It is claimed by many that the Beer made by this method is better and purer than the best Brewery Beer, and above all saves the Brewer's enormous profits. The question of the legality of his method has been carefully investigated by the highest authorities and found to be legitimate in every respect. He has written a very interesting booklet giving the "Secrets of Brewing Beer at Home" and by writing to A. S. Shuh, Brewmaster, 1206 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O., he will be more than pleased to mail his booklet absolutely free to any one sending their name and address.

FRENCH WOMAN IS EXPERT FENCER, COOK AND ACTRESS

EUGENIE BESSERER FENCES AND COOKS.

BY GERTRUDE PRICE.

Eugenie Besserer can make an egg omelette and a cup of aromatic coffee just like a French chef. By the way, she is French.

Or she can play, nicely, with the sharp-edged sword in a fencing bout with the cleverest of the land.

Also she understands homekeeping and home-buying and the little matter of dress.

I accidentally, and very pleasantly learned these widely different accomplishments of Miss Besserer when I chanced upon her at a moving picture studio at Edendale, Cal. In fact, to say I accidentally met her; she was waiting for her cue at the Selig picture place when she and I met.

It was at the end of a long morning's work for me, and a long wait for her. So she hospitably proffered me a "bite," in her own words, at her pretty cottage on the hill nearby.

"It will only be an omelette and a cup of coffee you know," she reminded me.

But, oh, such coffee was that. And the omelette! Well, I never tasted such a good one before, or since.

Miss Besserer lives in a doll of a cottage, spruce and artistic and light and airy. There are flowers and trees around it.

But that isn't what I started to tell you about Miss Besserer. She is considered one of the very best fencers in America. And, besides that, she is turning out some mightily clever lead-ing-actor parts in the western Selig company.

In "Old Songs and Memories" she played the part of a girl of eighteen, a young woman of twenty-three and an old woman of sixty. She made sixty changes, taking not more than five or six minutes for each one.

She wrote "The Profligate," in which there was a big fencing scene. By the way, Alice Roosevelt Longworth, she told me, was one of her fencing pupils.

Eugenie Besserer played child parts with McKee Rankin and Maurice Barrymore. Since then she has played with many well-known actors in the legitimate, including Wilton Lackaye.

Versatility is hers, in capitals, all right.

MILLEDGEVILLE PRIMARY IS WITHOUT EXCITEMENT

City Officials Elected Without Opposition–Mayor Begins Fourth Term

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., May 10.—Milledgeville's municipal primary passed off quietly this week when Mayor Miller S. Bell was renominated without opposition for the fourth term. City Clerk and Treasurer Walter W. Stembridge is also entering his fourth term, and he was unopposed. His renomination were also named without opposition, these being J. O. Bloodworth, John J. Barrett, Roy T. Batsden, J. E. Kidd, C. F. Schell and R. L. Wall. A new city Democratic executive committee was also named, composed of D. S. Sanford, Frank E. Bone, J. C. McAuliffe, Lewis Flemister, D. W. Brown and R. B. Moore. As a municipality Milledgeville has made wonderful progress in the past few years, and plans are now on foot for a municipal water plant, as the city's contract with the present company will expire in a few years. Other extensive improvements are planned for the next two years, among the work being more permanent street improvement.

SHOPMEN AND HOLY ROLLERS IN CONFLICT

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., May 10.—A unique situation, threatening a strike of 2,500 men, exists in the local shops of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad here today. All the men have agreed to quit work unless fourteen men who recently allied themselves with the "Holy Roller" religious sect, join the union. The fourteen claim their religious affiliation prohibits their joining. Four hundred men quit yesterday and the others were expected to do likewise today. Officials of the railroad are en route from Richmond, Va., in an attempt to straighten out the difficulty.

134 AUTOS BURN IN FIRE IN CHICAGO

Three South Side Garages Burn, Causing Loss of Nearly Half Million

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, May 10.—Three south side garages, containing 134 automobiles, were destroyed by fire yesterday and today, with a loss of nearly half a million dollars. The fires were caused by explosions of gasoline, and Fire Attorney Joseph Murray has ordered an investigation.

Yesterday fifty-six electric automobiles, valued at $170,000, were destroyed when a garage owned by Robert Bland, on East Forty-seventh street, was attacked by fire. Early today flames consumed twenty-eight automobiles, valued at $75,000, in the garage of the American Motor Livery company on Cottage Grove avenue.

Several hours later fifty automobiles, valued at $200,000, were destroyed when the Oakland Auto Livery garage on Thirty-ninth street was burned.

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

A Modern Invention—
A Recipe for Happiness.

Would you like my recipe for happiness? Here it is:

When weary, when anxious, when al*most desperate because of the trials of* the day, I do not sit down and bewail my fate—I go to a moving picture show.

Because I often reach the little crises of anxiety and resort to this most efficient remedy, I have grown gradually and unconsciously to be quite a critic. It has become a real responsibility, for I feel, if I say that a certain picture show is good, that a certain number of my friends immediately plan to visit it.

I love the "movies." I enjoy the talent and triumphs of the actors and have learned to regard them as my friends. I appreciate what they have done for me in making my dark days bright. I like the glimpses into untraveled roads which help me in my daily life.

Now, you are going to listen to me, I am sure, when I tell you what I have seen today. You won't believe it at first, unless you were fortunate enough to go too.

I have seen moving pictures that talk at the Savoy theater. "Of course," you will say," they all talk. No, you are wrong, for this is not a lip-reading contest, but real, loud words which even a child would understand.

The pretty picture I saw was like a miniature grand opera, a bit of the pret*tiest part of an idyllic act. To the grace* and charm of the thespian participants were added the marvelous words issuing from their lips.

It was almost unbelievable. I rubbed my eyes and tried to persuade myself that was not indulging in a remarkably pleasant dream. It was a realistic dream, just as are so many, and the entering of the Savoy theater was but the memory of many happy little rests. Then, so I theorized, my dream had become fantastic, and dreams will do no matter how practically they begin.

I felt like Alice in Wonderland, to whom all sorts of strange things happened most plausibly, and had even determined to ask the lady who sat next to me whether she were only a dream or real. Then I thought I had best wait, for I must soon awake.

The awakening did not come until I had the very nicest time imaginable listening to the pictures talk. Then I began to enjoy the other films and stayed until the talking pictures appeared again. Then I rushed to see Mr. Jackson, manager of the Savoy Theater.

He was glad to tell me about this new invention. I did not endeavor to learn how the lips of the performers and the words which they uttered were kept in perfect unison. I was only anxious to learn "When?" "Twice a week," was the reply, and I have made another mental note in my happiness book.

That means new talking films every Monday and Thursday. But if you wish to see the charming one which aroused my enthusiasm you may see it tomorrow. Each and every day the Savoy Theater will show these wonderful pictures.

We are accustomed to almost miraculous inventions and to the unusual. We feel almost disturbed if we are surprised out of our indifference. Sometimes we even feign indifference, so afraid are we that we may snow appreciation.

Don't do this. Visit the Savoy Theatre at once and learn to live and to enjoy. Let your suppressed enthusiasm know no bounds when you see the product of master minds, the stories which are told so artistically as to seem simple, wherein is the highest art.

The Heart of Valeska.

Valeska, the daughter of a poor Russian cobbler, is driven by poverty and the illness of her mother to offering herself for sale at public auction. A nobleman previously attracted by her, buys her and after hearing her story, falls deeply in love with her and weds her. This beautiful picture will be shown at the Montgomery theater Monday, May 12.

"Dimples" Costello Writes Name on Thousands of Pictures

Maurice, the "Movie" Idol.

Maurice Costello, the Vitagraph leading man, is as much a matinee idol as any player of the speaking stage ever was. He is one of the best actors on the screen and plays every type of role from the rough and ready sort to the polished gentleman.

Costello has become financially independent through his moving picture work. He has been acting ever since he was two years old—first in vaudeville and then in various stock companies. Now his fame is a household word with "movie" fans!

People who know Costello will call him "Dimples" in token of his good nature. His chief business is "pictures." His chief recreation is "pictures" and his hobby is "pictures." Outside of that he is a normal, good-looking man; fond of outdoor sports and especially partial to the big auto which he drives at break-neck speed. He thinks the greatest picture in which he ever appeared was Dicken's "Tale of Two Cities."

Costello says he has autographed 3,000 postal cards since he joined the *movies. The other day a woman liv*ing in Africa wrote to him asking him to send her his photograph and begging him to autograph it. He did because—well, just because he's one of the few matinee idols who hasn't forgotten to be nice to the rest of the world.

"What is your salary, Mr. Costello?" some one asked him the other day.

"Oh, great Caesar," he replied, "even my wife doesn't know that!"

The Booklovers' Catalogue and Why You Need It!

The Campaign Editor has prepared for your benefit in this Booklovers' Campaign, a Book Catalogue containing over four thousand book titles, with the names of authors. In this catalogue are all the prize titles used in this campaign. See what an advantage and convenience that will be to you.

Suppose, for instance, we publish a picture showing a man in the act of showing some courtesy towards a lady. You would naturally think of the word "Gentleman" and would look in the "G" column for the title that the picture might represent. Or you might turn to the "M" column and see if there were any men titles that would fit.

On the other hand, suppose you made up your mind you knew book titles well enough to select the right title to that picture, without the aid of any catalogue.

Here is what would happen in that case.

You would say, that is just plain "Gentleman" by M. T. Egan, and turn it in that way as a correct answer. If that title was not in our official catalogue, it could not be a correct answer for that picture.

And why?

Because no title not in our official catalogue will be used in this Campaign.

If you are going in to win in this delightful campaign, get our official catalogue by all means.

It will be the great aid to your share of $7,000. Use the coupon in ordering.

GET THE BOOKLOVERS' CATALOGUE

Use the Catalogue Coupon if you wish us to mail it to you. The first 35 pictures free with our Answer Book.

Ready for you May 15th.

The Pictures for This Booklovers' Campaign Are Made in This Way

Three members of The Journal's staff, one of whom is the Booklovers' Campaign Editor, are charged with the responsible duty of selecting the titles to be represented.

None of the three men knows what titles the others have selected. Each knows only his own titles. Only the General Manager knows all of them, for he must review the titles and the pictures, see that there is no duplication of the titles selected, and make sure that the pictures clearly and plainly and fairly represent the titles.

Now the descriptions of the pictures to be drawn to represent the titles are turned over to The Journal's Art Department. Each description is numbered to correspond with the number of the title filed away with the General Manager.

For example: The artist is told to draw a picture of a crowded street at noonday at Five Points. An officer is directing the streams of people and vehicles.

The title is not given the artist. Just a word description of the man's idea of what the picture should be to represent the book he has in mind.

The description above applies to the book entitled "Traffic," by E. Temple Thurston.

The artist does not know what title he is representing in his drawing. He draws to order, according to the written instructions given him. The picture is then passed upon by the man who selected the title to be represented. If the picture does not quite fit the title, or if it is faulty in any way, it is changed until it fits the title perfectly.

HOTEL CONTINENTAL

The South's Finest Summer Resort

Open Saturday, May 31st

Under the Management of Mr. H. M. Stanford of the Tampa Bay Hotel, One of the Best Known and Most Popular Hotel Men in the Country

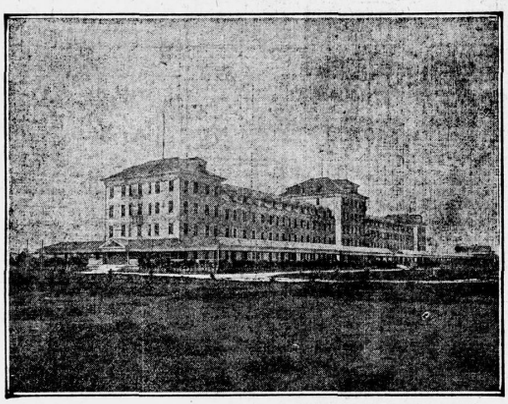
Among the attractions will be a grill room, open air cafes, a garage and a livery stable with a specialty of fine saddle horses. A cuisine will be established, regardless of expense, which will make the Atlantic Beach Hotel known throughout the country. The best stewards and chefs in the country have been engaged with a corps of skilled assistants. The kitchen is being rebuilt and completely refitted. The electric light and power plant is being renewed and doubled in capacity; the elevator service improved and the entire hotel is being renovated for the comfort and convenience of guests.

The ocean beach here being unequaled anywhere else, no expense is being spared to make surf bathing a leading attraction. The bath houses are being doubled in capacity; life guards and swimming instructors have been engaged. Rafts and life lines are being installed, and hundreds of the best and most expensive bathing suits obtainable have been purchased. There is no finer course in the world for automobile driving than at Atlantic Beach. It affords a longer uninterrupted drive, it is absolutely safe and at low tide there is no wider beach on the entire Atlantic coast.



The Atlantic Beach Hotel will be operated hereafter continuously and not merely for a few months during the late tourist season. Summer and winter it will extend hospitality and a quality of service that will secure the comfort of its guests and insure their return. It will be operated on a modified European plan. The grill room and dining room service will be as nearly perfect as skill and experience can make it and it will win for the hotel a reputation national in extent.

Twenty Thousand Dollars are Being Expended to Make This Splendid Resort Better and More Popular Than Ever

Already, in advance of this announcement, an unusual number of reservations has been made for the entire season, from all sections of Georgia, Eastern Alabama, the Chattanooga territory and Florida. The capacity of the hotel unquestionably will be taxed. It is strongly urged that old patrons and new ones shall make their reservations immediately, in person, by letter, by telephone or by telegraph.

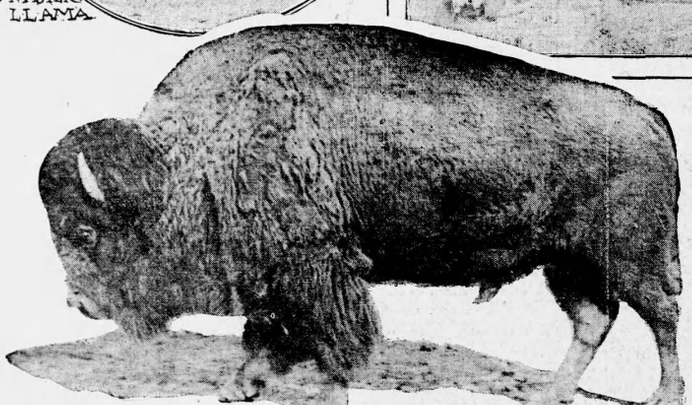
EVEN A BABY LEOPARD LIKES HIS BOTTLE



IN THE LEOPARD'S CAGE

By Angus Perkerson

EVEN the sacred cow, which is a sleepy divinity, lowed anxiously.

The circus train was swinging along the border of New Mexico, through a storm of snow, which left the night white with flakes and the track covered deep with drifts.

The complaint of the sacred cow was foreboding. But the stillness of the tigers was a more certain prophecy of danger.

E. T. Boyd, who is keeper of the Grant Park zoo, was cat man then with the circus.

Keepers sat up and rubbed their eyes, and knew that danger was approaching. A cageful of monkeys went into hysterics, a parrot squaked itself hoarse and swore in three different languages, and a wolf howled in three keys.

A Swede, who had drifted into the profession of cat man, instead of janitor of a New York flat, began to pray in his mother tongue, and the keepers crowded together.

From out on the prairie something drew near which only the eyes of the cats and the sacred cow could see.

THE SWEDE'S HYMN.

The Swede started a hymn, and a cage full of lions roared in the same breath. The black leopard jumped from side to side of his cage, like an irregular pendulum, and the sacred cow bellowed.

A scream rose, a crash followed, the Swede's hymn stopped. Cars smashed together, piled on top of one another, and the circus found itself wrecked in the New Mexico prairie, with 50 animals loose in the snow.

The Swede heaved a sigh of relief and picked up a piece of broken car timber for a club. The danger was over. The anxiety of the keepers was at an end.

Lions, tigers and a scared sacred cow or so, loose in the prairie, were no cause for worry to them.

The Swede grabbed a wolf by the tail and chucked it back into a cage that had been jarred open by the crash. Lions were rounded up like sheep.

A tiger made a nervous jump for the manager, but the big cat was in an agony of fright and meant no real harm.

E. T. Boyd, who was searching for escaped beasts, pulled off the tiger, hit it on the nose with a club, and chased it into an open cage.

In an hour the sacred cow had returned to its slumbers, the leopard was quiet, the lions were snoring, and the tigers were arching their backs and purring like house cats.

The keepers were out-snoring the divine cow.

AMIABLE ANIMALS.

Animals, either loose or in cages, are no source of fear to them. Occasionally a cat man is scratched or bitten, but usually by a frightened beast. Even when a black leopard springs for him, the keeper knows that the cat is scared and that the attack is one of fright.

When E. T. Boyd, keeper of the Grant Park zoo, told of that experience in New Mexico as his tightest corner, he meant that the moment when the animals saw what he could not see were the most uncomfortable of his life.

He has followed the big tent up and down the Pacific coast, and has shipped to Japan, to Australia, and to other faraway parts, but the danger which the cats scented out across the white prairie on the New Mexico border gave him more of the feeling of real fear than all the other experiences of his circus days.

As for taking the tiger off the manager's back and chasing the

IX.--THE CYNICAL MISS CATHERWAIGHT

(Copyright, 1896, by Charles Scribner's Sons)
(Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

MISS CATHERWAIGHT'S collection of orders and decorations and medals was her chief offense in the eyes of her dear friends who thought her clever but cynical.

All of them were willing to admit that she was clever, but some of them said she was clever only to be unkind.

Young Van Bibber had said that if Miss Catherwaight did not like dances and days and teas, she had only to stop going to them instead of making unpleasant remarks about those who did.

So many people repeated this that young Van Bibber believed finally that he had said something good, and was somewhat pleased in consequence, as he was not much given to that sort of thing.

Mrs. Catherwaigh, while she was alive, lived solely for society, and, so people said, not only lived but died for it. She certainly did go about a great deal, and she used to carry her husband away from his library every night of every season and left him standing in the doorways of drawing rooms, outwardly courteous and distinguished looking, but inwardly somnolent and unhappy. She was a born and trained social leader, and her daughter's coming out was to have been the greatest effort of her life. She regarded it as an event in the dear child's lifetime second only in importance to her birth, equally important with her probable marriage and of much more poignant interest than her possible death. But the great effort proved too much for the mother, and she died, fondly remembered by her peers and tenderly referred to by a great many people who could not even show a card for her Thursdays. Her husband and her daughter were not going out, of necessity, for more than a year after her death, and then felt no inclination to begin over again, but lived very much together and showed themselves only occasionally.

Bids to Dinners Were a Diploma

THEY entertained, though, a great deal, in the way of dinners, and an invitation to one of these dinners soon became a diploma for intellectual as well as social qualifications of very high order.

One was always sure of meeting some one of consideration there, which was pleasant in itself, and also rendered it easy to let one's friends know where one had been dining. It sounded so flat to boast abruptly, "I dined at the Catherwaights' last night;" while it seemed only natural to remark, "That reminds me of a story that novelist, what's his name, told me at Mr. Catherwaight's," or "That English chap, who's been in Africa, was at the Catherwaights' the other night, and told me--"

After one of these dinners people always asked to be allowed to look over Miss Catherwaight's collection, of which almost everybody had heard. It consisted of over a hundred medals and decorations which Miss Catherwaight had purchased while on the long tours she made with her father in all parts of the world. Each of them had been given as a reward for some public service, as a recognition of some virtue of the highest order--for personal bravery, for statesmanship, for great generosity, or the arts; and each had been pawned by the recipient or sold outright. Miss Catherwaight referred to them as her collection of dishonored honors, and called them variously her Orders of the Knights of the Almighty Dollar, or Badges of patriotism, and the pawnshops, and honors at second hand.

It was her particular fad to get as many of these together as she could and to know the story of each. The less creditable the story, the more highly she valued the medal. People might think it was not a pretty hobby for a young girl, but they could not help smiling at the same time at the scorn with which she told them.

"These," she would say, "are crosses of the Legion of Honor; they are of the lowest degree, that of chevalier. I keep them in this cigar box to show how cheaply I hold them. I think you can get them here in New York for ten dollars; they cost more than that about a hundred francs--in Paris. At second-hand, of course. The French government can imprison you, you know, for ten years if you wear one without the right to do so, but they have no punishment for those who choose to part with them for a mess of pottage."

Many War Medals Shown to Visitors

"ALL these," she would run on, "are of English war medals. See, on this one is 'Alma,' 'Balaclava' and 'Sebastopol.' He was quite a veteran, was he not? Well, he sold this to a dealer on Wardour street, London, for five and six. You can get any number of them on the Bowery for their weight in silver. I tried very hard to get a Victoria Cross to add to it, as it is England, and I only succeeded in getting this one after a great deal of trouble. They value it at six shillings only, you know, that it is the only other decoration in the case which holds the Order of the Garter in the Jewel Room at the Tower. It is made of copper, so that its intrinsic value won't have any weight with the man who gets it, but I bought this recently for over five pounds. The soldier to whom it belonged had loaded and fired a cannon all night when the rest of the men about the battery had run away. He was captured by the enemy, but retaken immediately afterward by reinforcements from the fleet, and the general in command recommended him to the queen for decoration. He sold the cross to the proprietor of a gambling shop and drank himself to death. I felt rather meanly about keeping it, and tried up his widow to restore it to her, but she said I could have it for a consideration.

"This gold medal was given, as you see, to Hiram J. Stillman, of the sloop Annie Barker, for saving the crew of the steamship Olivia, June 18, 1855, by the president of the United States and both houses of congress. I found it on Baxter street in a pawnshop. The gallant Hiram J. had pawned it for $15 and never came back to claim it."

Not for the Medal, But for Duty's Sake

"BUT," Miss Catherwaight, some one optimist would object, "these men undoubtedly did do something brave and noble once. You can't get back of that; and they didn't do it for a medal, either, but because it was their duty. And so the medal meant nothing to them; their conscience told them they had done the right thing; they didn't need a stamped coin to remind them of it, or of their wounds either, perhaps."

"Quite right; that's quite true," Miss Catherwaight would say. "But how about this? Look at this gold medal with the diamonds: 'Presented to Colonel James F. Placert by the men of his regiment, in camp before Richmond.' Every soldier in the regiment gave something towards that, and yet the brave gentleman put it up at a game of poker one night, and the officer who won it sold it to the man who gave it to me. Can you defend that?"

Was Well Known To Pawnbrokers

"MISS CATHERWAIGHT was well known to the proprietors of the pawnshops and loan offices on the Bowery and Park Row. They learned to look for her once a month, and saved what medals they received for her and tried to learn their stories from the people who pawned them, or else invented some story which they hoped would answer just as well.

Though her brougham produced a sensation in the unfashionable streets into which she directed it, she was never annoyed. Her maid went with her into the shops, and one of the persons always stood at the door within call, to the intense delight of the neighborhood. And one day she found what, from her point of view, was a perfect gem. It was a poor, cheap-looking, tarnished silver medal, a half-dollar once, undoubtedly, beaten out roughly into the shape of a heart and engraved in script by the jeweler of some country town. On one side were two clasped hands with a wreath around them, and on the reverse was this inscription: "From Henry Burgoyne to his beloved friend, Lewis L. Lockwood;" and below, "Through prosperity and adversity." That was all. And here it was among razors and pistols and family Bibles in a pawnbroker's window. What a story there was in that! These two boy friends, and their boyish friendship that was to withstand adversity and prosperity, and all that remained of it was this inscription to its memory like the wording on a tomb!

"He couldn't have got so much on it, anyway," said the pawnbroker, smiling into her humor. "I didn't lend him more'n a quarter of a dollar at the most."

Miss Catherwaight stood wondering if the Lewis L. Lockwood could be Lewis Lockwood, the lawyer one read so much about. Then she remembered his middle name was Lyman, and said quickly, "I'll take it, please."

Goes On Search For Lockwood

SHE stepped into the carriage and told the man to go find a directory and look for Lewis Lyman Lockwood. The groom returned in a few minutes and said there was such a name down in the book as a lawyer, and that his office was such a number on Broadway. It must be near Liberty. "Go there," said Miss Catherwaight.

Her determination was made so quickly that they had stopped in front of a huge pile of offices, sandwiched in, one above the other, until they towered mountains high, before she had quite settled in her mind what she wanted to know, or had appreciated how strange her errand might appear. Mr. Lockwood was out, one of the boys in the outer office said, but the junior partner, Mr. Latimer, was in and would see her. She had only time to remember that the junior partner was a dancing acquaintance of hers, before young Mr. Latimer stood before her smiling, and with her card in his hand.

"Mr. Lockwood is out just at present, Miss Catherwaight," he said, "but he will be back in a moment. Won't you come into the other room and wait? I am sure he won't be away over five minutes. Or is it something I could do?"

She saw that he was surprised to see her, and a little ill at case as to just how to take her visit. He tried to make it appear that he considered it the most natural thing in the world, but he overdid it, and she saw that her presence was something quite out of the common. This did not tend to set her any more at her ease. She already regretted the step she had taken. What if it should prove to be the same Lockwood she thought, and what would they think of her?

"Perhaps you will do better than Mr. Lockwood," she said, as she followed him into the inner office, "I fear I have come upon a very foolish errand, and one that has nothing at all to do with the law."

Did Not Want Suit For Promise Breach

"NOT a breach of promise suit, then?" said young Latimer, with a smile. "Perhaps it is only an innocent subscription to a most worthy charity. I was afraid at first," he went on lightly, "that it was legal redress you wanted, and I was hoping that the way I led the Courdert's cotillion had made you think I could conduct you through the mazes of the law as well."

"No," returned Miss Catherwaight, with a nervous laugh; "it has to do with my unfortunate collection. This is what brought me here," she said, holding out the silver medal. "I came across it just now in the Bowery. The name was the same, and I thought it just possible Mr. Lockwood would like to have it; or, to tell you the truth, that he might tell me what had become of the Henry Burgoyne who gave it to him."

Young Latimer had the medal in his hand before she had finished speaking, and was examining it carefully. He looked up with just a touch of color in his cheeks and straightened himself visibly.

"Please don't be offended," said the fair collector. "I know what you think. You've heard of my stupid collecting, and I know you think I meant to add this to it. But, indeed, now that I have had time to think things over, I came here immediately from the pawnshop, and I was so interested, like all collectors, you know, that I didn't stop to consider. That's the worst of a hobby; it carries one rough-shod over other people's feelings, and runs away with one. I beg of you, if you know anything about the coin, just keep it and don't tell me, and I assure you what little I know I will keep quite to myself."

Woman Tells That Medal Had Story

"I HARDLY know what to say," he began slowly. "It really has a story. You say you found this on the in a pawnshop. Indeed! Well, of course, you know, Mr. Lockwood could not have left it there."

"Miss Catherwaight shook her head vehemently and smiled in deprecation.

"This medal was in his safe when he lived on Thirty-fifth street at the time he was robbed, and the burglars took this with the rest of the silver and pawned it, I suppose. Mr. Lockwood would have given more for it than any one else could have afforded to pay." He paused a moment, and then continued more rapidly: "Henry Burgoyne is Judge Burgoyne. Ah! you didn't guess that? Yes, Mr. Lockwood and he were friends when they were boys. They went to school in Westchester county. They were Damon and Pythias and that sort of thing. They roomed together at the State college and started to practice law in Tuckahoe as a firm, but they made nothing of it, and came on to New York, and began reading law again with Fuller & Mowbray. It was while they were at school that they had these medals made. There was a mate to this, you know; Judge Burgoyne had it. Well, they continued to live and work together. They were both orphans and depended on themselves. I suppose that was one of the strongest bonds between them; and they knew no one in New York, and always spent their spare time together. They were pretty poor, I fancy, from all Mr. Lockwood has told me, but they were very ambitious. They were--I'm telling you this, you understand, because it concerns you somewhat; well, more or less. They were great sportsmen, and whenever they could get away from the law office they would go off shooting. I think they were fonder of each other than brothers even. I've heard Mr. Lockwood tell of the days they lay in the rushes along the Chesapeake Bay waiting for duck. He has said often that they were the happiest hours of his life. That was their greatest pleasure, going off together after duck or snipe along the Maryland waters. Well, they grew rich and began to know people; and then they met a girl. It seems they both thought a great deal of her, as half the New York men did, I am told; and she was the reigning belle and toast, and had other admirers, and neither of them took favor she showed--well, the man she married, for instance. But for a while each thought, for some reason or other, that he was especially favored. I don't know anything about it. Mr. Lockwood never spoke of it to me. But they both fell very deeply in love with her, and so they quarreled; and--and then, though the woman married, the two men kept apart. It was the one great passion of their lives, and both were proud, and each thought the other in the wrong, and so they have been apart ever since. And--well, I believe that is all."

"I Am Ashamed--Terribly Ashamed"

MISS CATHERWAIGHT had listened to this story with one little gloved hand tightly clasping the other.

"Indeed, Mr. Latimer, indeed," she began, tremulously; "I am terribly ashamed of myself. I seemed to have rushed in where angels fear to tread. I wouldn't for worlds have known for worlds. Of course I might have known there was a woman in the case, it adds so much to the story. But I suppose I must give up my medal. I never could tell that story, could I?"

"No," said young Latimer, dryly, "I wouldn't if I were you."

Something in his tone, and something in the fact that he seemed to avoid her eyes, made her drop the lighter vein in which she had been speaking, and rise to go. There was much that he had not told her, she suspected, and when she bade him good-by it was with a reserve which she had not shown at any other time during their interview.

"I wonder who that woman was?" she murmured, as young Latimer turned from the brougham door and said "Home," to the groom. She thought about it a great deal that afternoon; at times she repented that she had given up the medal, and at times she blushed that she should have been carried in her zeal into such an unwarranted intimacy with another's story.

She determined finally to ask her father about it. He would be sure to know, she thought, as he and Mr. Lockwood were contemporaries. Then she decided finally not to say anything about it at all, for Mr. Catherwaight did not approve of the collection of dishonored honors as it was, and she had no desire to prejudice him still further by a recital of her afternoon's adventure, of which she had no doubt but he would also disapprove. So she was more than usually silent during the dinner, which was a tete-a-tete family dinner that night, and she allowed her father to doze after it in the library in his great chair without disturbing him with either questions or confessions.

Lockwood's Card Causes Astonishment

THEY had been sitting there some time, he with his hands folded on the evening paper and with his eyes closed, when the servant brought in a card and offered it to Mr. Catherwaight. Mr. Catherwaight fumbled over his glasses, and read the name on the card aloud: "Mr. Lewis L. Lockwood. Dear me!" he said; "what can Mr. Lockwood be calling upon me about?"

Miss Catherwaight sat upright, and reached out for the card with a nervous, grasping little laugh.

"Oh, I think it must be for me," she said; "I'm quite sure it is intended for me. I was at his office today, you see, to return him some keepsake of his that I found in an old curiosity shop. Something with his name on it that had been stolen from him and pawned. It was just a trifle. You needn't go down, dear; I'll see him. It was I he asked for, I'm sure. was it not, Morris?"

Morris was not quite sure; being such an old gentleman, he thought it must be for Mr. Catherwaight he'd come.

Mr. Catherwaight was not greatly interested. He did not like to disturb his after-dinner nap, and he settled back in his chair again and refolded his hands.

"I hardly thought he could have come to see me," he murmured, drowsily; "though I used to see enough, and more than enough, of Lewis Lockwood once, my dear," he added with a smile, as he opened his eyes and nodded before he shut them again. "That was before your mother and I were engaged, and people did say that young Lockwood's chances at that time were as good as mine. But they weren't, it seems. He was very attentive, though; very attentive."

Miss Catherwaight stood startled and motionless at the door from which she had turned.

"Attentive--to whom?" she asked quickly, and in a very low voice. "To my mother?"

Mr. Catherwaight did not deign to open his eyes this time, but moved his head uneasily, as if he wished to be let alone.

"To your mother, of course, my child," he answered, "of whom else was I speaking?"

New Suggestion Does Not Please

MISS Catherwaight went down the steps to the drawing room slowly, and paused halfway to allow this new suggestion to settle in her mind. There was something distasteful to her, something that seemed not altogether unblamable, in a woman's having two men quarrel about her, neither of whom was the woman's husband. And yet this girl of whom Latimer had spoken must be her mother, and she, of course, could do no wrong. It was very disquieting, and she went on down the rest of the way with one hand resting heavily on the railing and with the other pressed against her cheeks. She was greatly troubled. It now seemed to her very sad indeed that these two one-time friends should live in the same city and meet, as they must meet, and not recognize each other. She argued that her mother must have been very young when it happened, or she would have brought two such men together again. Her mother could not have known, she told herself, she was not to blame. For she felt sure that had she known herself known of such an accident she would have done something, said something, to make it right. And she was not half the woman her mother had been, she was sure of that.

There was something very likable in the old gentleman who came forward to greet her as she entered the drawing room; something courtly and of the old school, of which she was so tired of hearing, but of which she wished she could have seen more in the men she met. Young Mr. Latimer had accompanied his guardian, exactly why she did not see, but she recognized his presence slightly. He seemed quite content to remain in the background.

"You were very thoughtful to give me this."

Mr. Lockwood, as she had expected, explained that he had called to thank her for the return of the medal. He had it in his hand as he spoke, and touched it gently with the tips of his fingers as though caressing it.

"I knew your father very well," said the lawyer, "and I at one time had the honor of being one of your mother's younger friends. That was before she was married, many years ago." He stopped and regarded the girl gravely and with a touch of tenderness. "You will pardon an old man, old enough to be your father, if he says," he went on, "that you are greatly like your mother, my dear young lad--greatly like. Your mother was very kind to me and I fear I abused her kindness; abused it by misunderstanding it. There was a great deal of misunderstanding; and I was proud, and my friend was proud, and so the misunderstanding continued, until now it has become irretrievable."

He had forgotten her presence apparently, and was speaking more to himself than to her as he stood looking down at the medal in his hand.

"It Was Thoughtful Of You," He Said

"YOU were very thoughtful to give me this," he continued; "it was very good of you. I don't know why I should keep it though, now, although I was distressed enough when I lost it. But now it is only a reminder of a time that is past and put away, but which was very, very dear to me. Perhaps I should tell you that I had a misunderstanding with the friend who gave it to me, and since then we have never met; have ceased to know each other. But I have always followed his life as a judge and as a lawyer, and respected him for his own sake as a man. I cannot tell--I do not know how he feels toward me."

The old lawyer turned the medal over in his hand and stood looking down at it wistfully.

The cynical Miss Catherwaight could not stand it any longer.

"Mr. Lockwood," she said, impulsively, "Mr. Latimer has told me why you and your friend separated, and I cannot bear to think that it was she--my mother--who should have been the cause. I could not have guessed that; she must have been innocent of any knowledge of the trouble she had brought to men to whom were such friends of hers and to each other. It seems to me as though my finding that coin is more than a coincidence. I feel somehow think that the daughter is to help undo the harm that her mother has caused--would you not say so? Give him medal and don't give it back to me, for I am sure your friend has kept his, and I am sure he is still your friend at heart. Don't think I am speaking hastily or that I am thoughtless in what I am saying, but it seems to me as if friends--good, true friends--were so few that one cannot let them go without a word to bring them back. But though I am only a girl, and a very light and unfeeling girl, some people think, I feel this very much, and I do wish I could bring your old friend to you again as I brought back his pledge."

"Years and Years Since We Met"

"IT has been many years since Henry Burgoyne and I have seen each other," the old man, slowly, "and it would be quite absurd to think that he still holds any trace of that foolish, boyish feeling of loyalty that we once had for each other. Yet I will keep this, if you will let me, and I thank you, my dear young lady, for it from the bottom of my heart. You are as good and as kind as your mother [illegible] and I am sure nothing, believe [illegible] higher praise."

He rose [illegible] and made a movement as if to leave the room, and then as if the excitement of this sudden return into the past could not be shaken off so readily, he stayed forward with a move of sudden determination.

"I think," he said, "I will go to Henry Burgoyne's house at once, tonight. I will act on what you have suggested. I will see if this has or has not been one long, unpardonable mistake. If my visit should be fruitless, I will send you this coin to add to your collection of dishonored honors, but if it should result as I hope it will, it will be your doing, Miss Catherwaight, and two old men will have much to thank you for. Good night," he said as he bowed above her hand, "and--God bless you!"

Miss Catherwaight flushed slightly at what he had said, and sat looking down at the floor for a moment after the door had closed behind him.

Young Mr. Latimer moved uneasily in his chair. The routine of the office had been strangely disturbed that day, and he now called to recognize in the girl before him with reddened cheeks and trembling eyelashes the cold, self-possessed young woman of society whom he had formerly known.

Tells Strange Story Of Adopted Father

"YOU have done very well, if you will let me say so," he began, gently. "I let me say so," he began, gently. "I and that you are right in what you said, and that Mr. Lockwood will not meet with rebuff or an ungracious answer. Why," he went on quickly, "I have seen him take out his gun now every spring and every fall for the last ten years and clean and polish it and tell what great shots he and Henry, as he calls him, used to be. And then he would say he would take a holiday and get off for a little shooting. But he never went. He would put the gun back into its case again and mope in his library for days afterward. You see, he never married, and though he adopted me, in a manner, and is fond of me in a certain way, no one ever took the place in his heart his old friend had held."

"You will let me know, will you not, at once--tonight, even--whether he succeeds or not?" said the cynical Miss Catherwaight. "You can understand why I am so deeply interested. I see now why you said I would not tell the story of that medal. But, after all, is may be the prettiest story, the only pretty story I have to tell."

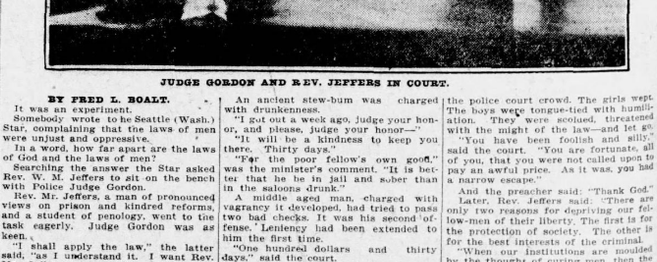
Mr. Lockwood had not returned, the man said, when young Latimer reached the home the lawyer had made for them both. He did not know what to argue from this, but determined to sit up and wait, and so sat smoking before the fire and fighting with his sense of hearing on a strain for the first movement at the door.

He did not have to wait. The front door shut with a clash, and he heard Mr. Lockwood crossing the hall quickly to the library, in which he waited. Then the library door was swung back, and Mr. Lockwood came in with his head high and his eyes smiling brightly.

There was something in his manner that had not been there before, something light and vigorous, and he looked ten years younger. He crossed the room to his writing table without speaking and began tossing the papers about on his desk. Then he closed the rolling-top desk with a snap and looked up smiling.

"I shall have to ask you to look after things at the office for a little while." he said. "Judge Burgoyne and I are going to Maryland for a few weeks' shooting."

THE LAW OF MAN IS THE LAW OF GOD BUT INTERPRETATION MAKES MAN'S LAW UNJUST



JUDGE GORDON AND REV. JEFFERS IN COURT.

BY FRED L. BOALT.

It was an experiment.

Somebody in the Seattle (Wash.) Star, complaining that the laws of men were unjust and oppressive.

In a word, how far apart are the laws of God and the laws of men?

Searching the answer the Star asked Rev. W. M. Jeffers to sit on the bench with Police Judge Gordon.

Rev. Mr. Jeffers, a man of pronounced views on prison and kindred reforms, and a student of problems of crime, took the task eagerly. Judge Gordon was as keen.

"I shall apply the law," the latter said, "as I understand it. I want Rev. Mr. Jeffers to keep his own docket." Then at the end of the session we can compare it with mine."

At the conclusion, Rev. Mr. Jeffers said to the court: "Judge Gordon, if I had been the actual judge on the bench, instead of you, and if I had applied, as I understand them, God's laws, I would have done exactly as you did in every case. I am agreeably surprised."

Judge Gordon replied: "When injustice is done in court, I do not believe it is our laws that are at fault, but, rather, the application of them."

Then was the case of the young sailor, a sullen Viking, who was charged with vagrancy.

But when Judge Gordon said: "You're too good a man to go to jail. Will you quit drink and get another ship as soon as you can?" The sullen look left his face and, with head erect and giving the judge look for look, he said with a sincerity you could not doubt:

"I will."

"He deserved the chance," said Rev. Jeffries.

An ancient stew-bum was charged with drunkenness.

Held out a week ago, judge your honor, and please, Judge your honor--"

"It will be a kindness to keep you there. Thirty days."

"For the good fellow's own good," was the minister's comment. "It is better that he be in jail and sober than in the saloon and drunk."

A middle aged man, charged with vagrancy is developed, had tried to pass off bad checks. It was his second offense. Leniency had been extended to him the first time.

"One hundred dollars and thirty days," said the court.

"Right," said the minister. "The man had his chance. Society is entitled to protection. But I would have preferred he goes to prison that he could be reformed."

Another man, a carpenter, had been picked up helplessly drunk.

"Married?"

"Yes."

"Does your wife know where you are?"

"No." The prisoner faltered and bit his lip.

"You don't look like a bad man. Will you promise to quit drink?"

"I'll try, judge. I certainly 'll try--mighty hard!"

"Go home to your wife," said the court and the minister nodded approvingly.

Two boys, each nineteen years old, met two sisters, one sixteen and the other sixteen, and bought them drinks in cafe. Then they went to a hotel. Chance and the timely arrival of the police saved the girls from ruin and the boys from the penitentiary.

The case was tried in the judge's chambers away from the prying gaze of the police court crowd. The girls wept. The boys were tongue-tied with humiliation. They were scolded, threatened with the mighty arm of the law--and let go.

"You have been foolish and silly," said the court. "You are fortunate, all of you, that you were not called upon to pay an awful price. As it was, you had a narrow escape."

And the preacher said: "Thank God."

Latter day advocates say: "There are only two reasons for depriving our fellow-men of their liberty. The first is for the protection of society. The other is for the reformation of the criminal.

"When our institutions are moulded by the thought of curing men, then the length of the sentence will be left out, as in the case of the insane. All that society has a right to is to protect itself by restraining those of proved anti-social tendencies--as in the case of the man who passed the bad checks. A determinate sentence, however, is absurd in principle and grossly wrong and injurious, in practice.

"I noticed that Judge Gordon gave suspended sentence to first offenders. That is wise, as well as merciful. Eighty per cent of convicted criminals are restored to manhood and good citizenship when given a proper chance. The convicted criminal has rights which should be recognized. He has a heart, and he thinks and feels as do others; he sins and is sorry, he tries and fails like other men.

"I do not know if Judge Gordon decided the cases in strict accordance with the laws of men, but I suppose he did. At any rate he brought to his responsible work a sympathy and understanding which showed me his chief thought was not punishment, but reformation and protection; and that, I feel sure, is as God would have him do."

NEWS THROUGH A CAMERA-LENS

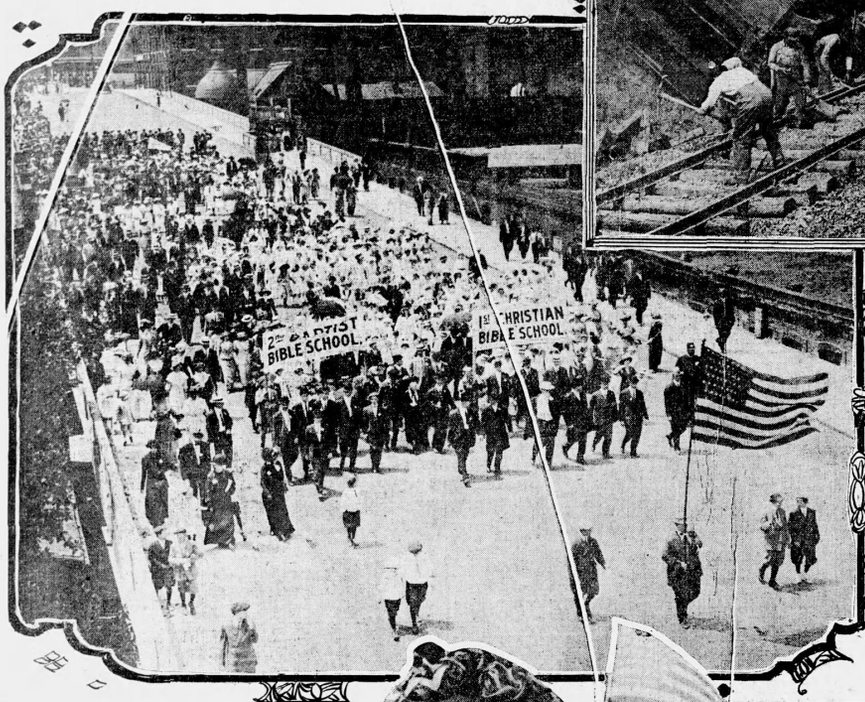
ON the right is a train that jumped the track and turned over near Lovejoy, Ga., on Friday, April 18. No one was killed, and only a few were slightly hurt. Death brushed the train and passed on. Below is shown a procession of 6,300 Sunday school pupils from the Second Baptist and First Christian churches. They met last Sunday at the capitol and marched to the auditorium for one of the largest Sunday school gatherings in the history of the world.



THESE little maids with their buckets and brooms are pupils of the Lee Street Public school, who have set about making the world spic and span. They observed April 18 as clean-up day, and scrubbed everything in sight, in addition to distributing a multitude of cleanup pledges.

THERE are so many beautiful little girls at the Forrest Ave Public school that every one became a little queen at the May festival on Thursday, May 1. The fesival itself was just such a delightful affair as you read about in books, and the queens of the May were much more beautiful than any you ever have seen or read of. They had eyes as bright as the May sunshine, and cheeks that the May winds had kissed. This particular little lady is accompanied by a brave soldier boy, as you can see by his flag.

ON the right is Caruso in his plaid hat; and below him, searching for a four-leafed clover, is Wallace Smith, Atlanta's third baseman. Caruso's plaid hat, next to his voice, is his most wonderful possession. He wore the hat upon his arrival in Atlanta on Sunday, April 20, and posed at the Terminal Station with it pulled down over one ear. Wallace Smith isn't superstitious, but he knows that if he finds the four-leafed clover, all doubts about Atlanta winning the pennant will be set at rest.

OLD GUARD GOES NORTH AGAIN

TO RENEW FRIENDSHIP MADE ON THE HISTORIC "PEACE MISSION" IN 1879

THE Old Guard battalion of the Gate City Guard, which goes north next week for a tour of the eastern cities, has a notable record, both in war and in peace.

The Gate City Guard was organized before the Civil war and had the distinction of being the first company that left Atlanta for active service when war was declared. They left the city April 3, 1861, under command of Captain Harvey Thompson. They were first sent to aid in the capture of Santa Rosa island, and when that project was abandoned, they were ordered to West Virginia.

The command fought in the battle of Cheat Mountain and in other notable engagements. It is a matter of interesting war history that on the retreat from Cheat Mountain the Gate City Guard did not hear the command to retire, and when the other part of their regiment retreated, they were left at the front. When the Union forces came on the Gate City Guard lay concealed in the high sedge grass within less than 100 feet of the Union line of advance. The command suffered terrible hardships while lost for four days in the wilderness, and lost a number of men from exhaustion and illness. They went practically four days without food and water.

At the beginning of the second year of the war, so many of the members of the Gate City Guard had been killed, wounded and incapacitated by illness, that it was compelled to disband as a company; the members who coul still fight, reenlisted in various other companies and fought on throughout the war.

REORGANIZED IN 1876.

In 1876 the Gate City Guard was reorganized in Atlanta, with Major Leyden, one of its original members, in command. In 1878, Colonel J. F. Burke, of Atlanta, who had served gallantly in the war as a member of another command, was elected captain of the Gate City Guard. In 1879, under Captain Burke's command, the Guard undertook its historic mission of peace to the eastern cities.

H. C. Fairman's in his "Chronicles of the Gate City Guard," epitomizes that mission:

"When future historians shall write impartial histories of the Civil war, and the strenuous period of reconstruction that followed one of the fiercest struggles in history shall be portrayed in language softened by intervening years, the peaceful mission of the Gate City Guard of Atlanta, Ga., will take its place in the history of our reconstruction days as illustrative of the true spirit of the southern people towards a restored union of the states.

"The members of this organization, which was the first in Atlanta to enter the Confederate army, recognizing and accepting in good faith the results of the war, and looking forward to a brighter, happier and more prosperous future for our country, determined to visit many of the cities of their former adversaries in war and offer the hand of fellowship with all the warmth of a solder's magnanimity. This patriotic mission was undertaken against the advice of many of their friends, who urged that the time was inauspicious, that political rancour and sectional animosity were still rife, that the old wounds were still open and that the company would return with failure, disappointment, chagrin and humiliation as the results of their patriotic efforts.

THEIR PATRIOTIC MISSION.

"But encouraged by other friends, and the press north and south, on October 6, 1879, the company, under command of Captain Joseph F. Burke, who inspired the unselfish and patriotic mission of the Guard, marched to their train carrying the national flag, amid the cheers of the populace and with many blessings and 'God speed you in your good work,' the train left the depot on an undertaking unique in history and which demonstrated to the people of the north the true sentiment of the southern people, who, holding sacred the memories of the war, accepted the sword's decision and were again in 'Our father's house.'"

It is not possible here to give an extended story of the Guards' triumphal tour. The ovations they received have passed into history. Military and civic organizations, Grand Army posts, governors, mayors and councils and the people joined in welcoming the southerners. The New York Sun, in a notable editorial, said, "The visit among us of the Gate City Guard will do more to bring about an understanding between the north and south than the legislation of a century."

On that historic tour the Old Guard visited Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Hartford, Conn., New Haven, Boston, Lawrence, Mass., Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and other cities.

OFFICERS OF THE OLD GUARD IN 1879

"At the review of the first division yesterday by Governor Robinson, about 8,000 infantry, cavalry and artillery were in column. The Gate City Guard, of Atlanta, were given the post of honor, and as they moved down Fifth avenue to the review stand their military precision called forth continued applause from the vast multitude—even the plumes of their caps seemed endowed with life. About thirty thousand people were in the vicinity of the stand. The Guard joined Governor Robinson in reviewing the column, and when the Seventh regiment reached the stand with Colonel Emmons Clark in command, the Guard gave the old 'rebel yell' with vigor, and a continued waiving of their white plumed shakos."

OLD PHOTOGRAPH TAKEN.

Sergeant E. W. Rhinehardt, still of Atlanta.

Sergeant E. W. Hewitt, deceased.

Sergeant J. L. Jackson, deceased.

Lieutenant W. C. Sparkes, of Atlanta.

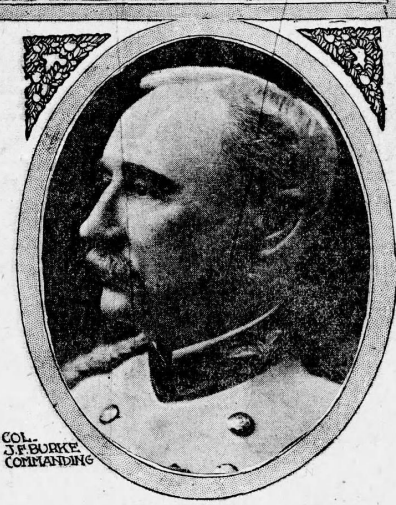
Captain J. F. Burke, of Atlanta.

Corporal W. B. Cummings, of Atlanta.

Corporal M. F. Amorous, of Atlanta.

Sergeant G. C. Neff, of Cincinnati, O.

Sergeant W. M. Camp, of Atlanta.



COL. J. F. BURKE COMMANDING

Corporal C. E. Sciple, of Atlanta.

The Guard made several other important northern and eastern trips. They attended General Grant's funeral in 1885, and the command went to the World's Columbian Exposition in 1893.

About that same period, when the Dix bill went into effect, the Gate City Guard withdrew from the state military service, and has never reentered. A new militia company, the Gate City Guard, has been formed in Atlanta and is a part of the Fifth Georgia regiment. The Old Guard of the Gate City Guard has continued as an independent organization and now exists as an independent battalion, under a special charter granted by the state. Colonel J. F. Burke is in command.

PEACE MONUMENT UNVEILED.

The eyes of the nation were again fixed on the Old Guard of the Gate City Guard in October, 1911, when the Gate City Guard peace monument was unveiled at Piedmont Park in Atlanta. The monument was dedicated by Governor Hoke Smith of Georgia, and Governor Simeon E. Baldwin of Connecticut. The monument was erected as a memorial to the governors, mayors and councils and military organizations that indorsed the Guard's mission of peace in 1879, and which was ratified 32 years afterwards by their presence in Atlanta at its dedication. Many of the most distinguished military organizations in the country were present at this dedication. The inscription on the front tablet of the monument is as follows:

"THE GATE GITY GUARD,
"Captain G. Harvey Thompson.
"In the conscientious conviction of their duty to uphold the cause of the Southern Confederacy, offered their services to the Governor of Georgia and were enrolled in the Confederate Army, April 3, 1861.

"Inspired with the same sincerity of purpose, and accepting in good faith the result of that heroic struggle,

"THE GATE CITY GUARD,
"Under the Command of
"CAPTAIN JOSEPH F. BURKE.

"Desiring to restore fraternal sentiment among the people of all sections of our country, and ignoring sectional animosity, on October 6, 1879, went forth to greet their former adversaries in the northern and eastern states, inviting them to unite with the people of the south to heal the nation's wounds in a peaceful and prosperous reunion of the states. This 'Mission of Peace' was enthusiastically indorsed by the military and citizens in every part of the union, and this monument is erected as an enduring testimonial to their patriotic contribution to the cause of national fraternity."

It is to renew the friendships made 34 years ago, that the Old Guard will leave Atlanta next week, Monday, May 19, to revisit the eastern cities. They will be gone until June 4, spending the time in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, and returning by boat via Savannah. Between 50 and 60 members will make the trip.

The Old Guard of the Gate City Guard, not only by virtue of its distinguished record, but by the personnel of its present membership, is one of the foremost independent military organizations in America. Its membership includes men of prominence in all walks of life.

GATE CITY GUARD PEACE MONUMENT

Racial Difficulties in the United States

BY MRS. W. H. FELTON

The action of the California legislature in regard to the Japanese is notated as a new sensation in race troubles, but it must not be forgotten that California had an experience with Chinese emigrants quite similar two or more decades ago. It is indeed the old, old story that has been told in every country where the Anglo-Saxon has lived or where he has gone forth to conquer. It is the old, old story of white supremacy, as England has dealt with her East Indian possessions and with China during the "opium war." It is the old story as illustrated in the dealings of the white man with the red Indian in these United States of America. It would have been the same old story in dealing with the African race in America, if the south had been wise enough to have remained in the union in 1861, and demanded the colonization of former slaves before the Civil war intervened and wrought havoc in the bloody settlement of the vexed question of slavery. It will be the same story to the end unless there shall be enough statesmanship to meet this race question properly by declaring these United States to be a white man's country with citizenship for any other alien race on the globe.

China made a treaty with the United States directly after the Civil war, called the Burlingame treaty, in which concessions were made by these United States and which concessions allowed the yellow man to come in and which guaranteed he would be as well treated as citizens of this country expected to be treated in the treaty ports of China. Hon. Anson Burlingame, a former senator of the United States, became the agent for the government of China in getting that treaty (which bears his name) ratified by the authorities of the United States, and there could not be a more solemnly ratified document ever enrolled on the records of this country.

As the Orientals crowded into California the natives began to protest, and after a few years of rough and steady friction California not only legislated to shut off the yellow man but congress abrogated this Burlingame treaty and wiped it from the statute books. California is doing the same thing over again, except this latter day legislation is directed against the brown Jap rather than the yellow Chink.

My sympathies are with California. They are taking this matter by the forelock, and although we may have a scrimmage, this difficulty must be settled in favor of white supremacy or this republic will become a hybrid government and subject to the same fate as Mexico and South American republics.

I am old enough to remember the furore that prevailed during the excitement of Know Nothingism. The principle of Know Nothingism, as applied to alien races is eminently right. Its former weakness lay in the opposition to the white races, Anglo-Saxon and Anglo-Celts who desired to come over as emigrants to the New World.

The antagonisms of color are insuperable; they are born into the bone and bred in the skin of the white race. I am no prophetess, have nothing but the slow wisdom that goes with age and experience, but I do see the danger, and I do dare to say that our ideals of civilization will not bear a mixture with alien races that are marked by color. It is a universal rule.

The privileges of citizenship that were given to the black man are fraught with danger to both black and white. It was a kind of spite program after Appomattox, and I am tempted to say to California: "The shoe is on the other foot" for you now, but two wrongs never could make a right by any known system of calculation.

Every sane and sensible student of history does now fully understand that a well defined line of citizenship should be made in these United States and that line of demarcation must be a color line and a separation from alien races.

THE MURDER MYSTERY IN ATLANTA.

It is simply astonishing how difficult it becomes to trace a murderer among the throngs that crowd the streets of a large city. With a horde of policemen and scores of active, earnest probers, yet some tragedies like that the disappearing of young Mr. Crowley some years back and murder of poor little Mary Phagan a few days ago seem to baffle vigorous and determined searchers who are on the job continuous day and night for weeks at a time.

And circumstantial evidence is so dangerous! Better a thousand times allow the real murderer to escape than to lynch, torture or electrocute an innocent person! "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord; I will repay." In the first white heat of public indignation the near friends of the victim always feel as if the murderer should receive the extremest penalties of the law; but I am satisfied in my mind that mistakes have been made, and the wrong man punished time and again. I have heard numbers of people say within the last week, "—— ought to be burnt alive!" "Hanging is too good for him!" "He should be torn to pieces limb by limb," etc. Indeed, public indignation has been fatigued, the crime was so atrocious, and the poor little girl so brutally maltreated, but it may happen to be exposed during some future time that the much talked about basement door permitted the real offender to emerge from the scene of murder and escape without detection.

Coming at a time when the city was full of sociological delegates who were exploiting civic righteousness and humane treatment to criminals, it was painful to know and understand that a tender, delicate little white girl had no better chance for safety and less protection from bestiality than the nude savages in African jungles.

I'll wager that the story will finally circle about the deadly virus of lust and liquor, the twin disturbers of public peace, and the cancer germs of degradation and death. But one must be certain before the fagot or the gibbet is evoked to settle such cases.

SATURDAY'S HALF HOLIDAY.

Every one who has been accustomed to farm life understands there are only five and a half working days in the week, no matter how busy the season of propitious the weather. The half Saturday custom is a constantly growing one, and those who depend on hired help to feed and water stock on Saturday afternoons generally get out of patience or go out to do the stunt for themselves. The day and a half of rest out of the seven has come to stay, and people like it so well that it is not likely to be changed. Country homes are generally more than quiet because the noisy ones have gone to town or a-fishing and everything looks deserted.

In the towns there is a general stir. Neighborhoods are active, the children have had a bath and fresh clothing, and the ladies dress up, sit on verandas or go calling. Those who have autos or buggies enjoy themselves in their use, and everybody but storekeepers and grocers get home early for the afternoon rest, with leisure to sit around and pass jokes as neighbors stroll on the streets.

The hours of everyday labor being shortened by legislation, the half Saturday holiday cuts into the week's work with a large slice.

If Housewives Shopped as Their Mothers Did, The Great Problem of Debt Would Be Solved

The Greatest Need in Household Economics, Says Woods White, Is That the Wife Shall Do Her Own Shopping and Shall Avoid Credit Accounts---By This Simple Means a Saving of 20 to 40 Per Cent May Be Effected

WHAT causes debt?

In the opinion of Woods White, president of the Atlanta Loan and Savings company, debt is oen of the greatest of all problems.

Not only hundreds, but thousands in every city are burdened by debt. Each one of this vast number is caught as between millstones. His existance is a struggle.

In discussing the problem of debt, Mr. White has not considered the investor who borrows to promote business ventures, or the man or woman who in inconvenienced by momentary lack of money.

He has considered the real debtors; the men and women who have become burdened by debt.

He suggests the following reasons as the principal causes of debt:

Unwise marketing by housewives.

The failure of women to keep a record of their household expenditures.

Buying on the credit.

Excessive rent.

Lack of co-operation between husbands and wives in matters of household finance.

"It isn't the small income that causes debt," he says, "but the foolish expenditures, and now and then, misfortune and calamity.

"Drink I find causes comparatively little of the financial distress that we see round us. It is not so much loose living or lack of money that causes debt, but on the other hand, it is chiefly ignorance of economy."

He believes that the outgoing rather than the incoming of money determines whether a man shall stand firmly on his feet, or shall be bowed down by debt.

What One Spends

He insists that it is not what one earns, but what one spends that is all important.

In explaining his reasons why debt exists, Mr. White discussed the condition of married people only. When a single man is burdened by debt there usually is no reason.

He said:

"Eighty-five per cent of the women spend all that the men make. That is, the income of the family, with the exception of a few dollars, is turned over to the wife. She buys the groceries and pay all the household expenses. The man sees to the income, the wife makes the expenditures.

"In reality, the financial standing of the household rests with her. What is earned is less important than what is spent, and the women do the spending. Whatever outlet they make of their husband's income means thrift or debt.

"Of course the general mistakes are making unwise purchases and buying on credit.

"Both of these mis-steps could be avoided if women would shop as their mothers did, instead of ordering over the telephone. From 20 to 40 per cent can be saved if the housewife will go herself to the grocer's and the butcher's, select what she wants, pay for it there, and even bring it home with her. Much is added to the cost of living by the delivery system. A store that must employ messengers and wagons for delivery, must add this cost to the price of its goods.

"It has come to the point now where a housewife will telephone uptown and have a bar of soap delivered.

Old-Fashioned Marketing

"The old-fashioned marketing will do as much as any other one thing toward lessening the cost of living and avoiding debt.

"For instance, at high-priced stores to which telephone orders are usually sent, eggs sell at about 25 cents a dozen. But a thrifty woman can find the opportunity of buying eggs just as good at 18 cents.

"In household economy, the fact should be borne in mind that shopping by telephone is a sad mistake, that a credit account is even worse, and that a personal visit to the store or the market can be made the means of saving 20 to 40 per cent on the month's grocery and meat bill.

"Where the margin between income and expenditure is narrow, careful shopping is imperative.

In His Opinion, Foolish Expenditures, Not Small Incomes, Are the Chief Cause of Debt---It Is What One Spends, Not What One Earns, That Is Important

"Another cause of debt is the failure of women to keep a record of their expenditures. Not one housewife in 1,000 in Atlanta know what it costs her to live. Home economics is a thing that is generally unknown. If banks, railroads, and corporations were run that way, they would be bankrupt immediately.

"I have yet to meet the housewife who can tell me just what it cost her to live last year, and men keep litle better records.

"Often the Atlanta Loan and Saving company settles the financial perplexities of a household by getting the husband and the wife to agree to keep a monthly record of their expenses.

"The only possible way in which to live economically is to know exactly how your money is spent, and to decide each month how you may lessen the next month's expenses.

Excessive Rent

"Excessive rent is a very frequent cause of debt. Men and women are paying too much for a roof over their heads. Twenty per cent of his income is the maximum that a man should pay for rent, and a limit of 15 per cent would be better. When his rent exceeds the maximum of 20 pr cent his household is on the way to financial embarrassment.

"It is not dishonesty and it is seldom loose living that causes debt. Incompetency is the chief reason. Men and women are ignorant of household economics. They have forgotten how to stretch a dollar. They have forgotten how to economize.

"If retail merchants would refuse to extend credit longer to customers who are falling too much into debt, they would do a great deal to prevent the financial ruin of many families.

"But it must be said for the retail merchants that without their assistants, the small wage-earner, struggling for an existence, would often be at his rope's end.

"Debt, after all, isn't a problem of crime but of sociology."

A NOTABLE SHORT STORY BY A FAMOUS WRITER — JUST IMPEDIMENT — By Arthur Brooke

DICK GRAHAM rose lazily from his chair as Mr. Kingsbury was ushered in by Dicky's wooden-faced man-of-all-work. Any one less self-evident than the bumptious little merchant would have seen that he was unwelcome.

"Ronald has been getting into a scrape again," he spluttered as he shook hands, "and I've come to you to get him out of it."

Graham forced a smile.

"Won't you sit down," he said.

"Ever since you saved his life out there in the states, the boy's regarded you as an elder brother, and I, if I may say so, as a sort of son."

Graham repulsed a shudder.

"Not a bit deserved," he said lamely; "he had fallen into bad hands—men who wanted the money with which your boy was making a very injudicious splutter, and I carried him off. That's all."

Dick Graham stood looking down at the little man with grim amusement. More than once he had regretted the benevolent action which had resulted in this unsought and unappreciated friendship. Ronald was a little bounder, he told himself, sure to come to grief some time or other.

"What's he done this time?" he asked after a pause

"He's got entangled with some wretched actress."

"Ah!"

"Tells me he's engaged, but if he is, he's got to get disengaged, that's all. I haven't accumulated three-quarters of a million to be squandered on—"

"What's the girl's name?"

"Madge Eardley."

Dick turned quickly away and walked to the window.

"Poor girl!" said Dick at last.

Mr. Kingsbury jumped up.

"Poor girl, indeed, sir," he sputtered. "I don't understand you."

"Then it's time you did," Mr. Kingsbury."

Dick's face, when he turned, had undergone a change. The cynical curves had left his lips, and his eyes flashed as angrily as his visitor's.

"You're a success man of business," he said, "which means that you've acquired a knowledge of men. You ought to know, then, that your son is not fit to marry a decent girl."

Mr. Kingsbury's trembling fingers reached for his hat. There were tears of sheer rage in his eyes.

Dick felt suddenly repentant. A course of action suggested itself.

"I'm sorry I put it so bluntly," he said.

"And—to think that I came to you for sympathy and help!" said Mr. Kingsbury.

"I'm afraid you don't get my sympathy."

"But your help?" He put his hat down again and waited. He had spent his life in the city, all his hopes and ambitions centered on an only son who had given him nothing but trouble. Of society he knew nothing—it had never had any fascination for him, and in Dick Graham he thought he had seen the man who was capable of launching his son into what that youth had termed "a swell set."

"If there's anything I can do in return," suggested Mr. Kingsbury timidly.

Dick laughed bitterly.

"There's nothing, thanks," he said, "but I'll help you out of this—if I can."

"You will!"

Hope returned to Mr. Kingsbury. He polished his hat briskly, and then nervously held out his hand.

"I'll send the boy to you."

"I expect he has a front seat at the theater where Miss Eardley is playing. Tell him to get one for me—next to him—for tonight!"

"But I had forbidden him to go."

"You must leave the matter to me," Mr. Kingsbury. I'll do what I can, but I must do it my own way. Tell Ronald I've half persuaded you that Miss Eardley is ten times too good for him."

Mr. Kingsbury laughed as though he had heard rather a good joke. But Dick did not laugh.

Just three hours later Ronald Kingsbury burst in.

"Ah! You're ready. That's good, Graham," he cried boisterously. "I say, you're no end of a brick. The guv'nor came home like a whipped puppy."

He stood for a moment admiringly before the glass, adjusting his opera hat to the angle which he considered the acme of rakishness.

"Don't thank me till the end," replied Dick, drily.

"But the battle's half won," pursued the youth. "And I'm as happy as they make 'em. She's a little ripper, Graham; you'll say so when you know her."

"I dare say!"

"'Tisn't as if she were one of the ordinary type," he went on. "she's merely on the stage because she's got a glorious voice and had to earn her living. Her father was a colonel in the artillery."

"Sure!"

"Positive! And she's as good as gold."

"So long as you're quite satisfied that she's worthy of you—"

"Now, Graham, that's beastly cutting, you know. I don't profess to be a saint. But, hang it all, a girl overlooks a lot when a fellow's heir to a million."

Of coures! But your father put it at only three-quarters of a million.

The irony of the remark was lost on him.

"Well, I'm not particular to a naught or two," he declared, "come on, Graham. If we don't buck up we shall miss her first song, 'The Robin and the Wren,' you know. It's on all the organs already."

"No doubt I shall recognize it," said Dick.

There was a block in Piccadilly where, because it was the height of the season they were mending the road. And it happened that as they made their way to their seats in the front row Miss Madge Eardley was in sole possession of the stage.

Dick looked up and for an instant his eyes met those of the singer across the footlights. Then a strange thing happened. The orchestra played but Madge Eardley was silent. The conductor from his perch and a pane-stricken stage manager from the wings called out the missing words, but the girl apparently did not hear them. She swayed a little uncertainly and closed her eyes. Then the gallery started a round of sympathetic applause. The singer recovered herself and, smiling gratefully upward, nodded to the conductor and the second verse was started again. The girl sang the rest of the song without faltering, and left the stage amid an outburst of applause. But she kept her eyes fixed on the gallery as she came on to make her bow—not for an instant did she glance toward the front row of the stalls.

"All fake!" Dick heard a man mutter. "Silly little beggar!" whispered Kingsbury, "made me feel cold all over. Sorry I didn't let her know I was coming."

Dick was silent, but in the entr'acte he made an excuse to leave his companion. Once out in the corridor he took a visiting card and scribbled some words on the back of it. An attendant was passing at the moment.

"Let Miss Eardley have that at once," he said.

The rest of the play passed uneventfully.

Madge Eardley sang well, but there was a hint of nervousness in her acting which induced the man at the back to admit that her breakdown was perhaps not intentional after all.

As the curtain fell young Kinsbury got up quickly.

"I shall go around and wait for her," he said. "Something's up! Look in on you in the morning, Graham."

Dick made a light supper and then went back to his flat, grateful to be alone.

"Fool! Fool!" he muttered as he climbed the steps, "what did I go for!"

To his surprise his man met him in the hall.

"A lady to see you, sir," he said stoically.

There was a light in the room beyond, and standing against the mantelpiece, with her foot on the fender, was Miss Eardley. From beneath her little fur hat a few stray wisps of hair told of a hurried toilette; her fingers played restlessly with her coat. She only wore one ring—a brand-new circlet of big diamonds.

"Madge—you here," he whispered at last, "at this time of night! Why?"

"You said you wanted to see me—as soon as possible!" she said.

"Tomorrow would have been soon enough."

"Tomorrow would not have been soon enough. As soon as I got your card I made up my mind to see you tonight."

She was looking him full in the face, her big blue eyes brimming over with tears.

"Oh! I know you are entitled to revenge," she cried bitterly, "but it isn't very brave of you to put Ronald against me. I've been a fool, Dick. I've played fast and loose with my happiness. I've lived on my success and treated life like a football. But I'm sick of it all. I want to give it all up. I want to live just an ordinary life."

"With Ronald Kingsbury?"

"Why not? He's a nice boy and—why mince matters—he's rich. Oh, there's no sentiment left in me. I've killed it all, I think, Dick. I've dreaded this from the moment he told me about your friendship and what you'd done for him."

"Why didn't you tell him?"

"That-I'd treated you like a toy? I wasn't sufficiently proud of it."

"If it hadn't been for that I shouldn't have been in America to save his skin. But you misjudge me after all. The relations between Ronald Kingsbury and myself are not so intimate as he seems to have told you. I've no regard for him whatever. In fact, I'm afraid he's an unspeakable—"

"You—don't like him? Why, he spoke of you as a bosom friend, and I—every time he mentioned your name I—it was that, I think, that made me promise to marry him."

"You've faith in my judgment, then?"

The girl suddenly lowered-her eyes.

"Of course I have," she said, in a low voice.

"Then you mustn't marry this man, Madge. Take my word for it, you won't be happy. Is that enough? Oh! don't think it's jealousy. I've trampled all that underfoot during the year I spent out west. But I know things—things I can't repeat to you—hullo, what's up! You're faint!"

With a little sob she had slid down to the ground, her face as white as a sheet. As quickly as possible Dick put her in a chair and poured out some brandy.

"Take this," he whispered. "Try—poor little woman!—dead beat! Madge!"

Slowly she opened her eyes, and the color came back to her lips. In a minute or so she rose unsteadily.

"I'm a bit shaky," she said. "Get me a taxi, Dick."

Dick walked unsteadily to the telephone and rang up the cab rank. To him, too, things seemed to be swimming. There was a moment's silence while the girl fastened her coat. Then once again their eyes met as they had done in the theater, but with a difference. In the man's steady gaze there was a look of agony. Madge Eardley took a step forward.

"Dick!" she said, "did you trample it 'all' underfoot—out west?"

"My darling!"

Suddenly she was in his arms, clinging to him, and crying and laughing at the same time.

There was a knock at the door.

It was a man's voice. Dick recognized it as old Kingsbury's.

"In here, quick!" he said. "I'll get rid of him in a minute."

He hustled her through a communicating door into another room.

"But Mr. Graham is not at home," said, "and you need have no fear, Mr. Kingsbury."

"You don't mean to say you've —"

"Miss Eardley hasn't the slightest intention of marrying your son. She asked me to let him have this ring back. Perhaps you'll give it to him."

"But, man, you're wonderful! How on earth did you manage it?" The little man's eyes were starting out of his head with excitement.

"To save the respectability of the Kingsburys," said Dick with a yawn, "I am going to marry her myself. Good night, sir!" (Copyright.)

Meeting Will Be Held at Scene of Famous Battle, July 1 to 4—Many Preparations Being Made to Make Occasion Pleasant for Veterans

GENERAL ANDREW J. WEST, Georgia's commissioner to the celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg, to be held on the battlefield July 1 to 4, has furnished The Journal with an interesting interview on the exercises that are to be held. General West has met with the Gettysburg commission on three occasions and goes again on May 15 to complete arrangements for the anniversary arrangements.

General West says of the anniversary occasion:

The camp will be modern in every respect, electric lights, sanitary drinking fountains, paved streets and every other convenience. Major Normoyle, who was for a long time at Fort McPherson, has charge of the work of preparing the camp and has arranged to front the great tent city on Confederate avenue.

"Equal courtesies and privileges will be accorded G. A. R. posts and U. C. V. camps. The president of the United States will deliver an address and Chief Justice White, a Confederate soldier, will lay the corner stone for a peace monument of great height.

RAILROAD RATES.

The round trip railroad rates from points in Georgia to Gettysburg and return will be about $17. No expense whatever after reaching there. The camp will be open for supper on Sunday, June 29, and will be closed after breakfast on Sunday morning, July 6.

"Our hosts, the splendid people of Pennsylvania, have asked and must know how many guests from Georgia they shall prepare for, therefore it is imperative that you notify the commissioner general, A. J. West, Atlanta, Ga., without delay, if you expect to go, otherwise it will be your fault alone if you are left out.

IDENTIFICATION CARDS.

"Each soldier is expected to carry an identification card, in case of sickness or accident. He must also be vouched for by the commissioner from Georgia. No provisions will be made in the camp for any except former soldiers. Arrangements for 50,000 will be ready and it is estimated 250,000 people will be in attendance.

"The governor and staff of each state will be invited to participate.

SOME WHO WILL BE THERE.

"Some of the most noted men in the United States compose the commission. Those from the south are as follows:

"Alabama—Hon. E. M. Byrne.

"Arkansas—General Jas. F. Smith.

"Florida—General E. M. Law.

"Georgia—General Andrew J. West.

"Kentucky—Colonel Andrew Cowan.

"Louisiana—Colonel J. B. Sinnott.

"Maryland—Captain John R. King.

"Mississippi—General W. A. Montgomery.

"Missouri—Colonel Thos. R. Rodgers.

"North Carolina—John C. Scarborough.

"South Carolina—General Irvine C. Walker.

"Tennessee—Hon. Luke E. Wright.

"Texas—General Felix H. Robertson.

"Virginia—General Brown.

"West Virginia—General Romeo H. Freer.

"Among the commissioners from the north are such men as follows:

"New York—Captain J. R. Greenhut.

"Massachusetts—Cononel Edward O. Skelton.

"Michigan—Captain John Allen Bigelow.

"Minnesota—General Lewis A. Grant, secretary of war under Garfield.

"Rhode Island—General Elisha H. Rhodes.

"Governor Tanner, of Pennsylvania.

"General J. M. Schoonmaker is chairman of the commission.

A Machine That "Draws Lots"

New York Sun.

PARIS.—A novel machine has been invented for drawing numbers by lot without the interference of human aid. It was tried at the last drawing of credit foncier bonds and proved quite successful.

The thousands of numbers, each placed in a small tube, are put in a huge globe, which is made to revolve so as to mix them thoroughly. Electric power or hand power can be used for this purpose. Then by pressing an electric button one number is allowed to drop out.

Formerly two orphans from one of the big city orphanges were allotted the task of picking out these numbers, but the method of mixing them was defective and it was considered that the numbers failed to get an equal chance.

A Materialist Proposing the Manufacture of Men

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

IN our age, which boasts of its enlightenment, there is a widespread superstition, which may be called "the superstition of science." Unless it be the word "progress," there is no word with which a charlatan can more effectualy delude the average man than the words "science" and "scientific." Even the palmists catch their deluded victims with these taking terms.

But the palmists are not alone in their use of this "superstition of science." Some who rank high in the academic world are just as absurd as these fakirs of the tent and palm.

Here, for example, comes a learned professor in a recent address before the "Metaphysical club of Boston," declaring the most ridiculous materialism. He is reported to have said that "it is obvious that the evolution from so-called matter to human life is possible. The chemist of the future will abor so that men shall be made lnbaly factories as chickens are hatched in incubators." Now, to whom is this jaunty nonsense "obvious"? Certainly not to most people, including the greatest scientists of the age. Is it even "obvious" to this silly "professor"? This habit of calling the doubtful and the false "the obvious' is the trick by which a certain class of academic shysters delude the ignorant. They will state a proposition about which there is universal disagreement, and say of it, "On all sides there is now universal agreement on this point." They overwork such specious phrases as "no one in the scientific world" now denies, etc., or "all the scientists now say," or "it has been conclusively demonstrated," etc. Under such sweeping claims of authority they seek to shelter the most rank absurdities. If they were required to name the scientists for whose authority they set up such "blanket claims" to cover senselessness, in most instances they would not be able to name so much as one reputable man of science who agrees with them. The scientists are not over well pleased among themselves about many things.

But this professor, who sets up a theory, which logically justifies the idea that men may be manufactured is simply setting forth jocose confidence the fundamental postulate of materialism. He is not the first professor that which Prof. John Tyndall said in less repulsive terms in his address before the British assectation more than thirty years ago. Even Professor Tyndall professed to find in matter "the promise and potency of every form and quality of life." Millenniums ago the heathen philosophers, Democritus and Lucretius, talked the same sort of silly stuff.

But let us consider the moral consequences of such teaching, and its bearing upon the social system. Its moral effect is far greater than its scientific value.

When these pretentious scientists, or their successors begin to make babies in factories, and the babies thus made to be grown to manhood and womanhood, will there be any wrong or injustice in using these man-made creatures as slaves? Can their color be controlled, so that fashionable tints can be procured, when a servant is ordered at the shop? Can the manufacturers arrange to produce an attractive assortment of shapes and lengths? Will they guarantee to produce a safe hand to drive an automobile, or a politician that will not lie, or a line of men for the work of cashiers and treasurers who will not steal? And, if so, what for use as college professors and scientists who will be proof against playing the fool?

Another question: If a man should kill one of these factory-fashioned creatures, would he be guilty of murder? Or is manufacturing evidently killed one in the making would his act be infanticide? Or in other words, Is there any wrong in killing a man-made machine, if we can imagine a machine having such life as can be taken away? How would it do to rob one of these manufactured fellows? It would happen to become wealthy by his intelligence and industry, and should build a railway or amass a fortune in some other way?

BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER.

These questions are designed to point out the moral bankruptcy of modern materialism, and to suggest what Is undoubtedly true, that its inevitable tendency is to degrade human nature and demoralize society. Its propagation in our own times, and in all ages, has yielded results of licentiousness. It can not be otherwise. If a man is a brute, there is no room for setting up moral claims in his interest or reconciling moral laws with reference to him; the thing to do is to let the strongest devour the weak, and the fittest survive.

The lowered moral tone of public opinion in our day is traceable, in a very large measure, to the wide-spread prevalence of materialistic conceptions of human nature. Murder increases and infanticide becomes common because life is cheapened by such notions.

The earliest announcement of the proper penalty for murder, of which we know anything, is found in the book of Genesis; and it is based on the essential dignity of human nature. It reads, "Whoso shedderh man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: FOR IN THE IMAGE OF GOD MADE HE MAN." It is manifestly a high crime to take the life of a being created in "the image of God;" but who can charge as serious an offense as murder when the life of a creature of brutal origin and nature is taken? He who kills a brute may be guilty of cruelty to animals, but certainly he can not be charged justly with murder.

The data of ethics found in the materialistic philosophy can yield debasing conclusions only. Such a philosophy starts in determinism, proceeds along paths of degradation, and ends in despair.

When Prof. Tyndall gave it worldwide advertisement in his address before the British Association, a great reviewer said some plain things which are pertinent to the utterance of this professor who has talked recently in Boston: "Does his materialistic view dignify human life and destiny, tend to enlarge and strengthen the motives which bind us to virtue, give us comfort and affliction, add new meaning to the artistic conceptions? Not at all. He brings us out of matter; he gives us back to matter. He makes us indebted to matter for all our joys and for all our sorrows, and places us to walk on a level with brute life, only our heads being above it. That is all, and he must not be disappointed to see the Christian world turning away from his conclusions, with content in its faith and piety for him. He knows nothing on this subject beyond the rest of us. He offers us a material universe that made itself, stamped with laws that made themselves, and informed with the promise and the potency of all forms of life. This is his speculation, and it is worth just as much as the speculation of a peasant and no more."

Nevertheless this debasing speculation is taught as the final conclusion of demonstrated science in many colleges in our country. It is no wonder that these such practical men as Hon. Bird Coler, of New York, have begun to question the value of such education, infested as it is with every form of vice and immorality.

It is time we heard less of what is called "free thought", and made more of pure morality. It is time we rose above materialism at least in the education of youth. With the mania for athletics we proclaim our care for the animal in boys; with the neglect of their religious education we exhibit our indifference to their the spiritual part of their nature. Animalism and athletism are the logical outcome of materialism. They proceed from the gospel of dirt and run directly to moral degradation.

THE TOURISTS WHO TROT

By Smith Clayton

THERE are tourists who trot.

For I've seen them on the run.

They are the unfortunate people who go to Europe via the average personally conducted tours. I had almost said, races. How on earth can a traveler see anything worth seeing and get any proper conception of it—while he's on the run?

IT'S WORTH WHAT IT'S WORTH.

My opinion is that a tourist who rushes from place to place in the old country and takes in the great sights by flashes of lightning, as it were, not only does not come within a stone's throw of getting the worth of his money, but is a loser from start to finish. If he remembers vividly anything he sees, he must have a memory that catches as catch can, and holds things only to let them slip his mind.

The best friend of the memory is fixedness of attention and you cannot fix the attention unless you take time.

SPEEDING!

When I was in Paris the last time several of these tourist races to the east in this country were run through that city. It was said that the personal conductors of these heats gave a day to Liverpool, five days to London, three days to Paris and so on. I remember being in the Louvre Art gallery when a party of these tourists were personally conducted through in a trot! Just think of it, the public building of greatest importance in Paris from an architectural standpoint and because of the wonderful wealth of its art treasures!

AT LEAST TWO!

Why, a visitor to Paris ought to give at least two rainy days to the Louvre. I used to pick rainy days to go there and was glad when it rained. There was the ground floor with its sculpture from the old days of Egypt and Assyria down to modern times. I have given many half hours to the exquisite nature of the Venus of Milo, this masterpiece of masterpieces, the last possibility of the beautiful in woman in marble. It was curtained off.

"I REMEMBER. I REMEMBER."

I remember enjoying the deserved distinction of reigning in solitary queenliness apart from the general sculptural grandeur. There alone was the iron Apollo, and the Fighting Gaul, in bronze and Psyche and Pan and Hercules and he next not to forget Venus leaving the Bath, the Graces, and Melpomene, the muse of tragedy, thirteen feet in height and draped to perfection, and the ground floor with the marvelous collection of pictures, not forgetting the Flemish and Dutch pictures on the second floor in which the fishers are so natural that they look as if they had just sprung out of the water.

A BOOKLET.

But it would take a booklet to mention half the pictures that still haunt the memory after so many years. I can not forget to mention just a few. The Assumption of the Virgin, by Prudhon; Psyche Receiving the First Kiss of Cupid, by Gerard; Bellsarius Asking Alms, by David; Shipwreck of the Medusa, by Gericault; Endymion Asleep, by Girodet; The Sabine Women and above it Leonidas at Thermopylae, both by David, and two of the grandest pictures in this vast palace which must be lingered in, not trotted through, if one expects to derive the high pleasure and lofty profit which these silent symbols of the classic past give to the attentive soul.

HARD TO QUIT.

I might go on and mention specimens of Italian and Spanish art like Titian's Entry of Christ into Thorns; Raphael's St. Michael Conquering the Dragon; Murillo's Beggar Boy and Madonna and Child; Guidos' David Slaying Goliah, and Ruben's Flight of Lot, and Rembrandt's Portrait of Himself. Oh, I don't know!

But, my, the mere thought of strolling through the Louvre is enough to put one to thinking how on earth such treasures could be crowded within the Eiffel tower, the tallest and grandest tower of all the ages. Vastly imposing it is one of the wonders of the world, but you can not see it in a minute, this gigantic Babel built entirely of iron with a height of 1,000 feet, a total weight of 6,500 tons and has cost 25,000,000 francs, $5,000,000, and more.

DO YOU KNOW

Why 10,000 people may be on this tower at the same time, on the staircases, platforms and lift, without undue crowding.

Figures of it give you some idea of its form—that's all—they are jokes when it comes to showing its dimensions and tremendous height, which is several times greater than the dome of the Invalides, which rises in crimson glory above the ashes of Napoleon, twice that of the greatest pyramid of Egypt—the next highest monument in the world being Washington's monument, about half as high.

The company, of which Mr. Eiffel was the head, had the exclusive and unrestricted right of working the tower for a profit during the exhibition and for a period of thirty years afterwards. It will then lapse to the city of Paris.

SMITH CLAYTON.

TIME NEARLY UP.

Let's see: 1889, 1899, 1909, 1913—well, yes, I guess the time'll be up in about six years and Paris will get the profit!

The best and cheapest time to go up is Sunday. The price is 1 franc to the first stage; 1 franc 50 centimes to the second, and 2 francs on the lift or mammoth elevator to the top. The bases of this tower are somewhat like the figure of a colossal fire-dog. Four iron prongs rest on bases of solid, massive masonry 500 feet apart.

CAN'T BE DONE.

It is simply impossible to personally conduct a traveling party around that tower and get an idea of its features. At least a whole afternoon should be devoted to its ascent.

SOME SEE.

You can see fifty miles in the beautiful surrounding country on a clear day. —ers in all its unrivaled beauty and grandeur of flashing green foliage and wondrous whiteness lies spread at your feet.

QUITE A SWEEP.

The eye sweeps around from the Bois de Boulogne via the Arc de Triomphe, and the Champs d'Elysees, Palais de Monceaux, and the Buttes Chaumont, and Pere La Chaire cemetery, and the Palace of the Luxembourg, and the Sorbonne, and the Pantheon, and the Louvre, rests for a moment on the Garden of the Tuilleries and the Place de la Concorde, flashes the Magdalen and Notre Dame and then closes in on the boulevards and feasts upon the luxuriant line of noble rows and double rows of grand trees from the Gare San Lazare, in the west, to the Tower of San Jacques in the east.

AFTER THIS BANQUET.

And after this visual banquet of beauty and splendor the untiring eye reaches out to St. Dennis, the burying ground of kings, and Compiegne and San Cloud, where Napoleon and Josephine once lived, and then on to Versailles, where all the glory of art is gathered; where on Sunday, too, I went out with about 100,000 people to see the grand waters play! It is only twenty-one miles from Paris, and on these occasions trains run between Paris and Versailles every five minutes in the middle of the day. This impressive spectacle, which costs from 8,000 to 10,000 francs to exhibit, usually takes place on the first Sunday of every month from May to October, when the grand Eaux, or waters, are shown. The Bassin de Neptune, the largest and grandest fountain in the world, plays in all its unrivaled beauty with five groups in metal—Neptune and Amphitrite, the Ocean, Proteus guarding the flock of Neptune, and two dragons, each bearing a Cupid.

LITTLE AND BIG.

First, the little waters play; the fountains of the Basin of Latona, the Colonnade, the Tower and the Obelisque; then the Big Waters, those of the Allee d'Eau, the Bassin de Dragon and the Bassin de Neptune. The jets of these are about seventy-four feet high, and they play about twenty minutes.

WAIT A MINUTE.

But you cannot trot around and see this grand spectacle. You will have to take your time. Three days in Paris on a dead run, although personally conducted, won't do it.

NOT TROTTERS.

But remember, the members of the Paris Tourist club which movement I mentioned last Sunday, will not have to do any trotting. Not at all. They will be in Paris two weeks with their living expenses paid. Arrangements are being made to take them over direct from Atlanta to Paris and return on the largest steamship now afloat, or which will be afloat in a few days. The price of the return ticket, including two weeks' sojourn in the most attractive city in the world, will be the lowest ever given from the south. Watch The Journal for the details and don't fail to cut out the article on Paris of last Sunday and this one. They will help some. The chance of their lives is almost at hand for the teacher, the preacher, and other people of culture of small means. They will be given the preference in the Paris Tourist club if they wish to go. And they will not have to go in a body from sight to sight in Paris—but can separate and each follow the dictates of his or her own taste in studying the wonders of the gayest and most artistic city in the world.

A return ticket from Atlanta to Paris with living expenses for two weeks in Paris thrown in.

That's the idea!

As The Journal covers Dixie like the dew, and stands out on educational matters, Dixie will probably sit up and take notice.

WHAT THE CORN CLUBS MEAN TO GEORGIA

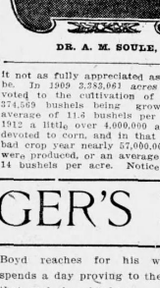
BY DOCTOR ANDREW M. SOULE

THE corn club movement was started several years ago, but like all undertakings of importance, it was difficult to set the machinery in motion by which results worth while might be obtained. One of the principal difficulties in the way of developing the work was the lack of financial support, and to this very day it is still the bane of this organization. At the present time the work is being carried on principally by the Georgia State College of Agriculture in co-operation with the office of the Farmers' Co-operative Demonstration work of the United States department of agriculture. It has been so organized that it has won the sympathy and approval of State School Superintendent Hon. M. L. Brittain, and the state school supervisors. It has been related to the work of the county boards of education, and the county superintendents and teachers. In a manner which has won their consideration and support of this effort to properly correlate an industrial feature with the work of the rural school system. The existing situation save for the financial stress which confronts the work is therefore a very happy one. In fact so much has Superintendent Brittain been impressed with the importance of the corn club work that he sets it down as one of the requirements for the attainment of a certificate of efficiency on the part of a rural school.

Few people are fully cognizant of the remarkable record which the Boys' Corn clubs have made in the past few years. This work was first undertaken in 1908 through the agency of the University of Georgia, but until 1910 was any considerable progress made for previous to that date it had not been possible to appoint a state agent for the work. In 1910 one agent was appointed and clubs organized in some forty counties. The enrollment for that year was 1,900. Three hundred reports were received from boys with an average yield per acre of forty-five bushels. Three boys produced over 100 bushels, the highest record of the year being 110 bushels. In 1911 two agents were employed and ninety-six counties organized. Five thousand boys were enrolled and 1,000 reports rendered, the average yield per acre being fifty-four bushels. In that year fifty-four boys produced over 100 bushels, the highest record being 214 bushels. In 1912, seven agents were employed and 120 counties organized, with an enrollment of 10,000, 2,500 reports being received. Sixty bushels was the average yield per acre, a remarkable record in view of the extremely bad crop season. Seventy-two boys produced over 100 bushels, the highest record being 157 bushels.

The nature of the task involved in organizing and directing this work will be better appreciated when it is stated that in 1912, 485 meetings were held in the interest of the Boys' Corn clubs with an attendance of 64,386 individuals. To hold these meetings necessitated 64,500 miles of travel, but the results attained as set forth a little later amply justify the effort put into this undertaking. One hundred and thirteen promises to be the most successful year which the work has yet known for the organization has been developed and co-ordinated into a more perfect machine than has hitherto existed. The cost of this work has varied from $2,000 in 1910 to about $17,000 in 1912. Of this amount $7,000 was contributed by the state, the remainder being obtained from the co-operative agreement now in force with the office of the Farmers' Co-operative Demonstration work and through subscriptions made by chambers of commerce and individual citizens.

In this connection it is proper to state that it has been necessary for the executive officers of the college of agriculture to raise several thousand dollars a year to maintain the Boys' Corn club work, and in view of what has been accomplished this does not seem justified. Surely, a movement which is exerting such a wholesome effect on the agriculture development of the state, the future of its prospective citizens and which is so closely related to the welfare of the rural school system of Georgia, should not have to beg for the funds needed to maintain it. Surely the state should take care of this work for if there is any direction in which money can be spent to advantage it would appear to be through any means which will conserve the energy of youth and add to its power of achievement. Surely it is well worth while to spend the state's money for the furtherance of the Boys' Corn club for last year 72 boys produced on 72 acres 9,088 bushels of corn or an average of 125 bushels per acre. This is as much as was made by the average farmer on ten acres of land. 2,500 boys produced on 2,500 acres land, 150,000 bushels or an average of 60 bushels per acre. 2,500 boys produced on 2,500 acres of land 100,000 bushels or an average of 40 to 50 bushels per acre. It is conservative to state that this corn would not have been produced save through the agency of the clubs, and certainly this movement added $400,000.00 to the revenue of Georgia in 1912. The cost of growing this corn was about 39 cents per bushel, or $156,000.00. Leaving a profit of $244,000.00. All of the boys who produced 60 or more bushels of corn per acre made it at a cost of 30 cents a bushel or less. These figures show that corn can be produced economically in Georgia.



DR. A. M. SOULE.

The influence which the Corn Clubs have exerted on the growth of corn is not as fully appreciated as it should be. In 1909 2,383,061 acres were devoted to the cultivation of corn. 39,374,569 bushels being grown, or an average of 11.4 bushels per acre. In 1912 a little over 4,000,000 acres were devoted to corn, and in that extremely bad crop year nearly 57,000,000 bushels were produced, or an average of nearly 14 bushels per acre. Notice that the yield of 1912 is nearly 18,000,000 bushels above that of 1909. Surely it is conservative claim that the boys' work influenced the yield on 500,000 acres to the extent of five bushels, thereby adding $5,000,000.00 to the revenue of the state. Certainly this is a good return on an investment of $7,000.00, and the writer honestly believes that if a claim of $10,000,000.00 were set up, it would be fully justified by the facts. Why should Georgia not have 25,000 club members and raise one million bushels of corn in 1913? Only because of the need of money from the state, to enlarge and carry on the work. Surely this work can not longer be maintained as a charity.

Many will be interested to know how the boys produced the results set forth in this paper. First of all, the land was selected with care. It was broken thoroughly with large turning plows, and prepared with much care and skill than is accorded the great majority of our farming lands. From five tons and upwards of yard manure or compost were applied per acre, some of it being broadcasted, but most of it used in the drill row. From 500 to 1,000 pounds of commercial fertilizer were used per acre, at least one-half of which was put under the drill row and from one to two side applications used relatively early in the growing season. In some instances nitrate of soda was applied at the rate of 100 pounds per acre. A few boys used as much as 150 pounds. The grade of fertilizer applied ranged from a 8-3-3 to a 10-4-5. In other words, the formulas were considerably higher than those used by the average farmer. It is noticeable that the application of the old standard 8-2-2, seems to be disappearing so far as the Corn club boys are concerned. In a few instances the boys applied as much as one ton of commercial fertilizer, but as she posed. But the keeper wouldn't have that. Such a posture struck him as very unbecoming to the zoo. He whacked Maud on the end of the snout, and told her to "drop it."

"Think you're going on a journey," he protested. "Taking your rations with you? Wait a moment, and I'll sort of dust her."

He scraped hay off Maud's back, shook stray bits out of her ears, and directed her to raise her trunk and look pretty.

He sat on the back of a water buffalo to be photographed; brought out the little week's-old leopard, which hasn't yet learned a proper respect for its keeper, and fed the baby from a bottle; and posed the newly-arrived zebra and the infant llama.

This last was the most venturesome undertaking of all. A llama is a queer looking creature, with few visible means of attack or defense, but its bite is like that of a snake. The flesh sloughs where the teeth of the creature break the skin, and the wound is months in healing. A llama—at least the one at Grant Park—also spits on whoever angers it.

The mother zebra lowed piteously when her baby was taken from beside her to be posed in the sunlight of the yard, where the baby is not yet allowed to stretch his wobbly legs. The father has the run of the yard, and his disposition is so paternal that if the little one were turned out-of-doors he probably would attack and kill it.

THE BUFFALO'S GOAT.

The bison, who has a head the size of an antediluvian monster, pawed the ground in "his yard" on the other side of the fence, and made as though to rush the thin barrier of barbed wire.

Boyd strolled over, flipped a pebble at the buffalo, and looked the shaggy beast in the eye.

"Now, run along and mind your own business," he advised, "or I'll come over and chase you all around the lot."

The bison, who weighs two tons, looked uncertainly at the 150 pounds of man, snorted, turned round and walked away.

"He's easy," said the keeper, "that little piece of wire's got his goat."

Suddenly, from the animal house, came a loud squalling.

"But that," said Boyd, "is another matter."

The parrot, with the long, streaming tail, and the incorrigible disposition, had gone on a rampage.

"Say," called the keeper from the entrance to the animal house.

"Say," shouted back the parrot in defiance.

"Cut it," ordered the keeper.

"Cut it," yelled back the parrot. "Say, cut it. Say, say."

It gripped the wires of its cage with its hooked beak, tugged at the wiring, and uttered a guttural exclamation of defiance at the keeper.

"That's one you can't manage," he admitted.

As he says, the parrot is the only "animal" in the zoo who hasn't any goat. You can't twist its tail.

TWISTING THE TIGER'S TAIL

By Angus Perkerson

beast into a cage, that was an unexciting incident.

Every keeper has confidence that he can pull any tiger's tail without regret. He realizes that other keepers come to mishap upon occasions, but he has no doubt that his eye and his will and a rawhide whip are sufficient to subdue all unruly beasts.

Each has scars upon his body, but none upon his spirit.

Not in Tokio, Japan; Sidney, Australia; or Atlanta, Georgia, has Boyd, the big boss at the Grant Park zoo, found big cat or other beast that a man with confidence couldn't wallop into submission.

He has traveled up and down the Pacific coast, in Mexico, and in lands that lie on the other side of the world. But he has yet to find the animal, even though it be a black leopard, who won't humble itself before a rawhide whip and a steady eye.

The keeper who doesn't occasionally yank his tigers round by the tail isn't a keeper.

THE CASE OF THE LEOPARD.

Take the leopard at the zoo, for instance. He is well suited to a photograph, but he felt disinclined the other day to pose. He kept to his inner cage, and refused to step out into the small, front porch apartment, where he has the opportunity of enjoying comfortable sun baths.

Boyd pitched a stick to Charley, the negro assistant, and told him to run "that leopard out." He himself stepped into the outer cage, and the leopard nearly stumbled over him, and immediately flattened into one corner!

"Nice boy," he coaxed. "Come out here. Come along" He flicked one striped flank with his whip. "Come on. Aw, get out of there."

He half picked up Mr. Leopard, and placed him into the center of the sunlight, pulled open his jaws to show how angry the beast could look, and afterward smoothed the big cat's ruffled coat.

That is the way in the zoo. The big cats are little cats to the keepers. Boyd neither goes armed, nor has assistants to stand by in case of emergency. He knows there will be no emergency.

If a cat grows frightened and springs at him in a burst of hysterics, he sidesteps and tries the sedative of a whip.

NERVE AND A BIG WHIP.

Like other keepers, he is boss and all the zoo knows it. He has neither a hypnotic eye nor an instinctive understanding of animals. He simply has the nerve and the big whip.

Occasionally a spirit of ego enters the zoo, and even the hyena considers himself as director in chief. When such misunderstanding arises, Boyd reaches for his whip and spends a day proving to the animals that each is mistaken.

But no animal keeper is cruel. Something about the misfortune of his charges excites his symathy.

But he realizes that a proper relation must be maintained between himself and his charges, and that nothing keeps a big cat in his place so effectively as a little bullying.

It is surprising to see how harmless the zoo seems to Boyd.

After posing the leopard, he suggested a photograph of Maud, the elephant, and let down the bars of Maud's compartment. He might have been preparing for the exit of a Jersey cow.

With the bars down, he picked up a walking stick and said, "Hey, come along," and walked out with Maud following docilely at his heels.

COOL COTTON FROCKS FOR WARM DAYS

HAVE you noticed the lovely French crepons and cotton voiles displayed in the shops?

Paris has placed her stamp of approval on these fabrics and they are to be used extensively for the summer frocks. The manufacturers have given us a wide assortment of designs introducing the natural or conventionalized flowers, many of which are embroidered in bright colors, or the delicate pastel shades on a white or cream background. Some few varieties resemble the old-fashioned striped taffeta silks worn by the belles of 1830, the stripes of small moss rosebuds, buttercups or primroses being arranged alternately with others of plain blue, pink, yellow or lavender.

The artistic frocks drawn on this page are developed of French crepon or voile and the home dressmaker will experience little difficulty in duplicating them for her wardrobe.

Unusually pretty is the model with the tunic-like overdrapery of figured crepon, showing an embroidered lozenge design of pale blue on a backing of white. The neck line, cut in a deep V at the front, is finished with a collar of pale blue crepon, bordered with a narrow frill of the same. A shirred chemisette of white mousseline de soie forms a rounded line at the throat. The cuffs are a band of plain blue finished at either side with a frill. Over an underskirt of plain blue gracefully falls the tunic drapery with rounded corners. A narrow frill of plain blue is used to edge this. A girdle of raspberry pink taffeta is drawn softly about the slightly raised waist line.

With this frock is worn a smart little hat of white hemp faced with black velvet. Pale blue ribbon and pink roses are used to trim it.

A collection of frocks is incomplete this season without introducing a note of brilliant coloring, and the model trimmed with the rose hands is an excellent example of this fact. Beige cotton voile is the material used and the bodice folds surplice-fashion over a chemisette of beige mousseline de soie.

The collar, cuffs and band on the skirt are of white etamine embroidered with colored wools in brilliant shades of blue, yellow and mauve. A finely pleated underskirt falls from beneath the overskirt. The broad girdle is of mauve velvet, finished at the side with a flat bow, and the sleeves are finished below the elbows with two ruffles of the mousseline de soie. A quaint little bonnet of mauve straw, trimmed with beige-colored velvet, completes this smart costume.

The charming model with the broad stripe sash is of white cotton voile combined with Irish crochet lace. The bodice is unadorned, save for an oddly shaped collar trimmed with the lace and turned-back cuffs to correspond. Blue-and-white checked taffeta forms the sash-girdle, finished with knotted fringe at the ends. From beneath this falls the plain, softly gathered skirt.

The chic hat is of dark blue straw, trimmed with a fantaisie of white paradise plumage.

For the woman who admires the frocks with jacket effects, which are so popular at present, is designed the model of pale rose-colored crepon. The blouse fastens at the side with flat crystal buttons and a frill of lace finishes the neck line and extends down the front to the girdle.

A short peplum with rounded corners is stitched across the back, falling over a wide girdle of old-blue taffeta silk. Long close-fitting sleeves are set in at a dropped shoulder seam with a narrow piping.

Completing this costume is a small hat of white straw adorned with old-blue velvet and a wreath of tiny pink roses.

At the top of the bodice is a smoothly fitted yoke of khaki-colored crepon finished at the neck with a ruching of the same material. The full sleeves are gathered into a cuff of khaki crepon trimmed with a double frill. From beneath a hip sash of black satin falls the slightly gathered skirt, which is adorned below the knees with two broad folds of khaki crepon trimmed with narrow frills.

Worn with this frock is a charming hat of black milan straw, with the brim turned up at the side. Yellow ribbon with a picot edge is drawn about the crown and tied in a flat bow at the back.

LITTLE GIRLS' BONNETS OF CREPON

THE Parisian milliners are displaying a great variety of quaint bonnets fashioned of fabric, and mothers show a marked preference for this type of headgear when fitting out their small daughters' wardrobe. A soft, pliable material, such as embroidered batiste, voile, crepon or silk, is selected to make these bonnets and they are trimmed with a simple bow or cluster of flowers.

The mother who is at all clever at sewing can duplicate any one of the models shown here and supply her little girl with a dainty bonnet to wear with her pretty lingerie frocks.

Embroidered crepon is used for the bonnet with the striped band about the crown.

First, make a foundation of buckram, of a not too stiff quality, or of wire covered with lawn or milliner's scrim.

Cover the crown with a circular piece of embroidered crepon, cutting it large enough to gather full at the base.

Use a graduated pleated frill to form the brim and tie a band of bright blue-and-white taffeta ribbon about the crown. The crepon is white with a small flower embroidered in yellow.

A dainty model is the Charlotte Corday bonnet of white crepon. The crown and frill are embroidered and scalloped with shades of pink. Rose-colored satin is drawn softly about the crown and tied in a flat bow at the side.

The quaint bonnet of printed, flowered crepon with the shirred crown closely resembles the caleches worn by the colonial maidens.

The crown is shirred on cords, at uniform intervals, which are drawn together at the sides. The gathered frill is bordered with black velvet and is then stitched to the crown. A band of black velvet, finished at the side with three apples made of yellow silk, trims this bonnet.

The caplike bonnet is fashioned of pale pink crepon, with roses embroidered in a deeper shade. Two frills of lace and narrow pink soutache braid form the band framing the face.

A very pretty bonnet, which is easily copied, is the one with the black velvet bow at the side. It is of white crepon with a hyacinth-blue flower design trimmed with plain white.

If your daughter is too large to wear a bonnet, make one for a tiny relative or friend; it will prove interesting work for an odd hour.

Embroidered swiss or flowered chiffon can also be used to make these bonnets; the latter material, however, will require a lining of silk.

Sleeve Drapery

ONE of the most graceful fashions of today for evening gowns is the use of sleeve drapery that carries a flowing line of color from the bodice over the arms and sometimes far below the waist line.

Sleeve drapery can be of rich metallic laces, either gold or silver; tulle, mailine or chiffon. It is frequently caught under buckles or fancy cabochons at the shoulders. From this point the material falls back over the arms, and sometimes is continued in long lines as a train. The effect is medieval and beautiful.

French Fashion Notes

PARIS, May 1.

AT A private view arranged by Madame Paquin for her patrons this artist displayed a most unusual collection of three-piece costumes. The loveliest of these are developed of moire, silk tatine, poplin or faille. Tobacco-brown moire is effectively combined with rose-pink chiffon to fashion the gown of one suit. The draped skirt is caught up at the side with an ornament of embroidered moire, and the chiffon bodice is adorned with bands of the brown moire. Over this is worn a bolero jacket of the moire with the front ends pointed and turned back like envelope flaps. A double collar, the lower layer of pink chiffon and the upper of tobacco-brown, finishes the neck line. This combination of rose-pink and brown is especially popular at present. Not only among the dressmakers, but the milliners also are creating artistic hats by combining these two hues.

A charming costume of gray silk poplin is elaborately embroidered with mauve silk. Cream alencon lace fashions the yoke and underpuffs of the sleeves. The bolero jacket forms a straight line three inches above the girdle, and is softly gathered into a cord. The collar is embroidered with mauve and the small revers are edged with a cord. Frills of the alencon lace finish the three-quarter length sleeves.

Among the interesting features noted on the evening gowns are the scarf-trains, the broad girdles of mailine, tied in a full bow at the front, angel sleeves of lace, chiffon or mailine and the girdles finished at the bottom with a narrow pleating.

One of the handsomest models is of coarse gold net draped over a foundation of gray and violet chiffon. The sleeves are of the gold net lined with chiffon and hang in graceful lines to the knees. From the shoulders extend broad scarfs of the net bordered with gold lace, and these form the train. Over a foundation of white satin, white shadow lace is arranged in an original manner. The bodice folds over surplice fashion and the neck line is edged with a narrow pleating of fine net. A broad girdle of folded rose-colored taffeta encircles the waist and a narrow pleating of the same material finishes the bottom. Eight inches below the waist a pleated flounce is stitched to the skirt with an inch and a half heading. The chou of mailine replaces the corsage bouquet on many evening costumes.

Paul Poiret continues to launch wonderful color combinations, and his street costumes are as colorful as those designed for house wear. On a copper-colored moire silk gown periwinkle-blue satin is used for the girdle and pipings. Cerise and violet, sulphur and king's blue, tan and malachite green, caramel and Florentine red were combined in other gowns.

The races at Longchamps were well attended, and the course, thronged with exquisitely attired women, presented a pleasing picture. Among the smartest toilettes worn was a gown of black satin trimmed with rust-red brocaded crepon. With the draped skirt a jacket of red crepon was worn.

For formal wear, Jeanne Lanvin is showing a varied assortment of feather-trimmed hats. One lovely model is of fine white straw with a white plume wrapped about the crown. Another plume is arranged at the back and a small compact bunch of pink, yellow and blue silk roses is placed among the feather fronds at the side front.

Slipper buckles of brilliants and cut steel are now mounted on flat loops of velvet.

ELOISE.

CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

Let the Scalp Breathe Freely

BEAUTIFUL HAIR for EVERY ONE

Brilliantine Insures Neatness

A GOOD picture surrounded by an ugly frame loses more than half its beauty. A beautiful face beneath lifeless hair loses its attraction. Therefore, it is most important to spend a little time each day in caring for the crown of glory. Even though a face cannot boast of carved features, it can be improved if topped with long, luxuriant hair. The hair will get into an undesirable state if left to itself. Beautiful hair is comparatively rare, and this is the case because women do not devote enough time to its care.

To keep the hair in good condition it needs air, light and exercise. The latter can be given by means of vigorous brushing. Select a good brush for this purpose; pay more attention to the bristles than to the back. The bristles should not be stiff enough to scratch the scalp, but they should be firm enough to stimulate the circulation of the blood through the scalp. To get the best results from brushing divide the hair into strands, and then brush each section separately. It is very important that the brush be kept clean. This is easy enough. Add a teaspoonful of ammonia to a quart of water and so place the brush in the solution that the back will not be affected. When all of the dirt has been removed rinse the brush in clean water and place it with the bristles down to dry. This cleansing is necessary once a week, for after brushing the hair you can find much dirt on the bristles if you will but rub a towel over them to prove the statement for yourself.

The hairs get their sustenance from the blood, so that it is most important to keep a necessary supply of it in the scalp. This can be done by massaging the scalp systematically with the finger tips. If the scalp is too dry rub vaseline or castor oil into it while massaging. Persons who do not care to use this form of a tonic can apply the remedy made according to this prescription:

|---|---|
| Phenol | ½ dram |
| Tincture nux vomica | 20 grains |
| Tincture cinchona | ½ ounce |
| Tincture of cantharides | ½ dram |
| Oleine | 4 ounces |
| Sweet almond oil | 2 ounces |

Apply to the roots of the hair with a soft sponge once or twice a day. This lotion is especially good for very dry hair.

For an oily condition of the scalp the following is an excellent formula:

Massage Stimulates Blood Circulation

Quinine Hair Tonic

|---|---|
| Sulphate of quinine | 1 dram |
| Rosewater | 8 ounces |
| Diluted sulphuric acid | 15 minims |
| Rectified spirits | 2 ounces |

Mix, then further add: Glycerin, ¾ ounce; essence of royals or essence musk, 6 or 8 minims. Agitate until solution is complete. Apply to the roots every day.

In the awful rush of business, household and social duties it is not convenient for a woman to give her hair a sun and an air bath every day, but she should spare hair an hour or so once a week for this attention. The hair should be allowed to hang loose over the shoulders. Give it an occasional shake so that the breezes may thoroughly ventilate the scalp.

At night do not braid nor tie the hair together, but let it hang over the pillow. This will give it a change from the position it has been in during the day.

Unhealthy hair is often split at the ends and of an uneven length. To get rid of the split ends it is advisable to singe the hair. This is done by rolling strands of the hair into hard, twisted tapes and holding a lighted match to the straggled ends. Cutting half an inch from the ends of the hair once every two months will increase its length.

Brilliantine will prove a great friend to the girl who has unruly hair. The proper way to apply this to the hair is, pour a little into the palm of the hand, dip a brush into it and then apply the brush to the hair. An excellent quality of brilliantine is made of the following ingredients:

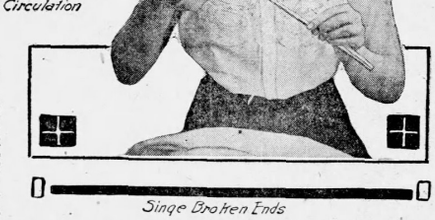
|---|---|
| Sweet almond oil | 6 fluid ounces |
| Alcohol | 4 fluid ounces |
| Glycerin | 1 fluid ounce |
| Oil of rose geranium | 12 drops |



Singe Broken Ends

To keep the hair in good health one must avoid dandruff. If you have the slightest case of this disease route it out by brushing, massaging and airing the scalp. A thorough cleansing with pure soap will help to cure the disease. Green soap or pure white castile will be best for the purpose.

Begin now to give your hair the treatment that it deserves.

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

REPLIES to letters sent to the writer of this department will be printed in regular order; but no replies in print may be expected in less than three or four weeks.

Correspondents desiring immediate replies to queries may get them by inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. Personal inquiries will receive prompt attention if accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

A Massage Cream

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you kindly give me the recipe for a massage cream, which may be used to develop the bust?

MABEL.

Following is the recipe for a splendid cream:

|---|---|
| Lanolin | ½ ounces |
| Spermaceti | ½ ounce |
| Mutton tallow (freshly tried) | ½ ounces |
| Coconut oil | 4 ounces |
| Oil of sweet almonds | 4 ounces |
| Tincture of benzoin | 1 dram |
| Oil of neroli | 20 drops |

Mix as you would any cream of the sort. Rub on gently at night.

Irregular Teeth

Dear Mrs. Symes,

My little boy is not bad looking save for his teeth, which are very irregular. Do you think I could have them straightened?

ANXIOUS.

Take your boy at once to a competent dentist and have him correct the irregularities.

An Eye Lotion

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Kindly give me the recipe for a harmless lotion to be used in weak eyes.

VIOLA.

A very harmless lotion which you may use is made of:

|---|---|
| Boric acid | |
| Boiling water | 1 pint |

Put boric acid in a basin. Pour water in and allow the boric acid to dissolve before boiling.

Dislikes Red Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes,

I have red hair and detest same. I look better with black hair and want to turn mine gradually that color. I understand that red hair is caused by too much iron in the system. Would the hair change color if the excess could be taken out?

DISCONTENTED.

The color of the hair is due to the pigment in the epidermis of the scalp. A hair dye is the only thing that will change the color of your hair; but I do not advise you to use this, for the auburn-haired woman is of such a distinctive type, if you persist in changing the color of your hair go to a reliable establishment to have the work done.

Obstinate Freckles

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you kindly let me have the recipe for removing freckles?

ANXIOUS.

I am giving you the recipe for a paste which may be used to remove freckles:

Obstinate Freckles

|---|---|
| Oxide of zinc | ½ dram |
| Subiodide of bismuth | ½ dram |
| Tyrtrate | ½ drams |
| Glycerin | 1¾ drams |
| Rosewater | 1½ drams |

Spread the paste upon the freckles at night before going to bed. In the morning remove what remains with a little powdered borax and sweet oil.

To Remove Spot and Scar

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Do you know of any remedy to remove a red spot left after a pimple and a scar from a burn?

Please give me a freckle cure.

My hair is dry, short and curly. What can I do to improve its condition?

DOT.

To fade the spot apply a lotion made of equal parts of peroxide and water. If the scar isn't far from the burn is in the true skin nothing can be done to remove it. If merely the epidermis is affected the scar will disappear in time.

2. Here is the recipe for a freckle cure:

Doctor Wilson's Treatment for Obstinate Freckles

(Recommended by Erasmus Wilson, and, though excellent in obstinate cases, does not suit all; it acts quickly and well.)

|---|---|
| Elder-flower ointment | 1 ounce |
| Sublimate | 20 grains |

Mix well and rub the affected skin at night. In the morning wash the cerate off with soap and soft water and dry afterward apply a wash thus composed:

|---|---|
| Citric acid | 20 grains |
| Infusion of rose | ½ pint |

All local discolorations, Doctor Wilson affirms, will disappear under this treatment, or, if the freckles do not yield, they will at least be greatly ameliorated.

The length of time it takes to affect a cure varies with different persons.

3. To improve the condition of your hair rub a few drops of castor oil into the scalp every day. After the scalp has been well massaged brush the hair thoroughly for ten minutes.

Sweet Oil

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Is sweet oil ever used on the scalp?

S. A.

Sweet oil is often used on a dry scalp to provide the necessary oil and to allay itching.

Talcum Powder

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Please let me have the recipe for a good talcum powder.

MADGE.

You can make a very pleasant talcum powder by using:

|---|---|
| Rice flour | 10 ounces |
| Talcum | 10 ounces |
| Oxide of zinc | 1 ounces |

Mix thoroughly and sift twice through fine bolting silk. Perfume to taste.

Blackheads and Pimples

Dear Mrs. Symes,

I am 12 years of age and am bothered a great deal with pimples and blackheads. Please let me know how to get rid of them.

PITTSBURGH.

To get rid of the blackheads I advise you to follow the advice given to "Hazel," whose query appears on this page.

The diet and exercise will help to remove the pimples. They should be bathed with hot water, dried and then covered with the cream for which I am giving the recipe:

Fosatti Cream for Pimples

|---|---|
| Extract of violet | 16 drops |
| Sweet almond oil | 1¼ drams |
| Sulphur precipitate | 75 grains |
| Lanolin | 75 grains |
| Oxide of zinc | 2 scruples |

To Remove Blackheads

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Please tell me how to get rid of blackheads?

HAZEL.

The blackheads must be attacked internally as well as externally. While lack in the care of the skin is in many cases the cause of the black specks, indigestion and constipation are often the instigators of the trouble. You should live on a strict diet until the skin is cleared. Give up candy, cake and pie and lean toward broiled beefsteak, fresh vegetables and salads.

Exercise daily. A five-mile walk every day is one of the best ways to obtain a clear complexion. The exercise, the fresh air and the beautiful thoughts produced by nature will do much to brighten the complexion and the eyes.

Following are directions for the outward treatment of the blackheads:

Green Soap Treatment for Blackheads

Tincture of green soap ..... 2 ounces
Distilled witch hazel ..... 2 ounces

Let this mixture stay on only a few moments, then wash off with hot water.

If the green soap irritates the skin, as it sometimes will, use it every other day. Apply a cold cream.

Green soap may be purchased at any drug store. It is not a regular "cake soap," but is of about the consistency of custard.

Open each seed acne with the point of a fine camel's hair needle. The hardened mass must be pressed or picked out. The empty sac of the gland should then be bathed with a little toilet vinegar and water, or with a very weak solution of carbolic acid and water. Sterilize the needle before using it by dipping into boiling water, as the use of any instrument, unless the skin as well as the needle is thoroughly cleansed, is always dangerous.

A Freckle Cure

Dear Mrs. Symes,

I should like to know whether massaging the face with massage cream will banish freckles.

A READER.

Massage cream will not remove freckles. Frequently rub the spots with lemon juice. To prevent more freckles from appearing you should apply cream and powder to the face if you expect to be exposed to the sun for any great length of time.

Granulated Eyelids

Dear Mrs. Symes,

My sunbeckance is greatly marred because I have granulated eyelids. Will you please tell me how I may cure them?

SUSAN.

You should consult an oculist about the trouble. The eyes are too precious and too important to be neglected when anything is wrong with them.

Hair Is Lifeless

Dear Mrs. Symes,

My hair is lifeless, though I brush it twice daily and use castor oil. I have dark-brown hair and should like to know what I can do to make it auburn.

FLORA.

Very often the condition of the health causes the hair to be lifeless. If you are aware of any physical ailment you should attend to the trouble at once. Discontinue using the oil and substitute for it a tonic made of:

|---|---|
| Resorcin | 3 drams |
| Tincture of cantharides | 1 ounce |
| Oil pimento | 4 drams |
| Oil rosemary | 16 drops |
| Bay rum, add sufficient to make | 8 ounces |

Following is the recipe for a henna stain. This will give your hair an auburn tint.

Henna Hair Stain

Steep 1 ounce of henna leaves in a pint of boiling water for twenty minutes. Let stand until it gets cold. Strain the liquid. Apply to the hair by the aid of a small sponge. The henna will sometimes stain the scalp, but the stain can easily be removed by soap and water.

To Gain Weight

Dear Mrs. Symes,

I am very thin and shall appreciate your telling me how to gain weight.

E. L. T.

Thinness is often caused by badly selected food, insufficient nourishment, a mental or physical strain, or a nervous temperament may prevent one from gaining weight. Retire early and rise late. Take moderate exercise. Eat your meals at regular hours every day and be most careful to select nourishing food. The farinaceous substances, such as bredd, soups, tapioca, sago, oatmeal, gruel and rice, are prescribed for the thin woman who wishes to grow stouter. You must cultivate a mild and sweet temper.

Lusterless Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Every one used to compliment me on the lustre of my hair, but recently such remarks are not made, for my hair looks dead. What can I do to bring back the shine?

GRACE K.

Your scalp is evidently in need of stimulation. Morning and night massage the scalp with the finger tips until you can fairly feel it tingle. After the massage brush the hair, giving it at least one hundred strokes each time.

The High Coiffure

Dear Mrs. Symes,

I am 14 years old and wish to arrange my hair high on my head. Mother says this makes one look older. Is this so?

E. F.

The high coiffure does add to one's years. The hair arranged low on the neck makes the face look younger. However, one's features as well as one's age must be taken into consideration before deciding how the coiffure should be arranged.

Smooth Elbows

Dear Mrs. Symes,

What can I do to soften the elbows and make them attractive? RUNCINA.

Apply warm sweet almond oil to the elbows every night after the skin has been rubbed with warm water, soap and thoroughly rinsed. To prevent the bedclothes from getting greasy wrap a piece of muslin or cheesecloth around the elbows.

To Remove Warts

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Please give me a simple remedy for removing warts.

ROSEBUD.

Following is the recipe for a wart eradicator:

Mix 1 grain of paraform, with 9 parts of flexible collodion and apply to wart three times a day. After two or three days, the epidermis peels off and the wart will come with it.

A Hair Dye

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you kindly give me the recipe for a brown hair stain?

JIM.

Here is the recipe you desire, but is advisable to experiment with a little before applying it all over the hair, to see if it is the desired shade.

Brown Hair Stain

|---|---|
| Green walnut shells | 2 ounces |
| Alum | ¼ ounce |
| Pure oil | 4 ounces |

Heat it together in a water bath until the water has been completely evaporated. Then express, filter and perfume.

Sage tea may be used to darken the hair. Make a strong brew of dried leaves, strain the liquid carefully through muslin, and to each pint add two teaspoonfuls of alcohol. This should be rubbed on the hair every night before retiring.

To Remove Parasites

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Kindly publish a recipe for something that will remove parasites from the head.

CONSTANT READER.

Cut a cake of bichloride of mercury soap into halves and shave one half into fine bits. Dissolve it in boiling water. You may set the mixture on the stove over a gentle heat if you choose. You should have the water form a jellylike mixture when cold.

The following lotion may be used after a thorough washing with the foregoing preparation:

|---|---|
| Tincture staphisagre | 3 ounces |
| Bay rum | 2 ounces |

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs. Chester Adams most cordially invites her friends to bring to her their Social Problems and Perplexities, by letter at any time

ANNOUNCEMENT CARDS

WHEN a marriage has been celebrated quietly before the immediate family, or just a few friends, announcement cards are sent to inform others of the ceremony. These are in several forms, the following being the accepted style:

Mr. and Mrs. John Gray announce the marriage of their daughter
Alice to
Mr. Andrew Hall
On Friday, June the sixth,
Nineteen hundred and thirteen,
Saint Mary's Church,
New York.

Often a large visiting card of the bride and groom is inclosed with an announcement. This has the address of the new home and the day at home of the bride.

If there are no relatives to issue an announcement, the news can come directly from the happy pair in this manner:

and
Miss Alice Gray
announce their marriage on Friday, June the sixth
Nineteen hundred and thirteen,
at Saint Mary's Church,
New York.

I must say a word about recalling wedding invitations. Illness, death, or, alas! disagreement between the engaged ones, which results in a broken engagement, sometimes make it necessary to recall invitations. Fortunately, orders can be filled in a very short time by first-class engravers, who are prepared for these events. To every one on the list of names who has been honored with an invitation should be sent a card a little larger than a correspondence card with a message which can be worded like this:

Owing to the sudden death of Mr. John Gray's father, Mr. and Mrs. John Gray beg to recall the cards issued for their daughter's wedding.

Announcement cards require no acknowledgment. Persons who observe strictly the receipt of cards call on the parents, who are the host and hostess, within two weeks of the notice of the wedding. A very gracious thing is the sending to the bride or groom a little note of congratulation. The posting of a visiting card to either one or to both, with a phrase expressing sincere good wishes, is also correct.

Announcement cards need not be acknowledged by gifts. Your familiarity and wish in this matter should decide. No married couple wish to be interpreted as bidding for presents when they announce their marriage. It is foolish and uncalled for to send a gift when only a slight acquaintance exists. Your sincere good wishes should go with the gift. Without them the most expensive present is worthless.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Canceling an Invitation

DEAR Mrs. Adams,

Will you kindly tell me how to word a note canceling a dinner invitation?

PEGGY.

The following form may be used for the brief note:

Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. White regret exceedingly that a sudden and severe illness in their family necessitates the indefinite postponement of their dinner arranged for the twelfth instant.

A Dinner Party

Dear Mrs. Adams,

I am intending to have a dinner party for a friend who visits her aunt. I am 14 years of age, and would like to have you answer the following questions for me:

1. What time would be appropriate for the guests to arrive?
2. What kind of place cards would be all right?
3. What two colors shall I use if I entertain in midsummer?
4. Would it be all right for girls of our age to send invitations to boys of the same age?

D. E. S.

1. It is customary for guests to arrive about five minutes before the time stated in the invitation.

2. Place cards are liked because they are such wonderful icebreakers at a dinner party. On the cards have quotations or original couplets suitable for each guest. Or you can have white cards with a green fir-tree design painted on them with watercolor. The name of the guest can be written on with white ink, which resembles snow.

3. Light green and white are refreshing colors to use during midsummer.

4. Yes, if your parents are willing.

Wording the Invitation

Dear Mrs. Adams,

I find it difficult to word an invitation to a dinner party given to surprise my daughter on her birthday. The dinner is to be at 7 o'clock.

(Mrs.) H. B.

I presume the dinner is to be of an informal nature. In this event, the following form may be used for the invitations:

24 Chestnut street, May 10, 1913.

Dear Miss Brooke: Will you give us the pleasure of your company at dinner on Monday, the 19th, at 7 o'clock? The dinner is to be a surprise for my daughter Emily.

Cordially yours, HELEN CLEMENS.

The Step to Take

Dear Mrs. Adams,

A young man meets a girl and asks to see her home. He then makes an engagement with her for the theater, after which time he received no further invitations from her to call. What is necessary on the man's part if he wishes to call to see the girl several times a week, although he does not wish to push his way in, be not knowing whether he is desirable?

When in the presence of girls I find it very hard to hold a conversation, which places me in a sad position. Although I read very much and listen attentively to people while speaking, I cannot gather any matter on which to converse. Will you kindly let me know how to hold a conversation and on what matters to speak?

ANXIOUS READER.

A man should not be puzzled by the fact that a girl has not asked him to call. It may be that she is one of the many who never invite men to call on them. He should ask permission to call some evening convenient to her. Since she has accepted his invitations, it is quite likely that she will gladly give him permission to call.

Possibly you do not try to find the subjects that are most interesting to the persons in whose company you chance to be. The clever one introduces many topics, until he learns which one appeals. Of course, if your associates fail to enter into the conversation, then I should say that you are not associating with congenial friends.

Acknowledging an Introduction

Dear Mrs. Adams,

A girl friend of mine is going to bring a young man to call on me. I have never met him before and so should like to know whether I should shake hands.

AGNES T.

A woman in her own house invariably extends her hand when any one is presented to her, saying at the same time in a cordial tone, "How do you do, Mr. Brown? I am very glad to know you."

A Call is Necessary

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Through the influence of a friend, I was invited to a party, but at the last moment was unable to attend. Do you know if it is necessary to call upon the hostess.

A READER.

Yes; you should call within a fortnight after the entertainment.

Returning the Call

Dear Mrs. Adams,

A friend of mine requested me to invite a friend of hers to a reception I held. The latter accepted and called on me after the entertainment. Should I return her call?

IN DOUBT.

You are not obliged to return the call, but you may do so if you wish to continue the acquaintance.

Has a Nickname

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Almost everybody calls me by a nickname. Will you kindly tell me if it would be proper to have this engraved on my calling cards?

H. P.

It is most improper to use nicknames on calling cards. The full Christian name, as well as the surname, should be engraved.

Cards at a Reception

Dear Mrs. Adams,

We are three sisters who have been invited to a reception. Only one of us can attend. May this one leave our cards?

C. O. H.

The one attending the reception may leave the cards of her sisters along with her own on the tray in the hostess' hall and thereby obviate the necessity of posting cards.

A Buffet Supper

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Is it proper at a buffet supper to have some of the edibles on the table as well as the buffet? I should like some information about this, please.

It is quite customary to have, besides the floral decorations on the table, baskets of cakes and sandwiches, trays of bonbons, platters of fruit and the rest of the edibles. On the buffet are placed napkins, forks, knives, cups and saucers, plates and glasses.

No Attendants

Dear Mrs. Adams,

I am to be married next month and when I give invitations for my wedding I am not going to have any attendants, but my father is going to walk up the aisle with me. Should he remain by my side during the entire ceremony?

GRACE.

Under such circumstances your father should remain beside you throughout the ceremony and hold your glove when the ring is put on your finger. The bouquet can be laid on the step until needed.

A BULGARIAN COLLAR

designed by Betty Lynne

The Design

IN LINE with the emphasis which fashion has placed on Bulgarian styles in dress comes the same note in accessories, and here is a collar to be worked on heavy or sheer linen, scrim or net with bright colors. It is particularly good with a plain linen frock or with a white voile blouse. The bright tones are oriental in contrast and can be as varied as you wish. They can also be worked in one tone if you prefer to carry out a color scheme of a dress.

Let us begin with darning cotton to pad the conventional forms. Use long stitches and finish a section of the design before beginning to sew in the easy over-and-over stitch. Use a soft untwilled thread, which fills in quickly, and decide on your color scheme before starting.

The blues, greens and reds—all in bright tones—are favored for this design. If you wish blue to predominate, make the red in the small crescents and shield at the corners and in the small ovals at the back. Blue in one or two shades can then be used for the rest of the design. A touch of gold or yellow can be given by outlining both the blue and red forms or by sprinkling French knots over the surface.

The whole design is effective in solid work, but an outlining with black and a filling in with colors is a clever idea which has been used by many embroiderers with much satisfaction. Be sure to get a black thread that will wash and then, to make assurance doubly sure, try it in soap and water.

Some effective collars have a relief of filet or lace placed as a backing for the design. In the motifs at the sides, between fronts and back, this can be done easily, for there is a continuous double outline around a crescent shape. This inner crescent can be filet and the double line can be worked solid in wallachian stitch or regular over-and-over stitch, the center being cut away afterward. The shield and oval in the center of the back can also be filled in with lace if you like this relief.

A contrast of bright colors is the effect that most decidedly carries out the Bulgarian idea. Gray with bright blue and red is good; pinks and blues, yellows in different shades with brown and gray, or pale green with vivid greens and blues make stunning combinations.

The scallops should be in one tone after padding with darning cotton. Buttonhole-stitching a second time will prevent fraying, and this is especially suggested for a collar that will visit the laundry frequently.

I suggested white at the beginning of my talk. This design is just as effective on colored linen or voile if you are making a dress which needs a collar of the same material. The fact that cuffs are not here shown need not deter you from attempting to trace parts of the design on patterns cut out. Be sure to have most of the design on the upper part of the cuff. Put just a few scrolls on the lower section.

You can make the collar and cuffs adjustable by sewing on a band of lawn one-half inch wide when doubled and stitched. In this way you can remove the collar when washing the blouse.

This design done in bright colors on black, gray or ecru net is beautiful. It needs no washing and gives fashionable and artistic contrast to any color beneath.

I hope that you have success with this design. Remember that although it is for a collar, there are many ways of using it. A circular yoke can be transferred to a bodice, with a continuation down the front made by adding a motif below the center strip. Bands can be applied down the shoulder line over each sleeve and a belt can be decorated with a part of the design made to resemble a buckle. With one little design, you see how much can be done if you will twist and turn a pattern to suit your needs. Good luck to you.

Jacobean Embroidery

THE needleworkers of the present are favoring the methods used to produce the exquisite antique embroideries, so we have those who are striving to reproduce the old tapestries; others who are equally interested in Richelieu or mosaic embroideries; and the latest addition to the list of revivals in needlecraft is the Jacobean embroidery.

There is nothing more interesting to the needleworker than to thoroughly study the needlecraft of the past. Gain a knowledge of the styles prevailing at different periods and master, as far as possible, the methods adopted by the embroiderers of other days. This does not mean that you need to cramp any originality you happen to possess. A fuller knowledge of ancient needlework tends to widen your variety of expression and gives a greater scope to your originality.

The name Jacobean is applied to the wool embroidery done in the Tudor days and also to the crewel work of the eighteenth century.

These characteristics distinguish it: On a plain background is embroidered conventional flower, fruit or animal designs, introducing an almost endless variety of stitches in outlining and filling.

Many brilliant colors are combined, the blues, greens, reds and blacks predominating, while yellow, purple and dull rose are next in favor.

Portieres and covers are bordered with this embroidery, while squares of the artistic work are used to cover stools and settees of the Jacobean period. When selecting the material for the background, choose a hand-woven linen of a mellow cream or parchment tone. If this is not procurable, purchase machine-made linen of a coarse texture. Tapestry wools or crewels are the materials required for the embroidery, and they come in many lovely shades. Rich indigo, powder blue, russet, green, brown, yellow, red, old rose and pale orange are frequently combined with successful results.

Some designs can be worked with just blues or in a combination of blues and greens.

The outline stitches are the stem, crewel or featherstitch, and those used for filling in are chainstitch, long-and-short stitch, satin stitch, double-back stitch and knot stitch.

You will find the crewel embroidery unusually fascinating, so make a study of it and then embroider some examples of Jacobean stitchery.

How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. The latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

For the Guestroom

THE housewife who is interested in her home and desires to have it homelike makes many articles to contribute beauty and comfort to her guestroom.

The bureau and dressing table should be well equipped with everything which the visitor may need. Do not provide covers for pincushion, glovebox or scarfs which cannot be freshly laundered after the departure of each guest. Silk or chiffon covers are lovely, but extremely impractical.

An attractive glove case can be made from a piece of white linen fourteen inches square.

Divide the side in three equal sections and fold the end down over to resemble the flap of an envelope. On this stamp a neat design and round the corners, scalloping the edge.

Whipstitch the two side sections together and hem the top side, using featherstitching to hold it in place. Embroider the scallops and design with white mercerized cotton or silk of a color to match the predominating tone used in the room.

Print the word "gloves" on the top flap and pad the letters with white darning cotton, with stitches running the length of the letters. Cover this with stitches at right angles with the padding.

Beneath the scallops whipstitch a frill of narrow valenciennes lace, and this completes the envelope of white linen to hold gloves.

To fashion one of these, take two circular pieces of white linen, one four and a half inches in diameter and the other six. Scallop the edges and finish with buttonhole stitches.

On the smaller circle stamp a simple design combining punched work and solid embroidery. One pretty design has a circular background done in punched work, with Venetian roses embroidered at intervals about the edge. A row of small eyelets is then embroidered a half inch from the scallops of the smaller circle and an inch and a half from the larger. The circular pincushion is placed between the circles, which are then laced together with baby ribbon. A large rosette of the narrow ribbon is then placed on the top of the cushion.

The bureau and dresser scarfs should be made of the same quality of linen, scalloped and buttonhole-stitched at the edges and adorned with an embroidered monogram, or a border corresponding in design with the glovecase and pincushion.

Always supply your guestroom with dainty handmade articles to add to the enjoyment of your guest's visit.

THE SUMMER PILLOW

The Outline Stitch Used

Punched Work and Satin Stitch

THE ambitious needlewoman always desires to have an artistic collection of washable covers for her pillows during the summer. The art needlework shops are displaying many new and attractive designs. The background used is either white or cream linen of a medium coarse weave, and most of the embroidery is done with colors of the paler tints.

One of the loveliest pillows displayed can easily be duplicated if you are familiar with punched work and the so-called satin stitch. The clusters and wreaths of tiny blossoms are done with tones of rose silk, shading from the palest pink to the deepest rose.

Do not pad the petals and run the stitches lengthwise. A large French knot is used to form the center of each flower. Use shades of green for the stems and foliage.

Punched work is used to form an effective background for the wreaths and clusters of flowers and the scroll-like frames are done in the long-and-short stitch with white silk thread.

After stitching the back and front of the cover together, border it with a narrow edging of cluny lace, whipstitching it to the linen.

Delft blue and white always is an effective combination, and a pretty pillow cover can be made on a background of cream linen by working the design with blue.

The pillow pictured here has a medallion center, formed of dots worked solidly with a deep shade of delft blue. Surrounding this are conventionally shaped flowers, and these should be embroidered with an outline stitch in tones of delft blue. Work the centers solid with a dark tone of blue. Framing the entire design is a row of dots, and these should be embroidered to match the center medallion. Finish the edge of the pillow with braid made of cream-colored twine. This can be purchased at the upholstery department of any store.

Particularly effective is the pillow embroidered to represent a cameo.

The head is embroidered with white silk in solid and outline stitch. Punched work is used for the background, against which the head appears in bold relief. Embroider the frame of flowers in tones of pink and the foliage in green. In each corner are motifs done with punched work and satin stitch. To the edge of the pillow whipstitch a border of cluny lace.

Here is a worthy quartet of summer pillows. Duplicate them for your home.

The Sleeveless Jackets

Drawings from Exclusive Paris Photographs by Les F. Wilson

By Josephine Jordan

The Sleeveless Jacket Is a Novelty of the Season Which Will Come Into Its Full Measure of Popularity as the Thermometer Starts Upward.

A NOTICEABLE feature of the new suits is the tendency to get away from the strictly tailored effect. This is got around by sleeveless jackets, quaint waistcoats, and other feminine touches. In other words, coats are cut in such odd manner, with skirts frequently draped, that the general appearance of a plain suit is almost entirely eliminated. There are, of course, some women who demand the strictly tailored garment, anad a number of suits of this character are shown. The proportion, however, is by no means so large as it has been in many other seasons.

In suit coats designers have a good opportunity to show their ingenuity in cutting the seams. There are many fancy-cut backs and odd seams starting from the front and slanting toward the back, as well as modified blouses. The shop windows are full of garments showing clever manipulations of the scissors.

Fascinating is the only term that can be applied to the new modes of the collarless corsages, and small wonder is it that every woman who is conscious of possessing the requisite graceful outline of throat is ordering one of these pretty arrangements.

An innovation of these low collars is the introduction of the waistcoat, which makes a charming finish to the corsage, and brings a note of contrasting color and fabric. It is this little vest, indeed, which threatens to become almost too popular, as it proves becoming to nearly every woman and affords scope for ideas of originality in treatment. One of the most successful of these new waistcoats offers a suggestion likely to be considered worthy of imitation.

The frock itself is of one of the new dahlia red shades carried out in ratine cloth, and the introduction of a waistcoat of straw colored crêpe de chine lightly veiled in ninon of a paler dahlia shade than the frock itself, and decorated with a row of carved wooden buttons, affords a pleasing note of variety.

The revers of the waistcoat are of satin that matches the tone of the crêpe de chine, and there is a narrow inner vest of tulle with tiny little pearl buttons that make a pleasing finish to a very noticeable gown.

Perhaps the charm of these little waistcoats lies in their diversity of form and shape. Another instance is a frock of silver gray satin charmeuse in which is introduced a waistcoat of night blue ninon de soie decorated with antique silver buttons.

Simplicity is the keynote of this frock with its rounded collarless corsage, but as usual it is the simplicity of genius that expresses itself in every line.

Buttons indeed play a very important part on these new waistcoats, and the decorative note is carried out in fastenings of jade, chrysoprase, and turquoise, a trio of colors that is sometimes found together in happy conjunction on one chemisette.

This is indeed the time to ransack old chests for treasure trove in the shape of buttons, and a very lovely piece of coloring was introduced on one of the new autumn velvet gowns by buttons which were really cairngorms in a glowing shade of deep copper red, rimmed for the purpose of old copper.

Without one of these waistcoats and revers the wardrobe will not really be complete. The revers are almost always pointed and two rows of stitching often accord a finish to the whole. The waistcoat is often carried out entirely in white with revers to match, and then the buttons will form the requisite note of contrasting color.

Very dainty are these chemisettes and revers fashioned entirely of tulle embroidered in white silk or silver thread, or of lace veiling crêpe de chine, for ethereal fabrics are as popular for the new waistcoats as more substantial materials, such as satin charmeuse, brocade or velvet.

Plaid or checked taffetas are often used for the flat collar and revers, with the waistcoat itself of plaited lisse or net. Buttons are also seen in plaid designs, though with the plaid taffeta waistcoats it is a prettier mode to use those of hand painted Dresden.

Individuality is the one thing to express in these new collarless corsages, and the woman who has ideas of her own can materialise them in a waistcoat which may seem to consist only of a little lace and tuckings, and embroidery and buttons, but which will be a work of art and will give a distinct cachet to her frock.

Bead embroidery is also used for the new waistcoats and is specially effective in conjunction with silk gowns. Sometimes the vest may be of white satin closely covered with arabesques and wheels of parti-colored beads, while the revers of satin will merely have the decoration of a wheel of beads at the points.

As may be imagined, this new note of introducing the chemisette or waistcoat is one that lends itself to an infinite variety of treatment and is certainly responsible for additional picturesqueness in the gowns that are just now making their appearance.

* *

In regard to skirts, great skill can also be shown, as the new draped forms require clever handling to make them practical. Some have solved the difficulty of making a draped skirt that will carry out the tailor made idea and yet be becoming to the average figure.

In addition to draped skirts many models having plaits introduced in the sides, back, or front are being offered.

In every instance the skirts are made to give the narrow effect around the bottom. Some, in fact, are made so narrow it is necessary to have them slashed.

Although the large majority of suit coats now on display average about 27 inches in length, designers are now working on shorter models. These very short coats are well. Despite the fact that the fashion authorities favor a three-quarter or seven-eighth length garment, there is still interest shown in the full-length coats, particularly in the popular-priced numbers.

The three-quarter cutaway coat with slight rounded or pointed corners, finished with a small collar and revers, is a favored style this season. In some instances the collar is of silk and the revers of t'e material. In others, both collar and revers are of silk, and, again, they are trimmed with silk, braid, or buttons. Pockets are often noted, and give a good finishing touch.

While the straight-cut back, giving the long straight line, is seen in many instances, manufacturers are now trying to get away from this style, and are cutting the back in two sections or introducing odd cut seams so as to give the garment an air of novelty. Belts and belt suggestions are also noted.

Strictly tailored styles, simulating a man's overcoat, are seen in some of the models. These coats are usually made of covert or a mannish mixture. A number of late models are made with a slight fullness above the waist, giving the effect of a Russian blouse.

Skirts continue to be one of the most important parts of the costume, as they are also one of the most complicated. A lot of the new models show more fullness about the waist, this being arranged in wide plaits or gathers, depending upon the material. At the bottom, however, they are close, and all are rounded up in some manner to enable one to walk properly.

Some fashion writers contend that already there is more width to be seen, and that the indications point to wider models, but so far this to me does not seem to be the case. For any especial client any dressmaker will make a skirt of any desired width, but the rank and file of fashionable women are still wearing the jupe serge, and seem to be satisfied with it. With many trained frocks there is somewhat more of fullness introduced into the skirt, but with these it is generally brought in about the hips, in the form of drapery or in some flat plaits which may appear at one side.

In tailor made frocks there are one or two extremes seen, the extremely severe or the dressy tailor costume, which is more seen this spring than for several seasons. With these last the skirts are frequently draped, or they show straight panier effects on the hips. Some also have plaitings, and one model seen lately had double skirts, both very narrow and both finished with full plaitings of the material, about three inches wide, put on directly on the bottom of each skirt.

The coats of these costumes too frequently have some fullness put into the garment at the short waist line, giving the upper part the effect of a bebe waist. Trimming is also freely used, such as cording, braiding, ruffles about the edge, and sometimes cords arranged in Russian style, a conspicuous fashion, but smart.

Although the military fastenings are not appropriate for late spring, the Turkish-Bulgarian war has exerted such an influence on styles that a number of models fastening over at the side with loops of braid and buttons are noted in the lines.

The assortment of materials was never so varied as it is this season. Ratine weaves stand out very prominently. The plain colors in navy, brown, tan, gray, and black, are exceptionally good. Striped ratines are being shown, but the brocades, which are the newest, are particularly desirable in the better grades of garments. Serges are by no means overlooked, and fancy worsteds, particularly black and white checks, are excellent. Plaids and Scotch mixtures are also being shown. Bedford cords and poplins are included in the spring line as well as coverts.

The basic lines of outer garments show little change as far as width is concerned. As present styles are well liked, and there is no immediate change in sight, petticoat manufacturers are adhering closely to the narrow measurement.

There is an unusual opportunity offered for the construction of especially attractive models, as the combination of colors and of materials, together with a variety of novel designs, tend to increase retail distribution.

For instance, the variety in colors tempts a woman to buy several petticoats to wear with her different dresses. All the principal millinery and trimming shades are utilized in the narrow, straight-gored models, which really fit the figure as closely as does the outer garment. With an unlimited leeway as to colors, petticoats are shown in bright shades of blue, green, purple, red, and yellow. To be sure, they are somewhat toned down by combination with more subdued fabrics in the flounces, but the bright colors are much used.

The woman with quiet tastes is bewildered by the colors that are offered her for her selection of gowns both for street and house wear for this season. Colors are brighter than ever, and such shades as Pompeian red, geranium red, a new shade called paprika (which is almost brick color), chartreuse (which has been revived), and several tones of yellow are among the most shown; and in addition there are some bright blues and one of two shades of purple, which are also bright. Of course there are always plenty of women who cling to black and dark blue and who can be dressed in the latest of the modes and still keep to their chosen colors, but it is safe to predict that the reign of bright shades will be a widespread one, for already there is every indication of it.

As for materials, never, never have there been so attractive. Everything is soft and supple, and even the taffetas and ribbed silks, which are generally among the least easy of the fabrics to drape, are this season more like crêpes and voiles. There are many new crêpe de chines, and there are some beautiful silk grenadines, both plain and bordered, that promise to be greatly used for afternoon frocks. Pompadour silks and striped silks also are fashionable, and come in a dazzling assortment of colorings. They make lovely gowns for afternoon teas and also for summer dinners when full dress is not required, and they will be much in demand for summer resort use, as they do not crush or fade. Cotton voiles, cotton crêpes, and tussors are also being shown, and although it is as yet too early for models in these materials they are to be among the favorites for the summer.

One of the prettiest tricks is to outline the girdle of an evening gown with chiffon roses front and back and repeat the roses elsewhere on bodice and drapery.

Artificial flowers are as much used as ever for dress ornaments and are prettier every day. Violets, especially, are perfect.

Cretonne comes in such charming designs this season that it looks as though it would at last be in favor as a dress material.

A charming restaurant frock is of black and white striped chiffon with a huge pink chrysanthemum tucked into the black girdle.

The Greek draperies introduced through the winter are so charming that nobody will relinquish them at any rate for evening wear.

* *

All clothes, whether tailor made or soft gowns, must positively look limp and clinging; anything in the least firm or stiff looking is taboo.

Pretty half season tailored suits are of white Ottoman silk or silk serge. Even bright reds, greens, and blues are used for these suits.

The handiest and most compact vanity bag is made of Dresden ribbon fitted with three pockets to hold mirror, powder puff, and smelling salts.

Dainty toilet sets recently shown are of imitation ivory, hand painted and hand engraved, in wisteria and poppy designs. Others are of coronation purple inlaid with gold.

A charming sleeve is loose and flowing to below the elbow, then it is drawn together and buttoned over the back of the arm, its bright lining showing in a most artistic way.

Russian blouse and panier costume in dark blue crepe. The blouse is buttoned diagonally across the front, sashed broadly, and draped to simulate a flat panier.

BEHIND THE SCENES.

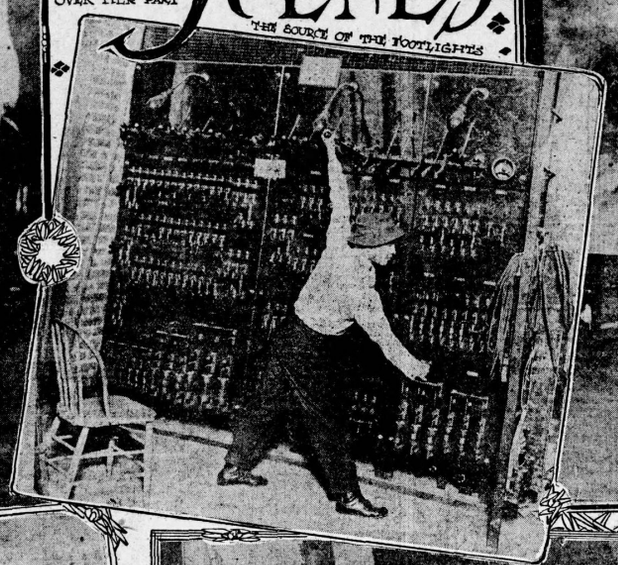
MISS BILLY LONG GOING OVER HER PART



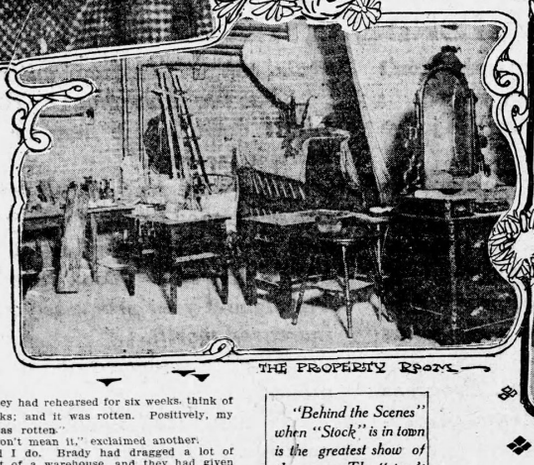
THE SOURCE OF THE FOOTLIGHTS

A THEATRICAL STORM IN THE MAKING

EDWIN DAILY, STAGE DIRECTOR

THE COMPANY LEARNING THEIR PARTS

BUILDING SCENERY



THE PROPERTY ROOM

"NOW," said the stage director, who is also the leading man, "you drop the satchel and I kiss you. Then, you mumble your lines; but you don't chew them. You want the audience to get you, see?

"Now try that kiss over. You're not saying good-bye to the lady who won the bridge prize you wanted. That's better.

"Now you get a whiskey decanter to go here," turning to the "prop" man, "and a sofa there, and don't forget to put wine glasses with that decanter. This isn't a Dutch picinc.

"Now this is where I say 'I love you'" pointing his cigar at the leading lady, "and you say, 'O Henry!' but don't say it that way. You might be asking for a glass of water."

The stage director rearranged the two chairs and the table, which were the scenic setting back of the stage, and the next act began.

This is how a stock company prepares for the plays it gives in weekly succession.

THE ORDERLY STARS.

Behind the scenes when the big "stars" are playing at the Atlanta theater, is a very orderly, precise and uninteresting place.

Stage hands snatch away scenery, hurry up new settings, actors stalk on and off in a spirit of confidence and superb art.

But when stock is being played, the company is learning its lines in one corner of the stage, the carpenters are building the setting for that "big scene in the third act," over in another, and the "prop" man, between his lines is looking for those wine glasses that the director insists upon.

The "prop," like the director, is also an actor. He finds the glasses with one hand, his cue with the other, and as he waves the glasses aloft, keeps his eyes glued to his lines and speaks a noble sentiment.

The director, with a cigar in one corner of his mouth, and his sleeves rolled up, walks back and forth before the "dead" footlights and declaims a fine passage to a theater as dark as Egypt.

A spot to the front of the stage has been marked off for histrionic purposes, and the rest is reserved for carpentering. Members of Miss Billy Long's company, which has begun a season here in stock, sit round in a semi-circle, and the two chairs and the table are placed before them. The stage itself is light enough, but the theater out across the dead footlights is unbroken gloom.

BETWEEN SHOWS.

Nothing is so lifeless as the pit of a theater between shows. It reacts from an extreme of light and vivacity to the most moody and downcast spot in the universe.

But this applies to out-front, and not to the stage. When stock is being played, the stage itself is a place as active and disturbed as a household during spring cleaning.

The company gathers on Tuesday and hears its parts read; rehearses on Wednesday; memorizes on Thursday; makes a critical analysis of its parts on Friday; perfects all details on Saturday; and gives a play on Monday afternoon that it had never seen or heard until the reading on Tuesday.

This marvel is repeated week after week throughout the "stock" engagement. The company meets each morning at 9:30 o'clock; each afternoon when there is no matinee, studies its parts between acts in the evening, dreams its humorous lines, has them for breakfast and rehearses them the next day.

It is a problem how a stock company disposes of its spare time.

But, as a member of the company was saying at a morning rehearsal, stock is the best of all training for an artist.

THAT NEW YORK OPENING.

"And you know," said another who is most frequently cast as heroine, "some of the best things you see are in stock. Before I left New York I went to the opening of one of Brady's shows. They had rehearsed for six weeks, think of it, six weeks; and it was rotten. Positively, my dear, it was rotten."

"You don't mean it," exclaimed another.

"Indeed I do. Brady had dragged a lot of scenery out of a warehouse, and they had given the leading man—the handsomest man on the stage, my dear—a part where he had to wear earrings. Oh, it was awful. I don't see how the public can stand—"

"Say," said the director, taking his cigar from between his teeth for the first time since the rehearsal began, "this is your cue."

And the criticism of the New York opening ended in a histrionic kiss between hero and heroine in front of the two chairs and the table, which were supposed to represent flower gardens, birds singing, and the aromas of spring filling the air.

Back of the scenes when stock is in town is better than reating Helen Green's short stories of the stage.

A QUESTION IN MARVELS.

It is a question which are the most marvelous, carpenters or actors. The first can build a Venetian palace or an Arizona desert in a space of half an hour; and the latter can read a play on Tuesday and almost be ready to present it on the day afterward.

Until the opening on Monday afternoon, the scenery has never once been put into place, and the actors have as vague an impression as you yourself of how the ballroom or the old farm are to look when they step out to speak their lines.

During rehearsals the scenery has been confined to the two chairs and the table, the footlights have been dead, the theater has been a space of gloom.

Now, they have other chairs to knock against, rugs to stumble over, footlights to blind them, and an audience to make much of little mistakes. And, yet, they put feeling and expression into lines that they heard read for the first time less than a week ago.

By comparison, the New York production was a failure.

All the big actors have played in stock, and thank this experience for their success. Not a few have even known the trials of repertoire. In repertoire you give a new play each night, in stock a new one each week.

As Miss Billy Long said:

"When I see anyone who's played in stock and repertoire, I know that he or she is the goods. It takes pluck to succeeed in the profession, and when you've been in stock and repertoire I know you have the pluck and also the experience.

"Stock is a great training. The stars have come from stock, and there are stars in stock."

In fact, they are all stars. Whoever learns a new play each week, with the carpenters bulding scenery in one corner, and the "prop" searching about for wine glasses in another, needs to defer in nowise to Mrs. Fiske, James K. Hackett, or any other exponents of the drama.

But back of the scenes is more interesting even than the Monday afternoon opening. Homer George, manager of the Atlanta theater, says himself that it is the best play he has ever seen during all his connection with Klaw & Erlanger.

"Behind the Scenes" when "Stock" is in town is the greatest show of the season. The "stars" at their best are never so good as the actors in "stock" learning their lines "back stage."

While the carpenters built a Venetian palace or an Arizona desert in one corner of the stage, the leading man and the leading lady, the ingenue, the character actors, and the others learn their parts in another.

AT THE THEATRES

"Are You a Mason?" Screaming Farce, at Atlanta, Presented by Billy Long Stock Company – Miss Harrison Plays Prominent Part and Several New Members Have Been Engaged to Fill Out Cast

There promises to be a riot of laughter at the Atlanta theater the coming week, for the Miss Billy Long company will be seen in that extremely funny farce, "Are You a Mason?" Although this farce was first presented some dozen years ago, yet it never grows old. In fact, it has grown so popular as a stock bill in the last two or three seasons that the royalty has been raised until the farce is one of the most expensive available.

It is the purpose of the management of the Miss Billy Long company to give the theater patrons a variety of bills. Farce, comedy and drama will each have its turn.

A BIG LAUGH.

"Are You a Mason?" was written for laughing purposes only. It was adapted from the German by Leo Ditrichstein, who played one of the roles in the original cast. Frank Perry, a young married man, has promised his wife and his mother-in-law that he will become a Mason. His mother-in-law declares the lodge is the only safe place for a married man, and is proud of the fact that her husband has been a Mason for twenty years.

Perry has promised to join the Masons while his family is away on a vacation. Not having done so, he is in a quandary. George Fisher, a friend, suggests that Perry pretend he is a Mason, and this strikes the latter as a great idea. The unexpected arrival of Amos Bloodgood, his father-in-law, complicates matters. For twenty years Bloodgood has been pretending to be a Mason in order to get away from home and play a little game of poker. He thinks his son-in-law is a genuine Mason, and his son-in-law thinks the same of him. Naturally, complications follow in rapid succession. The situation is further strained by the arrival of Ernest Morrison, who is a real Mason, and who is in love with one of Bloodgood's daughters.

FASTER AND MORE FURIOUS.

Bloodgood finally learns of his son-in-law's deception and declares he will cancel his promise of a loan of $20,000. In order to make Bloodgood come to terms, Fisher again promises to help Perry, this time by dressing as a young woman and pretending to be the daughter of Angelina, a sweetheart of Bloodgood's before he was married. With Fisher dressed as a girl, the fun grows fast and furious, and it takes the entire last act to straighten out the difficulties.

The company has been strengthened, for the play requires a large cast. William Triplett, an actor with wide experience, has been engaged for character parts and will play the role of Amos Bloodgood, created in the original company by Thomas A. Wise. Miss Billy Long will play the part of Mrs. Perry, the young wife, and Edwin Hall will be cast as the young husband. The role of George Fisher, who disguises himself as a girl, will be played by Bert Gardner, and Allan Robinson will be cast as Ernest Morrison, the only real Mason.

MISS HARRISON IN CASTE.

The many friends of Miss Agnes Tinsley Harrison will be pleased to find her in the cast again this week playing the role of one of Amos Bloodgood's daughters.

Good parts also fall to Ralph Marthy, Al Warren, Joseph Kirkham, Kathryn Sheldon, Mabel Inslee, Lillian Triplett and Helen Predwin.

Matinees will be held this week on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, the matinees having proved so popular that the management decided to open with one on Monday.

BILLY LONG AND ALLAN ROBINSON AT THE ATLANTA

THE APOLLO TRIO AT THE FORSYTH

A decided novelty will be offered as the headliner for next week's vaudeville bill at the Bijou. This will be the Four Wilhat Troupe, composed of four people and a dog. It is styled a trick bicycle and auto act, and, from the reports that have reached Atlanta regarding the Wilhats, there is every reason to anticipate one of the most pleasing headliners that has been booked for the Bijou in some time.

The program will also feature Misses Bartelles and Lucas, a pleasing sister act with costume changes, singing and dancing; Will K. Meyers, a tramp comedian, who will have a new bunch of funny sayings to uncork, and Klein and Yost, those tuneful entertainers, in ragtime. Few bills that have been announced at the Bijou of late promise so diversified and pleasing a show, and a splendid entertainment will doubtless result.

In addition to the vaudeville, specially selected motion pictures, including thrilling dramas, side-splitting comedies and foreign scenes, will make the pictures introduced to open and close each performance interesting features of the program. Matinees are given daily at 3 o'clock, except on Monday and Saturday, when two matinees are given, at 2:30 and 4. Night shows, 7:30 and 9.

The New Drama

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 10.—Mr. Gerald Du Maurier had some amusing things to say of the stage today at the annual dinner of the Playgoers' club, held at the Hotel Cecil.

After all, he went on to say, it was the playgoer who created the fashions in drama. If the state of the playgoer were healthy, then surely must the drama be healthy, too. He was continually hearing and reading of the new movement in drama, but, personally, he had been unable to detect it unless it was ragtime. But that was not new. It was merely a good melody marred, or a poor one galvanized into life. The one-step was supposed to be a new movement in dancing, and the success of it need not be learnt. Anybody could do it; in fact, it was the first thing a baby did when it could walk by itself.

All these new dances, such as the bunny hug and the turkey trot, were only forms of the oldest dances in the world—St. Vitus dance. As regarded the drama—the successful drama, that was to say—he could not see that it was changed much since the days of Shakespeare. A good deal of fuss was made nowadays about producing, but it was very difficult to spoil a good play or make a bad one. If a stone were good, what matter the setting? The greatest service the producer could do the author was to let the play play itself—that was to say, if the author knew his job. As a manager, he believed in the play that was commercially successful.

Legion of the Lost

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 10.—"Funny," says Hodge, "all them smart police in London and can't trace a well known man who's been missing nearly a fortnight. An' a millionaire, too. It's wot I've always said. London's shamefully overrated. They think they're smart, but when they're put to the test they're no better'n we are in the country."

Poor old Hodge! It will be news to him and many others that on the day that Mr. Joseph Wilberforce Martin disappeared in London somewhere about fifty persons vanished also. A similar number were lost the day before, and a similar number the day after. But nothing appeared in the papers about them. London is great in everything, even in the number of its lost. The capital does not shout and boast about its mysteries, else we should be more awed than ever at its immensity. It is only when something dramatic happens, such as the vanishing of a wealthy man, that we are reminded of the grim fact that somewhere about 20,000 people disappear every twelve months within the area looked after by Scotland Yard.

Fanning a Spark

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS, May 10.—Into the electrical atmosphere of Europe a spark has fallen. An incident in itself small, has been magnified to such a degree, that it actually became conceivable that a breach in the relations between France and Germany might result from it.

Fortunately, responsible statesmen in both countries have kept their heads, and there is every reason to hope that the affair will terminate without trouble, after the report of the French official inquiry, voluntarily undertaken.

At the French frontier town of Nancy, five Germans (three men and two women) who were among the audience at a casino, were hissed by students, and afterwards followed to a cafe, and thence to the station, where the demonstration was renewed.

The German accounts go much farther than this, and one even declares that the victims of the demonstration were forced to kneel and salute French officers, though this appears to be an embroidery to the story. The French papers say that the affair has been grossly exaggerated, and that there has only been an ebullition of feeling on the part of some students, which, though regrettable, has no serious significance, and it is pointed out that hundreds of thousands of Germans are constantly visiting France, and are never molested or treated discourteously. The hubbub has been raised, in all probability, entirely for German consumption, and to sugar-coat and make more palatable the milliard war levy bill. The entire business is, indeed, an up-to-date illustration of the great political art of making a mountain out of a mole hill.

City Under the Sea

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

ATHENS, May 10.—The minister of Marine states that Lieutenant Bakopulos, while carrying out observations, noted on the sea bottom to the east of the island of Lemnos, on the reefs marked on the British admiralty charts under the name of the Pharos bank, at a depth of fifteen to seventy-five feet, some ancient ruins which were perfectly visible.

The ruins are said to prove the existence of a town about three miles in circumference. Orders have been issued by the ministry to carry out scientific researches on the spot.

Pausanias, the Greek traveler and geographer, who lived in the second century, A. D., records that a small island called Chryse, off the cost of Lemnos, was swallowed up by the sea. There are extint vocanoes on Lemnos.

Paul Dickey, Famous Wolverine Football Star, Headlines Week's Bill at Forsyth, Other Good Acts Booked, Including Apollo Trio and Billy Wells, Hebrew Character Artist—Good Bill at Bijou

Paul Dickey, the famous football star of the University of Michigan, who has been one of vaudeville's most prominent headliners for the past three seasons, will top-line the bill of Keith features that come to the Forsyth for a week commencing with matinee on Monday afternoon. The regular schedule of performances will continue including, of course, the popular daily bargain matinees.

Since the return of vaudeville to the Forsyth, there has been a decided revival of real interest in this style of entertainment. The theater has been crowded to its limit of capacity of seating at all performances, and in several instances the management has had to stop the sale of standing room. The popularity of the theater itself has much to do with the conditions, but it has appeared that the vaudeville features appearing in the perfect playhouse seem to have given more complete satisfaction than any vaudeville offerings of the season.

"THE COME BACK."

Paul Dickey, who headlines the new bill, is coming direct from New York with his company of five selected players to present "The Come Back," a comedy playlet that deals entirely with things about college life, and of course something about the athletic part.

Dickey was a famous player for Michigan. He was exploited by all the football writers and was placed on tennis by some of the experts who picked all-star elevens. At college he was also a leading track athlete, and in the class meeting was always "the life of the crowd." He was a member of the Glee club and also played in the comedy club. It was after leaving college that he took up the theatrical profession, going into vaudeville in a headline position, and he has held that honor ever since.

Newhoff and Phelps will be on this bill, and their appearance means a hearty quantity of comedy of the sort that local theatergoers like the best. Newhoff is a comedian of a peculiar ability and he never failed to win the admiration of an audience because of originality. He is assisted by a remarkably clever girl who is as pretty as she is entertaining and the act will be one of the cards of the week.

BILLY WELLS' STARS.

Billy K. Wells, one of vaudeville's most unique character comedians, will be another star of the week. His Hebrew character impersonation is true to the type found in the larger cities. There is nothing of the burlesque, but a careful study of the bright mind that has created so much general happiness in things theatrical.

The Apollo Trio, a group of wonderful Italians, will present one of the most remarkable acts that has been seen on a local stage. They will be made up in bronze entirely. They will reproduce famous statues from all over the world, and if the act is as great as it is said to be, all Atlanta will make an effort to crowd the Forsyth.

Clarence Wilbur and the Sunny Folks will be a popular act for the matinee gatherings. This is a company of eight people who will do a school room scene that is comical. There are pretty girls and clever boys in the organization, and all have won favor. Mayo and Allmas, clever men who sing real songs, and Macleavy's marvel, a champion jumper, make up the program.

For next week the headliner will be Gillette's Adam and Eve, the most wonderful trained monkeys on exhibition.

Evolution of Georgia Normal and Industrial College at Milledgeville Tells Story of First Class of Eighteen Students That Has Now Reached Such Proportions Until Six Hundred Georgia Girls Were Last Year Denied Admission at Institution on Account of Limited Capacity of Buildings. It Is Here That Home Life and Domestic Arts Are Taught and Diplomas Insure Capability of Future Teachers and Housewives

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., May 10.—Evolution in all its achievements has no recorded instance in which greater progress has been made than that which is shown in the marvelous development of the Georgia Normal and Industrial college at Milledgeville. Situated in the geographical center of the state, occupying the site on which the forbidding walls of the old state penitentiary once stood, the change is one illimitable in its scope and indescribable in its grandeur.

ONLY 20 YEARS OLD.

With only twenty-two years of existence the institution has gone steadily forward until it now ranks among the greatest educational institutions in the country. Especially has the progress been notable during the past seven years.

In 1906 the number of graduates was eighteen. It was at that time President M. M. Parks, now occupying the same chair, entered upon the duties of president. The graduating class has grown steadily, not going backward for one single year, and in 1913 the class numbers one hundred and twenty-five—the largest graduating class ever turned out from any institution in Georgia.

There is a secret back of the wonderful growth of the college. Its management is such as to inspire confidence and popularity and its friends are found throughout the state. There is but one deplorable feature about the Georgia Normal and Industrial college and that is the inability to accommodate all the students applying for admission.

Last year over six hundred Georgia girls were denied admission because of lack of room in the dormitories and the class rooms, especially in the dormitories. Pleading letters come from every county, girls asking for the chance to make good, but it is beyond the powers of the president and his board of trustees to admit more than now fill the institution to overflowing. Only the Georgia legislature can supply means for overcoming this deficiency by appropriating money for another dormitory this year. The state owns an excellent site for this much needed building without encroaching on the beautiful college campus.

CLOSE TO LIFE WORK.

The great plan of education followed by the college is one of wonderful scope. The idea of vocational education is closely followed. The college was a pioneer in introducing this close-to-life work and getting back to nature has been a theme which has been practiced and preached incessantly. Its effects have been marked and throughout the state the new ideas and new thoughts have been spread inculcating into the minds and hearts of the people of hundreds of communities a higher ideal, a notion of nobler nature. Other schools and colleges have followed the course and the movement into the channel has been so great as to inicate a into the channel has been so great as to indicate a Home economics is one of the great essentials stressed at the college. Domestic science and domstic arts occupy much attention and a visit to these departments will convince the most skeptical of the splendid accomplishments made by the young ladies taking this course. In 1906 the first graduate from this department of the college received her diploma alone, but the progress has been continuous, and out of the class of 125 members this year, 37 will obtain diplomas in domestic science as well as in the college courses. The demand for teachers in this work is great, and 26 of the graduates in this department now hold responsible positions with large schools of the south.

POULTRY AND GARDENING.

Another feature of the curriculum of the college is the attention given to agriculture, floriculture, horticulture and poultry curture. Many of the young lady students engage in this class of study and the expert testimony of authorities who have visited the institution show the college to be one of the foremost factors in educational work of this class in the south. Special attention is directed to poultry work and gardening and evidence of development is noticeable on every side. Success is invariably obtained and a corps of ten ladies is kept busy dispensing information and knowledge to the young ladies engaged in the study of domestic science and arts, including the four last named studies.

PARKS TELLS OF SCHOOL.

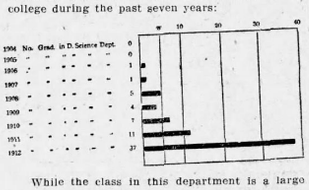
"The Georgia Normal and Industrial college," says President M. M. Parks in his annual report, "is strictly a woman's college. It does not seek to imitate educational practices that have prevailed in colleges for men. In its fixed requirements the college has deliberately broken away from what it considers many of the false fashions of the past. It believes that women have interests and ambitions and spheres of usefulness peculiarly their own; it believes there are fields of work for women which call for new courses of study and that all the sciences and arts should be made to contribute to the improvement of the home, the school, the farm, the child and society in general."

The mere fact that the college is forced to turn away as many applicants as it can admit makes a startling statement within itself. In the past six years 3,000 students have been turned away. The college is now at a standstill because of lack of room, so far as numbers is concerned, and progress in this direction now hinges upon the state's provison of adequate facilities to permit the admission of more students who desire this kind of work and training.

The Georgia Normal and Industrial college offers three distinct courses of study: Collegiate, normal and industrial. Students may choose work in any one of these departments, but during recent years the tendency has been toward the normal and industrial departments, and President Parks has given his enthusiastic support and influence toward the development in this direction, getting the student close to life and back to nature whenever possible, emphasizing the importance of domestic science, domestic arts, manual arts, drawing, normal work, singing, physical training, biology, agriculture, floriculture and poultry culture.

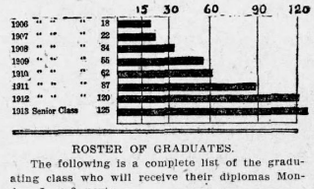
HOME SCIENCES AND ART.

The college was the first to give recognition to the home sciences and arts, but these subjects are now becoming popular with many of the leading schools of the country, and it is with pride that the Georgia Normal and Industrial college can be classed as pioneer in this great movement for the advancement of civilization. The following table shows the progress made in this direction at the college during the past seven years:



While the class in this department is a large one, it embraces less than one-third the membership of the entire graduating class.

The growth of the Georgia Normal and Industrial college during the last seven years is aptly illustrated by the followng table, showing the number of graduates:



ROSTER OF GRADUATES.

Bishop Warren A. Candler will preach the commencement sermon Sunday, June 1, and the delivery of the diplomas will be made the following Monday. Tuesday the students will leave for home, after one of the most successful and satisfactory terms in the history of the institution.

But this will not end the college story. For months applications have been pouring in for next season and the president and the office force will be kept busy from now until September trying to ferret out methods and means whereby the largest number of applicants possible can be admitted. In the meantime the legislature will meet and possibly something will be done to help overcome some of the obstacles in the way of progress in time for enlargement of the college, certainly by the beginning of the 1914 term, for it is impossible for any building to be completed now in time for the fall term of this year. In the time intervening, however, hundreds of Georgia girls will be barred from the door of hope and kept away from the land of opportunity, and the whole state will suffer, eventually, for these graduates go out in the highways and by-ways and help with the progress of the commonwealth in more ways than can be recounted here.

JOURNAL'S BIBLE CONTEST WILL BEGIN IN TWO WEEKS

THE Bible contest of The Journal will begin in two weeks. This revival in Bible study is being welcomed by all the churches. The prizes that are offered are intrinsically valuable, and the diploma given to all who complete the course will confer a great honor upon them; but the greatest price of all is the study itself; no words can overstate its value. All teachers of boys and girls fifteen years and over, should urge them to take up this course. Adult and intermediate Bible class teachers will find this contest to be a great stimulus to their work if they personally get behind it and set the example.

There is no entrance fee, and no expense whatever. All you need is The Journal and your Bible.

The questions for Sunday follow:

MAY 11, 1913.

(Copyright, 1912, by Rev. T. T. Lindscott, D. D.)

Joseph Made Ruler of Egypt. Gen. xl:45.

Golden Text—God giveth grace to the humble. I Pet. v:5.

(1.) Verses 1-7—What river is probably here referred to?

(2.) What relation did this river have, and have today, upon the fertility of Egypt?

(3.) What animals are meant by the word "kine?"

(4.) Verse 8—If Pharaoh had been a man of God would his spirit have been troubled by a dream or by any other experience? Why?

(5.) Is care, evil foreboding or any kind of anxiety consistent with absolute faith in God? Give your reasons.

(6) Verses 9-13—What part has this chief butler previously taken in this history, and how would you estimate his character?

(7.) What sort of man is he who forgets the one from whom he has received vital benefits?

(8.) Verse 14—What part does a good personal appearance play in helping men and women get the positions they are seeking and in keeping them afterward?

(9.) Verses 15-16—Would it be well or ill for us, and why, if we could get the interpretation of all our dreams?

(10.) To whom are we indebted both for our ability and our opportunities?

(11.) Take great men as statesmen, poets, musicians, philosophers, orators, prophets and others, and state how much of their ability and opportunity came from God and how much is due to themselves.

(12.) Verses 17-32—How do you reconcile, with the general goodness of God the facts that bad crops, famine, tornadoes, earthquakes and other calamities frequently visit the earth?

(13.) God generally finds some amelioration for every calamity. Would you therefore say, and why, that Joseph was raised up by God to prepare for the coming seven years of famine?

(14.) How much merit was due to Joseph for being able to interpret this dream? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(15.) Verses 33-36—Is it the duty of every normal man to save money or make provision for the time when he may not be able to earn any? Why?

(16.) Should every man who has a wife or family depending on him insure his life for as much as his income will allow him to carry? Why or why not?

(17.) Would you say that Joseph's advice to Phadraoh was divinely in*spired, or simply the advice of a level*-headed man? Why?

(18.) Verses 37-45—Would you say that the spirit of God dwelt in Joseph all the time? Why?

(19.) Was Joseph conscious that it was God who showed him all these things, and may every godly man have a similar consciousness?

(20.) Did the plan to make Joseph ruler of Egypt originate with Pharaoh or with God? Why?

Rev. Charles K. Weller, Rector of Episcopal Church of College Park, Will Leave for New York June 1

Rev. Charles Knight Weller, of the Episcopal church of College Park, who will on June 1 take up his duties as rector of the Church of St. Michaels and All Angels, at Anniston, Ala., has had one of the most interesting careers in the south. He has seen the College Park church grow into one of the strongest organizations in the state. The new work at Anniston is one of the most important of the denomination.

He is a grandson of the late Rev. George Weller, D.D., first rector of Christ church, of Vicksburg, Miss., and a son of the late Rev. R. H. Weller, D.D., for thirty years rector of St. John's church, Jacksonville, Fla. He is a brother of Right Rev. R. H. Weller, D.D., bishop of Fond Du Lac, Wis.

He moved from Florida, where he was interested in church work as lay reader in several missions, to College Park in August, 1906, and was instrumental in organizing the mission of St. John's Episcopal church in that suburb September 1, 1906, with six members.

The cornerstone of the present handsome stone church was laid October 14, 1906, and the first service held December 16, of the same year, in the uncompleted building.

He was ordained as a deacon by Bishop Nelson in St. Phillip's Cathedral, Atlanta, June 30, 1909, and ordained a priest April 2, 1912, in St. John's church by Bishop Nelson, assisted by Bishop Weller, of Wisconsin.

He has been secretary of the diocese of Atlanta for the past three years. He was secretary of the Civic league of College Park during the campaign for waterworks, lights and sewer bonds. He was secretary and treasurer of the Southern Ruralist company from April 1, 1908, and has resigned to take effect June 1.

St. Michael's and All Angels' church to which Mr. Weller goes is one of the largest Episcopal churches in the south. the property, including church, Sunday school, parish house and rectory, situated in a park of about ten acres, being valued at over $200,000.

Mr. Weller has been an active member of College Park lodge, No. 454, of Masons.

A Reminder to Be Good

The "Bon box" was another device Aloetta had for remembering to be good. Inside the front door of their house stood a box which served as the symbol of an honor system, for into it at the end of each day the child who had been good and hadn't disregarded a single rule of conduct dropped a little slip bearing her name and the words "Bon" with three crosses after it, like this: X X X. If was such a distinction to be a depositor at the end of the day, that I asked whether I might be allowed to work for it, too. I do not remember how often my name went into that box attached to a bon slip, but I do know that I used to examine my stock of virtues very carefully in those days
